WIT AND HUMOR.

The Old Camel Story.

It is quite a number of years since this old camel story trotted along the sands of time, so, as the circus season is approaching it has been suggested that the Free Press start the ancient animal on its travels again. This is how it happened: Abou Ben Eli McCaffin, being full of years, died, leaving to his three sons, his seventeen camels, for the simple reason that he could not take them along with him. The will, duly attested, said the eldest was to have one-half, the second son one-third, and the youngest one-ninth of the seventeen camels. The boys were a little perplexed at this as it seemed to involve the cutting up of a camel, and camels were worth $3 a day on the Sahara that season. But the boys, if not first-class mathematicians, had level heads and did not go to law to prove the old man insane, but went instead to a good old Cadi, Hassan O'Donohue, who had taken a medal for mathematics at Ann Arbor.

"Boys," said the good Cadi reproachfully, "you should not bother me with these little matters. Ask me a harder one."

But seeing they were troubled, the benevolent old man asked the hostler to trot out his own dilapidated camel, which had seen its best days traveling with Barnum as the Sacred Gnu of Persia.

Placing the aged brute with the seventeen camels the boys had brought along, he said:

"There are eighteen camels. I shall now give you half of the eighteen, which is nine. How does that strike you?"

"It hits me where I live," said the eldest, who was slangy, but withal pleased at getting half of eighteen rather than half of seventeen.

"The next boy shall have one-third of eighteen, which is six. Are you there, Moriarity?"

"You bet," said the boy.

"The next shall have one-ninth of eighteen, which is two," and so the third youngster collared his two camels. Thus two and six and nine made seventeen, and still the good Cadi's aged animal was left unscathed. The people marveled, as the Cadi had given each more than the will called for, which is rather unusual in courts of law. And they said one to another, "that's what it is to be good at figures."—[Detroit Free Press.

In Ireland it is regarded as an ill-omen for a bride to rise before the sun on her wedding day. This evidently accounts for the bad habits of the majority of Irish cooks.—Jersey City Journal.

One of the Most Sublime Spectacles on the Face of the Earth.

Dr. C. L. Goodell, at the First Congregational church, describes his visit to Vesuvius last month as follows: Leaving your carriage at the mountain railway, you enter the car. The ascent is very steep and at one place almost perpendicular. The road makes no curve. The car moves rapidly, and in ten minutes you are within less than a half-hour's walk of the crater. You mount a chair, and four stalwart mountaineers bear you through smoke and steam, midst the rumbling of the volcano and the melted lava, to the very edge of the bowl, in which, as in a mighty cauldron, the firey mass seethes and rocks and thunders and foams.

It is terrifically grand. The mountain seems filled with surging fire that rises up every half minute in awful explosion, throwing up columns of smoke dark as midnight and streaked with lurid fire. This melted matter falls back with crashing, fearful sound, lodging in part on the edge of the crater. Before you are recovered from one stunning sensation another explosion breaks on you, more overpowering than before, the steam coming up through every crevice at your feet, and the whole summit is enveloped in cloud. The red lava as it is thrown high in the air in massive form, seems heated in the furnace of Vulcan, and as it falls back down into the boiling sea of fire, the sight is no more terrible than the noise is astounding. The crater seems like a mighty pit of liquid fire thrown up in burning waves from side to side, scorching, blistering and tearing all before it.

How can the mountain endure such a strain? How can the eye bear such blinding brilliance of vast masses of fire? The crater is two miles in circumference, and you must make the circuit. The terror of the unheaving fire, and shower of ashes and smoke and stones, does not abate. The trembling of the mountain strikes terror into strong nerves. You remember the tragical death of the elder Pliny nearly 2,000 years ago, and the thousands that have been destroyed since. The explosions continue to deafen you. You remember the lone city of Pompeii where you have spent the morning, and you decided not to spend the summer there.

It is the most sublime scene I ever witnessed. Nothing before ever made so deep and tremendous an impression. It is the most active volcano in the world. Smoke never ceases to float off from it as a long pennant from the head, and the crater never fails to show fire to those who visit it, and it may be seen almost every night from Naples. But on this bright day in March it spoke with a tongue of fire and a blackness of darkness never to be forgotten. Its words were red hot boulders and its periods were ribbons of crimson.—[St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

An Agricultural Creed.

The following is from the pen of Henry Ward Beecher. The reverend gentleman once edited the Indiana Farmer, and these items were kept at the head of a column as standing matter, worthy of constant perusal:

We believe in small farms and thorough cultivation.

We believe that soil loves to eat as well as its owner, and ought, therefore, to be manured.

