The Supply of Beef.
 There appears to be no other country which can compete with America in supplying the deficiency in supplying of beef which exist abroad and which will probably never again be satisfied by home production. There is a market in this direction for everything we can spare at prices not to fall below a highly remunerative standard, until our own surplus is so large as to affect, to our disadvantage, the foreign market, and it will be a long time before such a contingency as this can arise. Our surplus now is scarcely anything to speak of, and for years our own population has been increasing in a greater ratio than our meat supplies, and it is doubtful if, with all the increased attention which can be given to cattle raising, it will be possible to increase production much faster than the domestic demand and population increases. Restrictions upon the movement of live cattle may, to some extent, deprive American farmers of the full advantage of the market, but no excuse will be found for closing the market against us for carcasses. It is upon the basis of the present dead-meat trade that present prices are adjusted, and any changes must be in the direction of admitting live cattle, which will be still more to the advantage of the American farmer. In the dressed-beef trade we have nothing to fear from the competition of far-away countries beyond the equator. The time involved in transportation and the passage through the tropics require their meat to be sent forward in a frozen condition, while the quick and comparatively cool passage from America calls for but a moderate refrigeration, which does not to any very great extent interfere with the condition of the product or the manner in which it will be cut up upon the block. From every standpoint from which the situation can be regarded the prospects appear to be secure.—Breeder's Gazette.

Are Sheep Profitable.
 A gentleman fairly interested in sheep husbandry remarked to us the other day that at fifteen cents a pound for wool sheep were as profitable as any item of farming or stock raising. When we consider that sheep double in increase, year after year, and that mutton is in fair demand, we can accept as true that the fleece is profitable, even at fifteen cents a pound for wool. One great advantage of having sheep is that it furnishes the farmer with healthy meat for his own use. The custom of killing mutton and exchanging meat with one's neighbors, is a very good one. Fresh meat is necessary for good and healthy living and every farmer can keep a small flock to furnish his fresh meat and the wool will be a cash item towards any use he may wish to use it. Generally the wool money comes in handy towards paying harvest expenses. The importance of keeping a flock to clean up the farm, pasture off heavy growth of grain in the spring and run on the summer-fallow, is well known. We agree with the expression of our friend who says that with wool at fifteen cents a pound sheep are the best thing a farmer can depend on for an income.—Farmer.

Money That Nobody Owns.
 There are, it seems, $20,000,000 in securities and money in the treasury of the United States that no one claims. In times gone by sundry persons have bought government securities which they have lost or which have been destroyed; hence the twenty millions of unclaimed bonds in the treasury. There are saving banks in New York which have in their vaults large sums that will never be claimed. They belong to poor people who died or that have moved away, or have forgotten they had ever any money in the bank. There is supposed to be some $80,000,000 of unclaimed money in banks and trust companies through the country which is lost to the heirs forever.—Ex.

Immigration.
 Oregon possesses many attractions for the settler, and the interior is constantly receiving accessions of first-class people. The last steamer from California brought 140 passengers, and of this number seventy-five were well-to-do immigrants, who bring money enough with them to buy improved farms or settle on Government lands. Nearly all have definite plans for the future. There were not a few who return from Los Angeles, whither they went several months since. They come back from the semi-tropic region disgusted and say they prefer a section where it rains annually and a crop is a sure thing every year, to one where the raising of a crop occurs only occasionally, owing to frequent drouths. There are nine families from the vicinity of Santa Cruz, who will go to the Willamette valley to-day looking for locations. C. B. Carlisle, of Oregon Immigration Bureau, has them in charge, and will take them to the vicinity of Albany and Corvallis, where there is some first-class land for sale to settlers only. Quite a number go to eastern and western Washington, and a few to Montana.—Portland News.

In summer, when the ground is dry, Our wayward minds impressing With what is meet—what we should buy— Light calf skin is a blessing. But, when the rain descends, and mud impedes perambulation, We need a boot both strong and good To reach our destination. Go to Dean & Huntington's— They will fit and please you; They keep every thing, From stout boots for winter, To light ones for spring.
