Negro Superstition.

Many of the negro superstitions in Kentucky are quite interesting. An old philosopher told me with great gravity: "If you want peppahs to grow, you must git mad. My old 'oman an men and asked him how the vote stood me had a spat, an I went right out an planted my peppahs, an they come right up." Still another saying is that peppers to prosper must be planted votes for conviction, but at no time

The negro also says that one never sees a jaybird on Friday, for the bird visits his satanic majesty to "pack kinin which negroes place implicit trust spondent are the well known ones of the ground Gazette: hog's appearing above ground on the 2d of February, that a hoe must not be carried through a house or a death will follow and that potatoes must be planted in the dark of the moon as well as like me blacks?" all vegetables that ripen in the ground and that corn must be planted in the light of the moon.

Lord Southey's Guillotine, The most eccentric action of an eccen-trie man was Lord Souther's cool arrangement for suicide by means of a guillotine. He had a magnificent one erected in the drawing room of his house in the Rue du Luxembourg at Paris. The machine was of ebony inlaid with gold and silver, the framework carved with artistic skill, the knife, sharp as a razor, was of polished and ornamented steel. Preparing for death, his lordship had his hair cut close, and, clothed in a robe of white silk, he kneeled upon the platform under the knife before a mirror and pressed the spring which should release the knife. But the spring failed to work, and the would be suicide decided to give the guillotine to a museum instead of making a second attempt to end his life. It is said that he made an annual pilgrimage to see the guillotine until the end of his life.

Laughter Saved the Ship. Humor has been credited with the saving of many things, but perhaps never before has a ship been saved by its judicious application. In a great storm many years ago a ship's crew were all at prayers, when a boy burst into a fit of violent laughter. Being reproved for his ill timed mirth and asked e reason for it, he said, "Why, I was laughing to think what a hissing the boatswain's red nose will make when it comes in contact with the water." This ludicrous remark set the crew laughing, inspired them with new spirits, and by a great exertion they brought the ressel safely into port.-Liverpool

A Professor on Rowing. A story is told about a well known Oxford don who knew more about the travels of Ulysses than about the boat he sailed in. He went down to the river one day to watch the eight practicing. He gazed for awhile in silence. 'Yes," he said at last, "they look very nice-very nice indeed, I may say-but how extremely awkward it must be for them to learn to row backward."

Crying and Greaning.

According to a French physician, erying and groaning in pain are nature's own methods of subduing the keenness of physical suffering. He thinks that men should freely reliev their sufferings in this way and that crying in children should not be re-pressed, as in doing so serious consequences may be engendered.

Lycurgus being asked why, in his taws, he had set down no punishment for ingratitude, answered. "I have left Genuine stamped C.C. C. No.

A curious labyrinth in which elephants are captured alive is to be seen near Ayuthia, formerly the capital of Siam. The labyrinth is formed of a double row of immense tree trunks set firmly in the ground, the space between them gradually narrowing.

Where it begins, at the edge of the forest, the opening of the labyrinth is more than a mile wide, but as it approaches Ayuthia it becomes so narrow that the elephants cannot turn around.

Suspecting no danger the wild elephant enters the broad opening at the forest end, lured on by a tame elephant. The gradual narrowing of the boundaries is not observed until the elephant finds himself in close quarters. Having reached the end of the labyrinth, the tame elephant is allowed to pass through a gate, while men lying in wait slip shackles over the feet of the captives. The sport is a dangerous one, for the enraged elephants sometimes crush the hunters under their Alphabetical Abuse.

The prosecuting attorney in a lawsuit had waxed especially indignant at the defendant, whom he characterized as an "abandoned, baneful, cynical, diabolic, execrable, felonious, greedy, hateful, irresponsible, jaundiced, knavish, lazy, meddlesome, noxious, outrageous and profligate rowdy."

"The learned counsel on the other in a sort of paradise valley. One day, side," said the attorney for the defendant when he rose to reply, "should have put his adjectives in a hat and shaken them up a little before using. You must have noticed, gentlemen of the jury, that they were in regular al-phabetical order. This shows that he selected them from a dictionary, beginning with 'a.' He stopped at 'p.' but in his manner of reproducing them he has given us the 'cue' as to how he got them."

This turned the laugh against the other lawyer, and he lost the case.

A Bright Jury.

In a larceny case in Maine it was agreed to go on with only 11 men on the jury. The trial lasted several hours, and then the jury retired to deliberate upon the evidence and find a verdict. After being out four hours the jury reported that it could not agree, and accordingly it was discharged from further duty in the case. and the prisoner was remanded to the jail. A little later the attorneys for the respondent "got at" one of the jury-
