OUR PROHIBITION COLUMNS.

Beer Sharpens the Appetite for Whisky.

Ed. HERALD.—The note sent you by the Portland Brewers' Association accompanying pamphlets and documents against prohibition is certainly the very emavation of unblushing gall. But the two interests—whisky and beer—are working harmoniously together for a common end, and expenses of printing pamphlets, subsidising organs and sending speakers into the field are paid out of a common fund. But the inference intended to be drawn from the position taken in the note which you print, viz: That if the imbibation of more beer were encouraged, whisky drunkenness would soon be a thing of the past, is what stumps me. The experience of every person who has been addicted to the excessive use of stimulents is to the point that the imbibation of beer sharpens the appetite for whisky, and debauches innumerable have owed their beginning to beer. In short, about all such persons have the demonstration in their own experiences that the beer saloons are effective recruiting stations for the whisky dens. And herein is furnished an insurmountable argument in favor of the closing of all saloons of both and every sort. The whisky men understand perfectly the efficient services of the "beer halls," and "beer gardens," and beer saloons as adjuncts of the "business." The whisky men could well afford to, and would, subsidise beer breweries and beer vending shops all over the country if these would not spring up and prosper on their own account. Beer tippling is held by the shrewd and avaricious whisky manufacturing combinations to be an altogether harmless and honorable passtime, this to seduce men and women to enter the primary department of the school which sends its students—victims—on up to drunkenness, to graduate from there to hovels of poverty, the prison, alms houses, and to deaths, violence and delirium tremens.

These Portland brewers who are flooding the country with anti-prohibition pamphlets cannot overlook, if they would, the evidences of the ruin their "business" has wrought right there in their own city. All along the leading thoroughfares of that sodden city one is confronted by signs attractively displayed, and overflowing mugs of the seductive beverage painted on glass to tempt the victims to enter within, and it is the first glass that does the devilment. This calls for another and another, as the victim goes on his way along the street. At first the sign it was that found him; but in due course he finds himself in search of signs. He is now in a plight to turn into a whisky saloon in quest of something stronger to quench the unnatural, abnormal thirst begotten by the three, four or five glasses of beer he has imbibed before he became reckless enough to enter a dram shop. Once anchored here he is liable to remain the remainder of the day and the coming night and possibly go on a protracted spree, and all because of having been tempted in to partake of one glass of that "harmless" and exhilarating beverage, lager beer. Go tell the marines that the increase use of beer will tend to lessen the consumption of whisky, but don't fancy for a moment that one who has had dear bought experience will not realize the true inwardness of the joke.

The Saloon vs the Home.

November 8th the saloon is to be pitted against the home; in the evening for a side show, the lion will probably be pitted against the lamb, and the boaconstrictor against the fawn: while the elite out of the land will gaze at the spectacle in the most apathetic way, as might the "Roman Adonis, breathing sweet perfume from his curly locks," gaze on the bloody scenes of the amphitheatre.

Is the murderer in the lane? He is quickly cared for! Is the thief abroad? See the energy displayed in his capture! Is the cat after the canary? Run! run, somebody!

Are the mother and babes in their death struggle with the saloon? Don't hurry! It would be premature and expensive going to their assistance yet awhile.

Is smallpox in town? Has leprosy got a hold among us? Is pestilence in its worst form stalking forth by day and night? They are only harbingers of a rotten death, and are comparatively nothing to the saloon!

It is the synonym of everything bad, i. e., the Devil; and we are to witness the mother's death struggle with it on the 8th of November; and when you see the poor mother driven back step by step, fighting for her babes to the last, fainting, tottering, falling, don't get excited and rush in to drive the devil forth. If you do you will be called a fanatic, and promptly pulled back, and told that you are premature.

No! the better way will be to tie the devil's tail to his red hot collar with a license.

SALLAL.

Lie Nailed.

The anti-prohibition republicans of Iowa have issued an address, in which they declare that prohibition, while it does not decrease drunkenness, has sent rents down 40 per cent. and taxes up 25 per cent.

The above has been going the rounds of the papers. E. R. Hutchins, commissioner of statistics of the state of Iowa, says: "The truth is, Des Moines is in better condition than it has been for years. Few houses are to let, and scarcely a business house of good size or condition is vacant in the city. A new hotel is in process of construction which will surpass any hotel building between Chicago and Denver. A seven story building, the biggest in Des Moines, is going up. Very many smaller buildings are being constructed. "Through the state the same is true. If prohibition were resubmitted more than 50,000 majority would say it must stay."

The fact that the republican opposing prohibition must make a seperate party, shows that the true blue republicans are in favor of prohibition, as their platform unmistakably declares.—Prohibition Star.

The Election.

Although the election is still a month off we do not wish to lose any votes by carelessness. We therefore speak thus early, even if we have to speak again. Attend to the following points:

1. See that every voter is supplied with a ticket, yet give none away to be destroyed.

2. See that at least one reliable prohibitionist is on the board of judges.

3. See that there are one or more resolute men at the polls, watching every voter, and ready to challenge every suspicious looking person who attemps to vote. Let it be known that any fradulent voting will be punished. As the election draws to a pinch many frauds will be attempted by an enemy as unscrupulous as he is able to spend money.

4 Look out for bogus tickets. These will undoubtedly be freely circulated.

A Nut for Our Anti-Prohis to Crack.

There have been only three hundred dollars paid into Polk county's treasury during the last three years and there is now a suit pending for the recovery of one hundred of that, while the county on the other hand, has paid three thousand three hundred and seventy-five dollars to prosecute liquor criminals, and yet some will tell us we want the revenue to pay the running expenses of the government. The idea of paying out one thousand dollars in order to collect one hundred seems so ridiculous that one ought to be ashamed to make such a statement, and yet one can hear it every day. —A. J. In West Side.

The inside lands, about 300 acres of which are more or less cleared land under fence are suitable for dairying, or raising cattle or sheep as well as for grain, roots, etc., and the entire when cleared (and this is easily accomplished, as the timber has been permitted to grow only since the white man settled here about 30 years since,) will maintain a large number of cattle, and also adapted for for the ordinary products of agriculture in a temperate climate.
