WIT AND HUMOR.

"Have a shampoo, sir?"
 "No, it's a sham!"
 "Pooh!"
 "Massa," said Sambo, "one of your oxen is dead 'toder, too. 'Fraid to tell you bof at once for fear you could not bore it."

Twenty-four greyhounds, of a choice breed, were recently sold in England for upwards of $7,650, which they say was dog cheap.

An old farmer who wrote to an editor asking how to get rid of moles, and received the reply: "Plow them out," answered back: "Can't do it. It's on my gal's nose."

"Keep mum," said the joker to the guest on his right, as he put a spoonful of salt in another guest's coffee. "I do," solemnly replied the man addressed, "I'm a wine merchant."

In summer, when the ground is dry, Our wayward minds impressing With what is meet—what we should buy— Light calf skin is a blessing. But, when the rain descends, and mud Impedes perambulation, We need a boot both strong and good To reach our destination. Go to Dean & Huntington's— They will fit and please you: They keep every thing, From stout boots for winter, To light ones for spring.

Class in metaphysics. Teacher—"When has a man the most confidence in himself?"

Sensible fellow—"When he wants to buy something on credit." Teacher—"And when the least?" Sensible fellow—"When the bill is presented."

"Is there a dude club in this city?" asked a stranger, entering the editorial room. "There is" returned the editor as he produced a toothpick from his pocket and laid it on the roll-top desk; "that's it, and the first dude that shows his head in this office will be brained with it." With a deep sigh the stranger turned and disappeared.—[Somerville Journal.

"Sister," said a little boy, rushing into the parlor, where she was entertaining young Mr. Smith, "will you come into the hall a minute? I want to speak to you." "I can not now, dear. Don't you see that I am engaged with Mr. Smith? What is it you want?" "Jimmy White is out in the hall, and he says he won't believe it unless you tell him so yourself." "What is it that Jimmy White won't believe, dear?" asked the sister, sweetly. "That you ate thirty-five pancakes this morning for breakfast."—[Philadelphia Call.

Recently four well dressed men entered a London tavern and had dinner. When the moment came to pay, they said they had no money with them, but would leave a valuable diamond ring. A few days later they called, settled the previous account, had another dinner, talked to the proprietor, and finally sold him the ring for £55. He considered that he had made a good bargain, because whilst it had been in his possession he had taken it to a jeweler, who pronounced it to be worth £100. The guests, however, had on their second visit substituted an imitation fac-simile for the genuine ring.

A negro was recently seated on a rail fence in Arkansas intently looking at the telegraph wire. A gentleman passing said: "Watching the wires?" "Yes, sah."

"Waiting to see a message go by, hey?"

The Negro smiled and said, "Yes sah."

The gentlemen kindly told him that messages were invisible, and explained the working of electric current to him, at length. Concluding he said:

"Now do you know something about it?"

"Yes, sah."

"What do you work at?"

"I'm a telegraph operator at the Hazel Switch station, sah."

A Singular Case.
 The death of Martin Sullivan, an expressman who lived at 622 Linden avenue, with his wife and seven children, has afforded gossip for the people living in that vicinity. Sullivan was taken with an attack of pneumonia, contracted from a cold received while attending the Democratic excursion at San Jose, a week ago last Saturday night. Last Wednesday night he died, and after he had been "laid out" the head and body of the corpse raised almost upright and then sank back again, to never more move. On the evening of Sullivan's death and after his heart had ceased beating for fully a quarter of an hour, he opened his eyes and said: "No; I don't die this time. They're not ready just yet for me in heaven, but you may as well prepare everything, for I will soon leave you." Up to the time of his burial his cheeks retained a rosy and natural color. It is supposed that the moving of the body after death was the result of a contraction of the muscles.—S. F. Chronicle.