We believe in large crops, that leave the land better than they found it, making both the farmer and the farm rich at once.

We believe in going to the bottom of things, and therefore in deep plowing and enough of it—all the better if with a subsoil plow.

We believe that every farm should own a good farmer.

We believe that the best fertilizer of any soil is a spirit of industry, enterprise and intelligence—without this, lime and gypsum, bones and green manure, marl and guano will be of but little use.

We believe in good fences, good barns, good farmhouses, good stock, good orchards and children enough to gather the fruit.

We believe in a clean kitchen, a neat wife in it, a spinning piano, a clean cupboard, a clean dairy and a clean conscience.

Napoleon's Tomb at St. Helena.

The first place the average visitor asks for is Longwood, built for Napoleon, and in which he spent nearly five years, and finally died. The road to Longwood, which lies several miles from James Town, passes through some very pretty valleys, where all the available ground is used for farming purposes, and within sight of The Briars, a very pretty country house, in which Napoleon was lodged while Longwood was preparing for him. The latter place is handier to the town, and Napoleon greatly objected to the transfer; but Longwood is nearer the center of the island, and it was considered advisable to make attempt at rescue or escape as difficult as possible by keeping him far from the coast.

The house is sunk in a valley, and is a long, low structure, very much resembling a two-story American summer hotel. Scarcely anything remains in the shape of relics; but the tomb near the house and lying under weeping willows, is guarded by a French sergeant and two soldiers. The ground was purchased by the French. Under the sarcophagus, which is about three feet high and protected by an iron railing, the body of the great emperor rested twenty-five years, and until it was taken to its final magnificent tomb in the Invalides.

A very near relative of the writer, who was present when the coffin was taken up and opened before the Prince de Joinville, said that the embalming had been done so well, that, though the skin had turned parchment hued, the outline of the features remained perfect. It was under the tricolor of satin made by some women on the island that the body was borne to the ship, and each of these ladies was presented by the prince, with a gold bracelet, in the name of the French nation. The same person who witnessed the exhumation became acquainted with Napoleon during the six years of his captivity, and declared that he could never meet the ex-emperor's eyes for more than a second. His glance remained till the last so piercing that it seemed to reach into the very soul of the person on whom it was bent.—[New York Sun.

The Forcing Methods.

No one can gainsay the fact but that the forcing methods employed in the butter testing of cows are dangerous to the health and life of the animal subjected to it. The number of deaths among test cows of different breeds in the past two or three years is evidence to prove that it is not profitable to subject valuable cows to such high stimulation of the productive powers. The cow is a delicately organized animal and it is not wise to put such a strain upon her vitality. Of course no one will claim that this high production and forcing is profitable, so far as the extra amount produced is concerned, for the extra care and feed given, more than offset the difference obtained in excess of the amount that would have been obtained with the ordinary good feed and care. The only good that may accrue is in showing what may be accomplished in the amount produced when the best of care and the highest and most nutritious milk-producing food is given and for a conclusive test or competition as regard the different breeds. This high butter yield, of course all know, is obtained only when every effort is put forth to stimulate the cow to excel herself. Such tests are rarely more evidence of superior understanding of how to feed and care for a cow and how to care for and make the most of what she produces than they are of the capacity of the cow.—[Ex.

How unprofitable religious discussions are when engaged in by the bigoted partisans of either sex. In their haste to defend them, disputants seem to forget the truth that every creed under the sun is merely man's make, and oftentimes only a reflex picture of his selfishness and cupidity.

WHO MAY BE SUFFERING FROM the effects of youthful follies or indiscretion will do well to avail themselves of this, the greatest boon ever laid at the altar of suffering humanity. DR. SPINNEY will guarantee to forfeit $500 for every case of Seminal Weakness or private diseases of any kind or character which he undertakes and fails to cure.

MIDDLE-AGED MEN.

There are many at the age of thirty to sixty who are troubled with too frequent evacuations of the bladder, often accompanied by a slight smarting or burning sensation and a weakening of the system in a manner the patient cannot account for. On examining the urinary deposits a ropy sediment will often be found, and sometimes small particles of albumen will appear, or the color will be of a thin milkish hue, again changing to a dark and torpid appearance. There are many men who die of this difficulty, ignorant of the cause, which is the second stage of seminal weakness. Dr. S. will guarantee a perfect cure in all such cases, and a healthy restoration of the genito-urinary organs.

Office Hours—10 to 4 and 6 to 8. Sundays, from 10 to 11 A. M. Consultation free. Thorough examination and advice, $5.
