The Piece of the Duel. Mrs. Minnie Walter Myers, in her Romance and Realism of the Southone of the last challenges to a duel which occurred in Louisiana. The affair was between M. Marigny, who belonged to one of the oldest families of Louisiana, and a Mr. Humble, a sturdy ex-blacksmith of Georgia, who had become a man of political consequence.

M. Marigny took offense at some reparks of the Georgian and sent him a hallenge. The big ex-blacksmith was "I know nothing about this dueling

THE FIELD FRATERNITY.

When God's dear justice is revealed— The kingdom that the Father planned-lits children all will equal stand As flowers in the field.

Each yeoman of the flowery race; Each has a foothold on the earth, A place for business and for mirth

No privilege bars a flower's access earth's whole store of preciousness e flowers stand level on God's floor ith equal nearness to his store.

But stand together as close friends; They send their beauty on all things, An equal gift to clowns and kings.

They worry not; there is enough Laid by for them of God's good stuff— Enough for all, and so no fear Sends boding on their blameless cheer. This noble blessedness can be In kingdoms of equality. So from the field comes curious news, That each one takes what it can use Takes what its lifted cup can hold Of skyey rain and beamy gold, And all give back, with pleasure high, Their riches to the sun and sky.

"It has a heroine, yes." Alyn's eyes were so frank as they met mine. His gaze had not been so direct nor his face so clear the last time I had seen him. A year's absence from his old associate had certainly been good for him. It was a pleasure to look at him.

Just now his expression puzzled me. I could not fathom it, but it invited

ly." Still his expression puzzled me. An inscrutable smile played over his face, but he delayed beginning the story he had volunteered to tell. "And she?" I hesitated over the inquiry remembering what manner of year ago. A gentle expression passed over Alyn's face. "I think she is fond of me," he replied simply. I stretched out my hand and Alyn grasped it warmly.

"I do believe," he said earnestly.

"that if ever a man was fortunate that man is I. Will you care to listen? I used to tell you things when I was a boy," he added apologetically.

I picked up my sewing, always lying ready against such times as this, and leaned back in my rocker. Alyn reached for the picture.

leaned his head on one hand and his elbow on the table. In the other hand he held the case where his eyes could rest on the face. His own face became grave.

"It was a year ago. One night-or morning, rather-I landed on the ferry on the way to my lodgings. I couldn't get a street car or a cab. In fact, I was too drunk to think of either, so I stumbled along just keeping straight enough to escape the police. In front of my lodgings is an electric light. A slight fall of snow had whitened the pavement and made distinct this case beneath the light. I had just strength and sense enough left to pick it up, tumble up the stairs and stretch myself out on my couch." Alyn snapped the case shut and paused a moment.

"Some time the next day I awoke and the first thing that attracted my attention was this-open on the floor and her eyes looking up at me-me in that condition."

An expression of disgust good to see came over the man's face. "I quickly shut the case and put myself and my room in order. Then I sat down and studied her." Still absorbed in his narrative, Alya opened the case again and dropped his eyes on the photograph. "I told you this was a peculiar case, and you will think, I fear, that I am a peculiar man. But the more I looked the Cascade mountains. According to at her the more I wanted to look. I never parted with the miniature. I carried it around in my pocket and thought and thought about her until while the upper parts of the trunks she became a living presence to me, a beautiful woman always with me. meet her. "I didn't advertise. I did something far more irrational. I spent my spare hours searching. I visited stores and wi ked the streets. I haunted the resi-Lince part of the city. I went to the opera and scanned the boxes rather than the stage. Needless to say, I did not find her; yet I never lost hope. I felt I must find her and look at her. I felt this afresh every time I opened this case. I would not give up the search. When I had exhausted every resource of my own, I did something which I had shrunk from doing before; I haunted out the best detective in the city and told him to spare neither time nor money in finding her.

"Within two weeks I received a note from him. He was obliged to leave the town suddenly. He wrote something like this:

"'I've found her at 320 Water avenue. Imogene Munroe. Will give you particulars when I return tomorrow. She is anxious to recover the miniature.'

"But I could not await the next day, and saw no reason wby it would be necessary. I had the photograph and would take it to her. Because of it I should insure myself a reception at

"I went to 320 Water avenue that evening. It is an elegant residence in perfect keeping with the case and face. I had scribbled on my card, 'The finder of the miniature.' The maid who admitted me said that Miss Munroe was at home. She took the card and left me in the reception room. It was one of the most-what shall I call it?-delicious rooms I was ever in. One side was lined with deep windows draped in soft, dainty curtains and filled with plants and flowers. The air was heavy with the scent of roses. "I stood before one of the windows looking at the blossoms when she came. She came so quietly and gently that I did not hear her. It was only when the sweetest, lowest, clearest voice I had ever heard said, 'At last I am to have my miniature, that I knew she was in the room. I confess I trembled as I turned and took the hand Alyn stopped and smiled. It was a half sad, half amused, wholly in-scrutable smile. My sewing had fallen into my lap, and I leaned forward listening breathlessly.

How is it that Englishmen are not the best linguists in Europe? Simply and solely because of the general and absurd "deaf and dumb" method of studying foreign languages. Foreigners learning English know better than to waste years over books; they simply "chatter" and learn one word and expression after another, and become familiar with them by constant repetition, with the result that in a few months they can speak and write our language sufficiently well for all practical purposes .- London Mail.

I have used Sipans Tabules with so much satisfaction that I can cheerfully recommend them. Have been troubled for about three years with wast I called billous attacks coming on regularly ence a week. Was told by different physicians that it was caused by bud teeth, of which I had several. I had the teeth extracted, but the attacks continued. I had seen advertisements of Ripans Tabules in all the papers but had no faith in them, but about six weeks since a friend induced me to try them. Have taken but two of the small 5 cent boxes of the Tabules and have had no recurrence of the attacks. Have never given a testimonial for anything before, but the great amount of good which I believe has been done me by Ripans Tabules induces me to add mine to the many testimonials you doubtless have in your possession now.
