Oregon Rivers And Harbors.

The following on the reports prepared on the improvements of rivers and harbors for transmission to congress, we take from that excellent paper, the Daily Standard:

The project for the application of the appropriation of July 5, 1884, for the improvement of the entrance to Coos bay, was for continuing the low enrockment. The enrockment was advanced seventy-two feet, making the total jetty length measured on its top surface 1761 feet. The effect of the jetty on the channel during the year, beyond a fair stability of position, has not been marked. The examination shows an increase of bar channel depth of about one foot and a small continued favorable erosion of the north spit. Last year's amelioration of the shoal above Fearless rock has continued. Jetty construction across the deep interior channel is expensive, and a considerable advance of the work made gradually is required for a radical improvement. The amount estimated as required for next year is $160,000.

YACHTING BAY.

In resuming operations under the new appropriation the approved plan was to close the land gap by jetty construction, build a spur northward for the protection of the bank, and heavily strengthen the jetty with larger rock. The jetty now brought to an average height of high tide, measures 2517 feet. The spur jetty for shore protection is 450 feet long. The work is left in an excellent condition, and will probably be ready for a speedy extension of the jetty when funds permit. It is desirable to complete the work in two years. The main channel is a little more southerly, and the north one somewhat under and perhaps deeper than a year ago. The changes on the whole are considered favorable for the improvement. For the next year $160,000 is asked.

COQUILLE RIVER.

A low, attenuated jetty of a total length of 1365 feet had caused the radical changes in the entrance designed by the project. The improved channel was straight, direct, and free from rocks. The situation a year later was that nearly all of the temporary jetty work had been displaced by sea and drifts, and the adjacent fill had disappeared. During the past year 442 feet of jetty structure were built, and the total jetty length is 1523 feet. The work of improvement needs to be solidified and extended. For the next year $75,000 is required.

UPPER COLUMBIA AND SNAKE RIVERS.

"The work on this river is very difficult, owing to the extremely swift water, and can only be prosecuted at passable stages near low water. It is proposed to apply the appropriation asked for to the removal of rocks and cobblestone bars to the completion of the project, which is intended to secure a low water channel of five and a half feet in the Columbia as far as Ainsworth, and four and a half feet in the Snake, as far as Lewiston, Idaho."

COWLITZ RIVER.

"The amount expended on this river has been $5,988 13. Work has been satisfactorily done, resulting in a good improvement to navigation. It has made a commercial development very large in proportion to the sum expended, and I am of the opinion that operations should be extended to Klickitat bridge, about twenty miles farther up the river, and also to include shore protection wherever it may be necessary to prevent the river from making its channel too wide.

The estimate of $6000 submitted has this extension in view.
SURVEY OF COLUMBIA AND SNAKE RIVERS.

"The time has arrived when further progress in the improvements of the upper Columbia and Snake rivers must be preceded by a careful survey. The Columbia river has now been surveyed as far up from the sea as the mouth of the Willamette, at the Cascades and at The Dalles, and the survey of Priest's rapids. It is perfectly obvious that any further projects can only be intelligently guided by a good survey. I cannot too strongly urge the necessity for this survey. These are rivers of commanding importance, and it is quite time that they should be studied by the light of careful surveys, such as are now in progress upon the Mississippi and Missouri rivers. The distances to be surveyed are about 630 miles on the Columbia and 137 miles on the Snake as far as Lewiston, making a total of 767 miles. At $150 per mile the cost would be, in round numbers, $115,000.

"This can be advantageously expended in two annual installments of $40,000, and one of $35,000.
