SUMMER.
Probably no town in Coos county possessing similar beauty of situation, and advantage of location, is so little known, so seldom heard of, as Summer. Embowered in fruit and shade trees, and surrounded by a smiling valley with its broad green pastures, it looks like a gem in emerald setting; while the surrounding circle of dark, fir-clad hills look frowningly down, as if determined to jealously guard their treasure.

Few places present greater attraction to the lover of nature. Let him wander forth at balmy noon, when the rays of the rising sun turn the dewdrops into sparkling diamonds, to explore the valley with its various nooks and dells; let him listen to the murmuring of the rivulets as they come wrattling down from their mountain cradle to swell the brook; or watch the brook as it softly glides in graceful curves through the bright green meadows, ever journeying onward to mingle with the mighty ocean; and he will feel his soul inspired with those pure delights which nature alone can yield. Or at night, when the busy hum of the village is hushed, and all nature has yielded to the power of the drowsy goddess sleep; when the soft rays of the moon bathe the valley in a flood of silvery light, and mellow the outlines of the distant hills: an air of peace and quiet seems to pervade the landscape, and will enter his soul, bringing an ineffable feeling of calm and rest never experienced in the bustling thoroughfares of the world. 'Twas of such a scene that Moore wrote: "And I thought if there's peace to be found in the world, A heart that was humble might hope for it here."

Viewed by the moonlight it seems an enchanted vale where doubt and care never enter, and where the weary pilgrim, tired of life's wanderings, might calmly lay him down to rest and blissfully dream out his existence.

But Summer boasts of more than beauty of landscape; for she has an advantage of location, and is surrounded by a wealth of resource, that will make her, ere long, a town of considerable importance.

The town of Summer was laid out in 1874 by Hon. J. B. Dally, who might be called the father of the town. Mr. Dally also built the steamer Bartha to ply between Sumner and Marshfield; but proving unprofitable her trips were discontinued. The growth of the town up to the present time, has been slow, but now, that her surrounding resources are being developed, we may expect a large increase in population within the next few years. At present the town supports a hotel, a private boarding house, two general merchandise stores, a saloon and a blacksmithshop.

The hotel, owned and kept by Mr. Brown, is a first-class establishment of its kind, and the tables are supplied with everything required to satisfy the wants of the inner man. Mr. Brown is an entertaining landlord, while Mrs. Brown sees that ladies visiting the house are made to enjoy their stay.

The boarding house is kept by Mr. Hudson, and is extensively patronized during the summer months.

Mr. Dally has charge of the store belonging to the O. S. I. Co. The store is supplied with groceries, dry goods, hardware, jewelry, in fact everything that a family usually needs. The store at present is quite large, but for her enlargement is deemed necessary to meet the demands of increasing business.

Mr. Levar keeps a general merchandise store, which is quite extensively supplied, and does a good business. He is also postmaster.

The saloon is kept by our enterprising townsman, Frank Tenneson and is a favorite resort for the "boys." Frank keeps the choicest brands of liquors and cigars, and can supply you with anything from a high priced French wine, with an unpronounceable name, down to a plain American cocktail.

The church and school house are beautifully located on an eminence overlooking the town. The church is of the Baptist denomination, and preachers Scofield and Black hold service alternately. The school has an average attendance of forty pupils, and there are eighty children of school age in the district. Mr. Black Jr. wields the birch, although, judging by the happy look of the pupils, with a considerable degree of clemency.

The logging interest around Summer are quite extensive, and next season there will be fully two hundred men employed in that business. Mr. Lyman Noble logs for the O. S. I. Co., by contract, and next season will run six teams. He has bought the farm adjoining town, belonging to Mr. Merchant, at $6000.00, and will put up a barn on it that will hold two hundred tons of hay besides stabling his stock. Mr. Noble delivers the logs at the railroad landing while the locomotive of the Co., hauls them to the boom.

The O. S. I. Co. own and operate about seven miles of track, in and around Summer, and are still building. One branch of the track is climbing the hills and it is supposed will eventually reach Coquille City. But one locomotive has been used this summer, but a second one will be put on next season.

A good quality of lignite coal has been discovered in some of the gulches on the outskirts of the valley, and will in future be utilized as locomotive fuel, or, perhaps, mined for shipment.

When we look on the vast amount of timber that is tributary to Summer, and consider the many years that must elapse, the hundreds of men that must be employed, and the thousands, aye millions of dollars that must be here expended before the last of these giants of the forest is turned into logs; we cannot help thinking that she has a bright future in store for her. Ere many years shall we see, not only her smiling valley, but her sloping hillsides, dotted with pleasant cottages, the happy homes of an industrious peasantry; then, by the magic of labor, shall the first stump disappear, to be replaced by orchards of fruit and berries; then shall she be, as prospective intended her to be—as present and populous as she is beautiful.

In conclusion, we would remark, that Summer has heretofore been considerably neglected by the county press. The HERALD has determined to make amends for this. In future, Summer will find it open to her news, supporting interests and giving her that press representation which her growing importance demands.

