The opposition to the measure is more powerful outside than inside of the German parliament. While the government is recognizes and sees that the present period of industrial calamity in Ger many is not an opportune time to press a measure raising the cost of food. The government is so pledged to the Agrarian party, so completely committed to the measure, that it feels it cannot recede therefrom or postpone its consideration. Consequently the ministry entered upon the debate, determined upon seeing the thing through, but with no cheerfulness of spirit. It is believed Germany is about to enter upon as intense a period of political disturbance as existed in Great Britain during the corn law agi-
