

Coquille City Herald.

J. A. DEAN, Editor and Proprietor

Devoted to the interests of the Coquille River particularly, and of the County generally.

TUESDAY, JAN. 19, 1885.

In what suit does a man never feel comfortable? In a law-suit.

To keep apples from decaying put them in a cool place—where there is a large family of children.

Sleeping on a conductor "You can roll in whenever you want to," said the man— "Yes, and roll out when I don't want to."

There is not a single lawyer among the 1,000 convicts in the Virginia penitentiary. Virginia lawyers seldom get found out.

No word of shot "What did you kill?" inquired a pedestrian of a sportsman on horseback. "Horn," was the astonished response.

A noiseless violin has been invented. Now when some one discovers a noiseless opera-singer the weary soul of the public will find rest.

"Aren't you in a good deal of a hurry about getting your storm-doors up?" "Not an hour too soon. My wife's mother will arrive at noon."

"Do not marry a widower," said the old lady; "a ready-made family is like a pile of cold potatoes." "Oh, I soon warm them," replied the dandy.

Recently in Paris during the session of the Free Thinkers, one eminent member passionately exclaimed, "Gentlemen, I am an atheist, thank God!"

"Fogg—" "Ah, doctor, how is Henderson?" "Doctor—" "The poor fellow has been out of his mind for twenty-four hours." "Then he is improved? You don't know how glad I am to hear it."

"Papa," said a small boy, looking up from his Sunday school lesson, "are all our deeds in this world recorded?" "Not always," replied the old man, who is a real estate lawyer. "I lost $500 once by failing to record a deed."

"It's a powerful hard matter for me to keep my religion," said a church member to his minister. "Every time I think I've got an everlasting hold on it something turns up to make me cuss; so I am kept on a trot between the world and the mourner's bench. This morning I lost all the religion I had while trying to shoot Tom Green. The gun wouldn't go off, and I had to cuss."—Arkansas Traveler.

How a bit of a boy teaches a big lesson. A little fellow in this city who is very much exercised over the Presidential situation went to his mother last evening and, with a mournful face, said to her, "Mamma, do you think there will be another war?" "I don't know, my son." "Well, will papa have to go and fight again?" "I can't really tell." Then with great desperation, the little fellow blurted out, "Oh, I'll be darned if I don't pray to-night." And he did.

Didn't Surprise Her—"Say, conductor, don't be stingy about it. Introduce me to that woman you were just talking to so lovingly." "Certainly, step right over. Mrs. Dobbins, this is Mr. Stebbins," and the conductor went his way. "Oh, Mrs. Dobbins, delighted to know you. Widow I suppose. Let me warn you against making the acquaintance of that conductor. He'll deceive you." "Oh, bless you, Mr. Stebbins, I expect that. He is my husband!"—Chicago News.

The New England Farmer remarks that "very few realize what a heavy toll we are paying when we haul half a load over a poor road. On a good, level, hard road, a two-horse team will easily haul a load that would require four or six horses to haul over many of our soft, hill country roads. We sympathize with people who have to pay six to ten cents to haul a load over a bridge or a few miles on a shell or turnpike road, but many of us often pay ten times as much in extra teams for doing the same pulling over our common free roads."

A Dog Story.

Some years ago, in the northern part of New England, Farmer Adams bought a drove of sheep from Farmer Scott.

"I need some one to help me drive these sheep home," said Adams, "for the road is long, and winds over the mountains and through the woods."

"There is nobody here to go with you, but you may have one of my shepherd dogs," replied Scott. "When you get home give him a good breakfast, and tell him to go back and he will find the way all right."

The sheep were all turned into the pasture, at the end of the journey; but the dog had been so efficient that Farmer Adams thought he would try to keep him. Therefore he was chained, and only allowed freedom enough for exercise. After feeding and petting him for a week, the dog might become wanted to the place, one evening his chain was loosed to allow him to take a run. At eight o'clock they called him to be tied up for the night, but no dog appeared.

About a week afterward a letter from Mr. Scott stated that the dog had returned home bringing all the sheep. He had evidently gone to the pasture, gathered the sheep together and driven them back to their former home.

Moral: Do not try to steal a dog, for you may lose your sheep.—Farmer.

How Eugene Met Napoleon.

It was at a ball given by President Napoleon at the Elysee, some nights before the coup d'etat. Mlle. Eugene met her future husband. A romance is connected with this meeting. Wishing to avoid the crowded ballrooms, Louis Napoleon, with the Duke of La Moskowa, went into the Elysee gardens, where he suddenly came upon a radiant, blushing girl. She was tying up her hair, alone, opposite a glass in the conservatory. Her hair had come down during a waltz and the crowd was too great to admit of her reaching the ladies' dressing-room. She had gilded to this place, hoping to be unobserved. This little circumstance of the fall of her back hair led to her subsequent elevation to one of the proudest positions ever occupied by a woman.—Mausg's Weekly.

In summer, when the ground is dry, Our wayward winds impressing With what is good—what we should buy—It is a good thing to be blessed. But, when the rain descends, and mud Injures perspiration, We need a good coat along and cool To reach our destination.