The new "perfecting" or "web" printing press is one of the greatest of modern inventions. These presses are so arranged as to print both sides of the paper at once, the web going over one set of plates and under another set. They are intended for rapid work rather than fine. It is fed from three rolls of paper all at once, requires 48 plates (each the size of a page), and prints 180,000 papers an hour! Each copy is cut, pasted and folded, and the machine will print a paper of any size from two to 48 pages. It is 23 feet long and 10 feet wide, and costs the snug fortune of $100,000!

Born, on Isthmus slough, Nov. 11th, to the wife of Harry Noble, a son.

Capt. Dan Roberts has returned to this port, after a cruise to the north.

The steamer Restless is laid up awaiting a favorable opportunity to go around to the Coquille river, where she will run for passengers and freight.

A short time ago the Bay City mill turned out 90,000 feet of lumber in an eight-hours' run, and could easily have made 100,000 in 10 hours. Taking into consideration the size of the mill this is a fine showing.

The bodies of several of the frozen cowboys who perished in the cold near Sierra Grande, Colorado, were found on the 10th inst.

The Vice-President Opens a Saloon
Ed. HERALD: The following press dispatch will fairly take away the breath of many people who had thought it impossible for the one occupying the second place in the councils of this great country to get down to the level of saloon keeping. The telegram is clipped from the Chicago News and reads: "Washington, D. C., Oct. 25.—A liquor license was to-day granted by the district commissioners to the Hon. Levi P. Morton, the vice-president of the United States, to sell whisky, beer and other spirituous and malt liquors at retail on the premises at the corner of 15th and H streets. This is the first known as the "Shorcham," just completed by Mr. Morton. Under the rules of the district the majority of the property-holders in the block must approve the application for the license. The only property-holder besides the vice-president is Mr. John R. McLean, the proprietor of the Cincinnati Enquirer. Mr. McLean appears as sponsor on the application. Mr. Morton's bar-room will be the handsomest in the city."

What will the grand army of prohibitionists of the country say to this conspicuous slap in the face? And may not the most hopeful of temperance workers despair when the vice-president of the United States lends dignity to a calling which, by the common consent of mankind the world over is denominated as degrading and disreputable?

And in this vice presidential saloon, there is an apparent purpose on Mr. Morton's part to greedily, selfishly, make the most of his opportunities and surroundings. He presides over the U. S. senate and has to do with senators and other dignitaries of the government, and U. S. senators are not notoriously abstemious. What is more natural than that Mr. Morton shall figure upon the lion's share of the senatorial patronage at the bar of his own saloon?

But there is, to say the least, a very awkward phase to this senatorial patronage which the vice-president may frequently find himself called upon to grapple with. As presiding officer of the senate, the vice-president must enforce order, decorum and sobriety during the sitting of that body. It has happened in the past that not only subordinate attaches of the senate have been disciplined for drunkenness, but senators themselves have staggered to their seats; how much more likely are men to give rein to their appetites for strong drink in and about the senate when the presiding officer of that body is himself the proprietor of a ginmill? And will it not be most natural when a senator is called to order by the vice-president for making a maudlin exhibition of himself, for such senator to remind the presiding deity that he imbued his "licker" at the vice-president's grog-shop.

The vice-president, may however, take credit to himself for setting the example of thriftiness before the people. His two large banks—one in London and another in New York, his large salary and then his gilded palace of sin at the capital, ought, it would seem, afford Mr. Morton a fair income.

Yours, VERITAS.

In a recent article in the Youth's Companion, on "How to cure a cold," the writer advises a lemonade to be taken at bed time. It is a dangerous treatment, especially during the severe cold weather of the winter months, as it opens the pores of the skin and leaves the system in such condition that another and much more severe cold is almost certain to be contracted. Many years constant use and the experience of thousands of persons of all ages, has fully demonstrated that there is nothing better for a severe cold than Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It acts in perfect harmony with nature, relieves the lungs, liquefies the tough tenacious mucus, making it easier to expectorate, and restores the system to a strong and healthy condition. Then he clasped her with emotion,
Draw the maiden to his breast,
Whispered words of true devotion,
The old, old tale,—you know the rest.
From his orbed arms upspringing,
With a look no turned away,
And her voice with sorrow ringing,
"I shall not see my home again."

This dramatic speech broke him up badly; but when she explained that her apprehensions were founded on the fact of an inherited predisposition to consumption, he was so overcome that he could not utter a word. Consumption fatens its hold upon its victims, and it is a slow and insidious approach. The "Golden Medical Discovery" has cured thousands of cases of this fatal malady. It is a new and powerful health-giver. It is so far advanced in order to be effective. It takes time, and given a fair trial, it will cure a cough, whether it be acute or chronic. Shortness of Breath, Spitting of Blood, Asthma, Severe Coughs, and kindred affections, it is an infallible remedy.
