Our Rival in South America.

The evident interest which Germany is showing in the political affairs of South America, which has led some times to the assumption that violation of the Monroe doctrine was contemplated, is explained by the trade returns of the various countries of that continent. Not only have German manufacturers and merchants been large purchasers in South American states, but they have succeeded in finding in those republics fairly good markets for the disposal of their wares. Judged upon the basis of commercial relations, Germany has a larger interest in South America than has the United States. During the past fiscal year Germany and the United States sold to the South American states named merchandise as follows:

THE ARGENTINE REPUBLIC.
Germany	9,496,000
United States	11,587,000
BRAZIL.
United States	12,564,000
CHILE.
United States	5,250,000
PERU.
United States	3,125,000
URUGUAY.
United States	1,927,000
VENEZUELA.
Germany	1,150,000
United States	2,271,000
THE ARGENTINE REPUBLIC.
Germany	555,434,000
BRAZIL.
United States	70,614,000
CHILE.
Germany	21,377,000
United States	5,445,000
PERU.
United States	2,955,000

Germany	8,865,000
United States	1,153,000
VENEZUELA.
Germany	2,259,000
United States	6,545,000

The figures indicate that our trade with South America is, on the whole, considerably less than that of Germany. We need to bestir ourselves if our commercial prestige is to be maintained on this hemisphere.

It appears now that the abandoned farms of New England are (save the marks) more due to lack of brains than infertility of the soil. It is sad to think that the home of learning should have so sadly deteriorated as not to be able to raise food for its sustenance, but if a recent paragraph in a Boston paper is to be believed such is the condition. It says: "On one of the 'abandoned farms' Massachusetts a farmer from Long Island who knows something about farming has this year planted 37 acres with potatoes, from which he is now gathering a crop of from 125 to 150 bushels per acre, disposing of the same in Worcester at from $4.50 to $5 per barrel. At the lowest figure he will receive over $10,000 for the crop, or at least 20 times the amount he paid for the land. Poverty of brains rather than poverty in the soil and the competition of the western farmer is what has caused the abandonment of most of the deserted farms of New England."

It is now stated that General De Wet is to show no quarter to captured British soldiers after the time limit set by Lord Kitchener for the banishment of captured Boers. This would only be fit for a rat, but it is well enough to wait for confirmation of such news before believing that the Boer commander has decided on the savage policy of reprisal, which would be natural in the case. Meanwhile, the chase goes on, and as often on British as on Boer territory. Two commandos are reported to have passed unmolested within 150 miles of Cape Town, and generally Kitchener's troops control little beyond the range of their outposts. It is a frightful enterprise which Kitchener still has ahead, and if it is too late to make terms with the desperate men who have elected to die in the land they may not save them, for the honor of the British name, Kitchener must treat them to the end like the worthy foes they are and not like outlaws.

A coroner's jury at Hagerstown, Md., has held for the grand jury a man whose criminal recklessness caused the death of a young woman a few days ago. His offense was rocking the boat in which he and the young woman were sailing. The testimony plainly indicated his actions, and the jury lost no time in declaring him guilty of the homicide. A few such prosecutions widely advertised, especially if effective in bringing such people to punishment, would go far toward breaking up a habit which has cost many lives.

An inheritance from the last expedition in Paris is an inclosure in the park at Vincennes in which scientists may study wild animals in surroundings resembling as near as possible those of their native haunts.

Chopin on Piano Fingering.

This is from a fragment of piano fingering left by Chopin: "No one notices inequality in the power of the notes of a scale when it is played very fast and equally as regards time. In a good mechanism the aim is not to play everything with an equal sound, but to acquire a beautiful quality of touch and a perfect shading." "For a long time players have acted against nature in seeking to give equal power to each finger. On the contrary, each finger should have an appropriate part assigned to it. The thumb has the greatest power, being the thickest finger and the freest. Then comes the little finger, at the other extremity of the hand. The middle finger is the main support of the hand and is assisted by the first. Finally comes the third, the weakest one." "As to this Slavonic trill of the middle finger some players try to force it with all their might to become independent, a thing impossible and most likely unnecessary. There are, then, many different qualities of sound, just as there are several fingers. The point is to utilize the differences, and this, in other words, is the art of fingering."—Hummel's "Chopin, the Man and His Music."

Insects Become Intoxicated.
Intoxication from the nectar and pollen of plants has been a subject of investigation by Dr. J. M. Welz, Jr. In this case the insect is a bumble bee, and it appears that the cosmos flower is specially potent as a cause of drunkenness in bees and other nectar loving creatures. A bee so drunk that it could scarcely get upon its legs was taken to the laboratory and placed about two inches from a cosmos blossom. It immediately staggered to the flower and began to suck the nectar and in a few moments tumbled over, a senseless and almost inert victim of appetite. Drunken beetles found under the blossoms prove that the pollen must have the same effect as the nectar.

The experimenter swallowed a half teaspoonful of the pollen and in about 15 minutes experienced a feeling of exhilaration, with acceleration of the pulse and warmth. An injection into the arm of half a dram of liquid distilled from an infusion of the nectar caused exhilaration for half an hour, followed by nausea.

When Everything Sticks.
"In muggy weather," said the retired burglar, "I always used to stop work not because work was unpleasant then, but on account of everything sticking so." "You couldn't tell what might happen. Anything and everything was liable to stick and make more or less noise when you finally got it open. A window might stick at first and then go up with a bang. I've had a door open on me that way—I'd open all of a sudden and let me through the doorway on to the floor. There's always danger, for instance, in pulling out a drawer that sticks of pulling it clean out and letting it drop." "There's constant danger of something of this sort happening, and it doesn't pay to take the chances. And it's easy enough to know when to stay home. My rule was never to try to do any work in weather that would rust a jimmy."—New York Sun.

How to Button a Coat.
The art of properly buttoning a coat—any coat—is, do it the other way. That is to say that nine out of every ten of us button our coats the wrong way. We commence with the topmost button when we should commence with the bottommost.

The frailest portion of a coat, in respect to shape retaining qualities—no matter how well made—is the region of collar and lapels. The swagger merchant tailor always cautions his customer to "wear it buttoned a few days so that the collar may set properly." Then, this admitted, it follows that tugs and strains affecting this part of the garment tend to destroy its symmetry. Drawing the coat together by the top button and buttonhole for the purpose of fastening exerts a pull all around the shoulders and neck region, which, by repetition, in time will give the smartest coat a hanging dog appearance.—Chat.
