Washington Letter.

(From our Regular Correspondent.)

Washington, April 25th, 1887.

Everybody was thinking that there was a dirth of news in Washington, an utter lack of anything in the least sensational, when it was announced that President Cleveland would not accept a re-nomination in '88.

A reporter called at his residence long before daylight on Saturday morning and asked if the report should be re-affirmed or denied that the president had made a declaration to this effect on last Wednesday to a prominent democratic senator from one of the western states.

If truthfully quoted the president said to his senatorial friend: "Everything I do, every appointment I make is construed as a step towards securing re-election, while in reality I am counting the days remaining until my release from office, just as if I were a prisoner in confinement." He mentioned that he had not expressed his feelings publicly, or to the representatives of the press, for the simple reason that he felt that nothing he might say about the matter would be believed. He scarcely expected to be believed now by any one except his wife, but added that it was so, nevertheless.

This is in consonance with what another friend of the president who was recently here on a visit, said in regard to a second candidacy in '88. He believed that Mr. Cleveland would adhere to his letter of acceptance and refuse to be a candidate for a second term. He was also of the opinion that the president would write a letter to this effect to give the public a clear understanding on the subject. And it is not unlikely that the publicity which has been given to this alleged private conversation on the subject will eventually provoke some formal and public utterance from the White House.

The episode in the east room last week of the giggling, gabbling newspaper men was unfortunate. The president has felt compelled to protect himself, or rather to protect his visitors from the indignities of certain vulgar correspondents here, by withdrawing certain privileges to which all journalistic visitors to the executive mansion have become accustomed. The said correspondents took a position in rear of the president while his tri-weekly hand-shaking to the public was in progress last Wednesday, and made ribald remarks at the expense of the honest passersby. There were about three hundred of these, and almost every one came in for a little criticism or fun-making, which was audible to the president, at least, and of course very annoying to him. Yesterday he received his callers in solemn state. The ill-bred wits had been invited not to attend.

The present administration has shown great kindness and courtesy to the press which have been appreciated by its representatives as a whole, even if they have been abused by a few. Until President Cleveland invited correspondents to attend the diplomatic reception last winter, they could stand in the vestibule with the wrap-bearers of guests, but they never had any definite social standing at the official receptions. Individual members were invited privately and on

New Year's day correspondents were freely admitted.

But in the classification of Washington official life, where precedence is as much thought of, apparently, as at European courts, where the smallest bureau or division chief is assigned a place, as are also the sergeants of police of the navy, no correspondent of any newspaper could, by virtue of his place, gain access to the White House on occasions of ceremony. President Cleveland changed all this. He gave representatives of the press a definite social status when he officially extended to them an invitation to the White House through the secretary of the senate and the clerk of the House. As the correspondent of the New York Sun wrote at the time, "That has given the press a status by the side of senators and representatives and the staff corps of the general of the army, who were the gilded cords of the armies of the continent."

Newspapers in 1887. Geo. P. Rowell & Co., of New York, issued on Monday, May 2nd, the Nineteenth Annual edition of their standard publication, the "American Newspaper Directory."

The new volume contains an exhaustive list of all Class Publications so admirably arranged that any one of the three thousand papers represented there can be readily referred to and all important facts concerning it, together with its circulation rating, easily obtained.

The Newspaper Directory will be used principally by publishers, advertisers and advertising agents, but the vast fund of information it contains makes it valuable to persons of almost every trade and profession. As a Gazetteer alone it is well worth the price charged $5.00, for it fully describes every town in which a newspaper is issued, and few people care to know about any place where one is not.

The number of papers published in the United States, Territories (including Alaska) and Canada is put at 15,420; an increase of 581 in one year.

The growth of newspapers in some of the Western States would be a matter of wonder, if it were not that this year is no exception to the rule. In Kansas the increase is 89 and in Nebraska 64; while the Keystone state shows a smaller advance of 35 and the Buckeye state of 30. Pennsylvania exhibits the largest increase in dailies, 17; Kansas in weeklies, 81, and New York in monthlies, 42. Seven states show a decrease; the most prominent instances being New Hampshire and Virginia, six each. The whole volume shows that great care has been taken to sustain its reputation as the most comprehensive work of the kind yet published, and to insure accuracy in every detail. Anything less than a complete compendium of American newspapers and periodicals would surprise those who are familiar with the former efforts of this firm, who are so well known as the oldest, largest and best known of all the American advertising agencies.

Free Reading Room. David Morse, jr., the Empire City merchant, takes near 50 of the leading papers of the country, including the local papers of this part of Oregon, and has a warm cosy room in one part of the store for a general reading room, which is free to all. In this, Mr. Morse is doing a noble work, by furnishing the young men of that town a pleasant retreat, void of the snares and temptations that are to be found in the places of amusement of most Oregon towns. How infinitely better it is for them to read this useful literature and spend the evenings with friends in social conversation than to be in the saloons drinking, carousing and playing games. When at Empire call and see this reading room and you will be able to find all the news going.

Alfred Hugg is a candidate for judge in Philadelphia. Now, if he lived in Washington Territory, where woman suffrage prevails, wouldn't there be a tremendous boom for him!

A western newspaper refers to "a silver-tongued orator who may yet be a United States senator." This is ignorance. "Silver-tongued" men no longer get into the senate. To go there nowadays, a man must have his silver in such a place that he can check against it any time.
