Roseburg-Coos Bay Stage Held Up. The Roseburg Review of last Thursday gives this statement of the stage robbery near that place, in which we are interested but have received no later particulars:

This morning about 9 o'clock the stage bound for Coos bay, George Lainger, driver, was held up on the Hoover hill, 4 miles this side of Olalla postoffice. A lone highwayman stepped out of the brush and commanded a halt at the muzzle of a gun. The driver threw out the way pouch, telling the robber that there was nothing else but papers, thus saving the through letter pouch in which were at least six registered packages.

At the Polk county Athletic club races, held at Monmouth last week, there was much interest and large crowds gathered at the racetrack. The wheel races were special attractions and drew contestants from California, Washington, and from all points in this state.

The road between this city and the bay is in splendid condition—said to be never better. The supervisors worked it at the right time and in the right manner, and deserve due praise. Now if we had wide-tired vehicles, the road would be good the year round, and with the shading timber cut out a permanently good road to the good name of our county.

Four additional witnesses completed the alibi of Senator Buck, established at the inquest yesterday. I. W. Lees, chief of detectives, was the last witness. He said no stranger committed the crime. The murderer was thoroughly familiar with the premises. The crime was not for the purpose of robbery. The murder was brutal. The wounds were inflicted by a pistol used as a club. The jury returned a verdict of murder by an unknown person.

Ashland Tidings: One of the Polk county men is Jesse Berry, of Dallas, who a few days ago received a check for $10,000 from an aged maiden relative, named Elizabeth Jeanes, of Philadelphia. "Crucible" as a Shoulder-Blitzer. EDITOR HERALD: We notice in the Coast Mail of the 6th inst., a communication from "Crucible," overflowing with ordinary goldbug argument. While it does require quires to do the work and the silver, it coined, goes into the channels of trade, increasing our money volume, thereby preventing the money-changers from manipulating things as they do when money is more scarce. "Crucible" says we have passed through a money panic. We would like the gentleman to tell us who discovered that hundreds of thousands of business men, farmers and bank depositors have gone through their last dollar, but "the end is not yet."

"Crucible" would gladly attribute it all to the Democrats, but, hold; did not Sherman, the Oregonian, and other gold-standard advocates tell us if the purchasing power of the Sherman act were repealed a wave of prosperity would sweep over the nation and gold would flow to us? Did not Gladstone say that it would be the height of folly for England to advocate an increase of the money volume, as she was a creditor nation? And is our nation not a debtor? Hence would not we be benefited by increasing our money volume?

"Crucible" farther says that Weaver advocates abandoning the Omaha platform. For the sake of argument, suppose he should, would our party have to disband? Not much. No one man can control or disband the Populist party. The Oregonian can strike "free silver" from the Republican party of Oregon, and Grover I can send his hirelings (paid by the people) out to hoodoo the public, but no plutocratic syndicate can disband the party that pins its faith to "equal rights to all and special privileges to none."

Crucible says, "if the Democrats were to demand the annexation of the United States to Great Britain, it would not hurt them in the least." It would seem, to a casual observer, that we had as well be annexed to England, as otherwise, so long as we are compelled to pay her interest enough to support her. Issue more bonds, Grover-Sherman, for fear silver will drive the gold off before that begins to operate.

Westminster, Cal., March 21, 1894.—Some time ago, on awakening one morning, I found that I had rheumatism in my knee so badly that, as I remarked to my wife, it would be impossible for me to attend to business that day. Remembering that I had some of Chamberlain's Pain Balm in my store I sent for a bottle, and rubbed the afflicted parts thoroughly with it, according to directions, and within an hour I was completely relieved. One application had done the business. It is the best liniment on the market, and I sell it under a positive guarantee.—R. T. Harris. For sale by Dr. S. L. Leneve, druggist.

She—I heard such a good joke today. I have been hugging myself about it ever since. He—You must be tired. Let me assist you. He—You are the only girl who can make me happy. She (coquettishly)—Sure! He—Yes; I have tried all the others.

Teacher—Which letter is the next one to the letter H? Boy—Duomo, ma'am. Teacher—What have I on both sides of my nose? Boy—Freckles, ma'am.
