WIT AND HUMOR.

The song of the mill is always hoppertune.

The man who has the floor is the man who is learning to ride the bicycle.

"Won by a bare scratch!" as the hen observed when she turned up the worm.

A provision dealer in Washington street calls a fall in breadstuffs the cracker doom.

El Mahdi recently gave a refugee 150 lashes for smoking a cigarette. Can't arrangments be made to invite the False Prophet to this country?

"How does the milk get in the cocoanut," asks a subscriber. It does not get into it at all: the cocoanut grows around the milk. Ask us a hard one.

An Alabama negro was heard to soliloquize philosophically: "De sun am so hot, de cotton am so grassy, de work am so hard dat dis darky feel called upon to preach."

There is this difference between happiness and wisdom: That he that thinks himself the happiest man really is so; but he that thinks himself the wisest is generally the greatest fool.

A correspondent of a fashionable paper asks: "Wnat shall I get for moths?" We should not get anything; but, if the correspondent is fond of moths, a very acceptable present would be a sealskin jacket.

"Khartoum away!" howled the editor in a rage, when a hardened individual handed him several puns on Khartoum. "Cart'em away! The man who makes puns on such a subject is fit for treason, stratagem and spoils. Khartoum out!" —Norristown Herald.

Good authorities insist that the best way to cure a cow of sucking herself is to paint the teats with a strong tincture of aloes. A saturated tincture of aloes and alcohol may be kept for the purpose. One good taste of the aloes will make the cow feel that she never did like milk anyway.

"Remember' sir, that you owe something to your constituents," said one member of a town council to another. "Humph!" said the other, "if you owe anything to your constituents, all I've got to say is that you're lucky. Why, there are not a half-dozen voters in my ward that have not borrowed money from me."

"My dear," said a wife to her exhausted husband in a dry-goods store, "do you notice those ladies' pocketbooks marked fifty cents each? They are remarkably cheap." "I notice them," he said, edging in the direction of the street entrance, "Never buy anything you have no use for because it's cheap.'" —Chicago Tribune.

A man having built a large house was at a loss what to do with the rubbish. His Irish steward advised him to have a pit dug large enough to contain it. "And what," said he smiling, "what shall I do with the earth that I dig up from it?" To which the steward, with great gravity, replied: "Have the pit made large enough to hold all."

"You look out of sorts this morning." "Yes, I've been all broke up for a week. Let's go in and take something." The drinks cost 50 cents. "What broke you up?"

"I went to church last week Sunday and put a quarter in the contribution box, thinking it was a two-cent copper. Don't you know a man never forgets a mistake of that kind, not if he gets to be worth a million."

"That infernal old hen hasn't laid an egg in a month," said Pretzel the other morning to his frau. "I think I'll chop her head off," "Don't be so cruel," replied Gretchen. "I have some patience mit her." "Patience! Haven't I been patient with her? And haven't I been to her nest every day for a month?" Dot's all right, Carl; yoost look somewhere else, too, I guess maybe she has mislaid them."—Pretzel's Weekly.

A Question of Wages.

A short time since a discussion sprung up between John Bright and the Earl of Duraven, respecting the comparative wages of English and American workingmen. Mr. Bright very properly held that the advantages which labor enjoyed in the United States was not owing, as alleged by the Earl, to the system of America protection, but to a very different state of things. The political and social conditions of the two countries are essentially different, and these, more than revenue laws, account for the disparty in wages. Great Britain is a small, longsettled and overcrowded island; America is a vast, new and only partially populated country. So long as land is cheap here, and agricultural labor is well paid, the recompense of workingmen cannot fall to the ordinary European level. When our great terrirory is crowded with people, and the American farmer can baroly get a living out of his land, as is now the case with the English farmer, we may look for lower wages, unless, in the meantime, some social and economical change, greater than either protection or free trade can bring to pass, can be effected. To compare England with America, as separate example of the effect of free trade and protection on the working people, is therefore unfair. This is no answer to Mr. Bright's comparison of England with the protectionist countries of the old continent. The disparity between wages in England and those countries is even greater than between England and the United States.

Begin with Soup.

No doubt, in many families, the prejudice against soup has arisen from the fact that it is usually prepared and served in large quantities, instead of, as at the tables of the rich, in small portions, though many kinds would furnish in themselves a substantial meal for a growing child. At any rate, the advantages of commencing a dinner with soup are manifest in the saving of the meat bills, and economy practiced in utilizing scraps of all kinds for the making of soups, and the comfortable sensation experienced after a little has been taken for let any person who feels as the saying, "too hungry to eat," swallow a few spoonsful of soup, and the feeling of exhaustion will quickly pass away. Indeed, a well-known authority has said nothing tends more to restore the tone of the stomach and make digestion than a little soup.—Cassell's Family Magazine.

A Monster Locomotive.

The largest locomotive in the world has just been completed at the railroad shops in Sacramento and forwarded to Tehachapi Pass, where it is to be used on that grade. The monster has been named the El Gobernador and weighs over 100 tons. It has ten driving wheels. The locomotive is not only the largest ever built, but it is differently constructed from any other. There are two brakes on each driver. On the trip to Tehachapi all the movable portions of the engine were taken off in order to lighten her and lessen the danger in crossing bridges.

In summer, when the ground is dry,
Our wayward minds impressing
With what is meet—what we should buy—
Light calf skin is a blessing.
But, when the rain descends, and mud
Impedes perambulation,
We need a boot both strong and good
To reach our destination.
Go to Dean & Huntington's—
They will fit and please you;
They keep every thing,
From stout boots for winter,
To light ones for spring.
