Reply to the Devils Elegy on the Major

The "devil" seems to take a great amount of credit to himself for his trying to throw a screen over the major, to shield him from public obloquy and indignation. I am the more surprised at this, from the fact that his acts are entirely out of the line of the devils way doing business. He is commonly accused as being the primal cause of all mans shortcomings; as the one that whispers lowly in your ear, to silence all your scruples of right and justice; and ever ready with an excuse to present you, by which the sin is justified, in the sinners eyes, if not in the eyes of the public. Our devil laments and mourns and refuses to be comforted because the Major's courage was not of the staying quality—was not sufficient to enable him to face a frowning public. He gratuitously proffers the major some wholesome advice; recommends a healing balm for badly deranged sensibilities. He furnishes a kind hearted, and large souled "fisherman" just in the nick of time, who kindly takes the Major in, (not as the major took our devil in though,) but releived him of his tattered and torn, mad stained and -in besplattered garments, and rehabilitates him in garments nice and clean without spot or wrinkle. Our devil would have been the good "fisherman" to him, only "the breakers—of public opinion—were running too high," for him to stem, hence the fisherman and the "unchanged socks" for a different climate. From our devil's statement it appears that the major and our devil has swapped positions, for the nonce; the major preforming all the functions and ligitimate duties of the devil and vice versa. This accounts for the fisherman and the change of clothes. Next the query presents itsself—what became of the major's cast-away clothing? I dare not even venture a guess.

And in conclusion our devil indulges the hope that he and major will meet again.

Rest easy on that point dear devil, you have that promise; it is sure and steadfast; the place is waiting you both. Who knows, may be I'll be there to witness your greetings.

And now a word to Brother N:

Brother N. goes a long way around to tell us what "we outsiders" would have done. He makes himself out a perfect paragon of virture, innocence and selfrighteousness; he quotes scripture to administer a sly stab in the back of all Christians, while the very quotation he makes, speaks out his own condemnation.

He says "Us outsiders would have left the skirt of our garment in her hands." I agree with you there brother N. And if madam Potiphar had only taken the trouble to shake the [illegible] garment a little, something very much like brother N. would have fallen out sure. N. does not enter into the word Joseph either the beginning or a middle letter. We, none of us, outsiders or otherwise, know what we would do until temptation overtakes us. This being the case Potiphar had better sleep with one eye open till we have been tempted and proved. It is not best to condemn others when in doing so we condemn ourselves.

BASSILIUS.

By the powers in me vested as the devil of the Coquille City HERALD I hereby give notice that the foregoing is as near a correct copy of the original manuscript, which savored of Mosaic Greek, or as near thereto as possible. Theretore, as the subject does not seem to be thoroughly canvassed I can only give a few finishing touches to my former article. Bassilius will please remember that the devil was knocked pretty well out of me when quite young, (I might add, also the life,) by a vigorous, healthy stepmother and a broom. This is the cause of me being a damphool at this writing. The duty that I am trying to perform writing in this paper is simply to help the editor out in getting up manscript for the paper as the paper is all printed at home for $2.00 per year, in advance, not necessarily for publication but as a guarantee of good faith. I am not "lamenting" or "mourning" because the "major's courage was not of the staying quality," for I have come to the conclusion that he stayed too long. The notices, of which the major received several, were gratuitous including the one in the Recorder. The church cast off the line with the major and the lady tied to the end and committed them to the mercy of God. What are they going to do under the circumstances? If the Baptist church cannot conscientiously receive them as members, can any other church? You will see by this why the fisherman was introduced. The devil could do no good staying with the fisherman and the major, and followed the church in hopes of catching more crumbs for his brimstone habitation. If Bassilus will call on us personally, and in the daytime we will venture a guess where the major's clothes went to. Yes, dear Bassilius, we shall meet you, the major and myself. And for all your pretended piety you will have a seat along side of us.

The following advertisement was crowded out of the paper last week for want of space:

A NEW METHOD OF PULLING TEETH.

Go to the Devil.

We had one patient and as he has not died from the effects of our improved method of extracting molars we do not hesitate in recommending it to others. The editor-in-chief tied a rope—it could not be called a string—to a tooth and had us pull it. Hon. Jack Laird made two unsuccessful attempts to pull it but failed. While the male compositor stood looking on and laughing we did the deed. The editor says it does not hurt now—which is a week since we pulled it—and we feel encouraged to have others call and try the experiment. We shall only be with you a short time as business calls us elsewhere and advise you to come soon or the golden apportunity will fly past.

THE DEVIL.

Harbor of Refuge.

Port Orford people have taken the matter in hand to secure another appropriation and the expenditure of it and the former one on that harbor. It was designated by the government engineers as the most elligible place for a harbor of refuge so much needed on the Oregon coast, and these people should have the support of the whole coast. It is proposed that petitions be circulated all over the country, and that the best efforts of our congressional delegation be enlisted in the cause. Its accomplishment is assured if a decent effort is put forth. Let every man in Western Oregon appoint himself a committee of one to secure this much desired object, and Senator Mitchell and Representative Hermann will see that our claims are properly presented and promptly granted. Send along your petition. We'll print a lot and put them where they will do the most good in our part.

Let us give the readers of the HERALD a little timely advice. Hot [illegible] is coming and with it colic, [illegible] morbus, dysentery and diarrhoea. [illegible] The only safe way to combat these diseases, is to keep some reliable remedy at hand, and Chamberlain's [illegible] Diarrhoea Remedy [illegible] all who have tried [illegible] Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea the most successful [illegible] dy will admit that it is prompt, reliable and successful [illegible] medicine known for these [illegible] complaints. It costs but 25 or 50 cents and may be the means of saving you or your family much suffering, if not life itself, before the summer is over. For sale by J. H. Nosler, Coquille City, and W. L. Dixon, Myrtle Point, Oregon.

Johnny Lawrence will build soon, and give up rented quarters, a wise conclusion for any man.

Three gentlemen stopping at a tavern bore the names of More, Strange, and Wright. Said the last: "There is but one rascal in this company, and that is Strange." "Yes," answered Strange, there is one More." "Ay," said More, "that's Wright."
