[Coast Mail.]

The Coos Bay will hearafter run regularly between Humboldt bay and San Francisco, and if the Arcata comes to this port she will no longer visit us.

Two men securely stowed themselves away on the Arcata just before she left last week, with the intent to steal a ride to San Francisco. Their commissary consisted of a bottle of whisky over which they fell to quarreling before the steamer got under way and their angry words revealed their whereabouts. They were promptly set ashore.

P. C. Durgin of Isthmus slough has had a crew of men employed for some time in grading a road bed and laying ties for a railroad from the end of his old road to the lower landing on the lower slough, and the track will soon be put in place. Good T rails will be used and the road will be completed in the most substantial manner. About one quarter of a mile will be finished this season. Durgin has one of the finest camps on the coast, which is conducted in the most systematic and efficient way.

Depredations of Bruin.

Bear stories have been related so frequently of old, that the most thrilling experience failed at times to awaken more than a passing notice. But if we are to credit Mr. Bancroft's account of bruin's depredations in California within the first decade of the present century, we must conclude that there is indeed a foundation for the many exciting tales told by the pioneers of the country. "The bears and wolves, coyotes, and other wild beasts," says the historian, "were responsible for what little excitement was known about Monterey in the early years of this decade. The bears became so bold as to kill and eat cattle every day in full view of the herdsman; the wolves attacked work-horses on their way from Carmelo valley to the presidio. The Indians were often chased by the bears, and one was killed by a grizzly. More than fifty bears were killed in 1801-2, including one who had distinguished himself by eating five mules and seven cows. She-asses were so attractive to bruin that all had to be brought to the presidio for protection. Traps and poison, proving inadequate, the governor was called upon to authorize the use of 1,000 cartridges, and a regular military campaign was undertaken against the enemy. That the foe, if temporarily checked, was not entirely routed, is shown by the record that in 1805 some four hundred head of live stock were killed in and about the Rancho Del Rey, although about thirty mares were slaughtered and their poisoned carcasses used against the beasts."

The Stamp Act.

The San Francisco Examiner discussing the stamp act and the Cohen bill says:

It ought to be plain to every rational person that the only protection white labor can have against Chinese encroachments in industrial occupations is in a stamp act. All manufactured goods should show by a proper device, authorized by the laws of the state, whether they are the product of white or coolie industry. In no other way can the consumers of goods know which class of the community they are patronizing. To exempt certain specified manufactures from the operations of such a law is simply to invite the Chinese to enter that industry. * * * * Such a law as this bill contemplates is an indispensable necessity. It is the hinge upon which turns the fight against the products of Chinese industry. It is the declaration of industrial independence for the white working people of the Pacific coast. It is the legal divorce between free and servile labor; and all men who stand by white workingmen and desire to beat back the tide of Chinese conquest which has so long menaced every industry in California should give the bill a cordial support.
