Before the law was written down with parchment or with pen:
Before the law made citizens, the moral law made men.
Law stands for human rights, but when it fails those rights to give,
Then let law die, my brother, but let human beings live.

A MAN OF THE PEOPLE

Gov. Altgeld Speaks Out in Meeting and Tells the Endeavorers What Constitutes True Manhood.

Efforts Can Be Best Applied by Fearless Adherence to Principle Regardless of Public Opinion.

To what good end can the moral and other influences of the 2,000,000 Christian Endeavorers be best directed?

This question prompted S. L. Mershon, of 185 Dearborn street, to look for advice from the advanced thinkers of the country, men outside of his organization—secular leaders they might be called. A letter addressed to John P. Altgeld has elicited a characteristic response. The governor's views are expressed in this letter:

"Springfield, Ill., Jan. 4.—S. L. Mershon, Room 214, 185 Dearborn street, Chicago. Dear Sir:—You ask what the 2,000,000 Christian Endeavorers can do to advance the welfare of the country. As you look to other sources for light from a religious standpoint, you naturally expect me to answer from a purely secular point of view.

"Your country, like your God, demands reality, demands earnest purpose. It demands absolute honesty and candor.

"This country never before called so loudly and so earnestly as it does today for character, for real manhood and womanhood, not of the dazzling, showy kind that depends on wealth and fashion, but that quiet, self-reliant manhood and womanhood that seeks only the right and dares to do it. This country is calling loudly for strong public men who shall stand for principle and be leaders of thought instead of being only torchlight heroes.

"In some portions of the world governments seem to be only gigantic machines which serve as a convenience for despoiling the people, and these governments do all in their power to prevent the enlightenment of the masses.

"In this country, government, being in the hands of the people, has been conducted for a century on the theory that it should be their protector and not despoiler.

"I will not discuss the question as to what effect the recent great concentration of capital and consequent corruptions are going to have.

"They will, however, produce the same results here that they have produced in all countries and in all times where they abounded, unless we can find some different method of dealing with them. The result has been summed up in the lines:

"Ill fares the land, to hastening ills a prey,
Where wealth accumulates and men decay.

"Everything, therefore, depends on character, on manhood and womanhood—if these shall decay there will be little left worth preserving. The government will be what the people make it. If they possess earnestness and high principle, so will the government. If they are rotten at the heart, it will be also.

"Among all people and in all countries wealth, power and fashion go together; they arrange themselves at the top, and, impelled by the eternal law of selfishness, they assume to control everything in their own interest, without considering how others may be affected.

As the press is controlled by wealth, it is on that side, and the elements at the top, whether in society or nature, tend to form a crust which bears more or less heavily on the elements beneath, and naturally tends to resist any upward movement of what there is below. On the other hand, the Almighty seems to have decreed that for a healthy existence of society there must be a constant development, a constant growth from the bottom upward.

"All great reform movements have emanated from the bottom. Even the Christian religion came not through the splendor at the top, but through the suffering at the bottom.

"Under the fierce law of competition any upward struggle encounters resistance from the elements above. In some cases the crust had become so hard and formidable that it could only be broken with human blood. But under republican institutions there should be such a constant upward movement from the people, and such a development that no formidable crust could be formed to resist farther growth.

"As the elements at the top are the most attractive and possess those things that are sought after by men, theirs is always the fashionable and even popular side, and those people who constitute what is sometimes called the 'hanging on class' are always arrayed on that side, and are generally the most loud in denouncing any innovation.

"At the time of the revolution the fashionable people were Tories. During the slavery agitation most of the wealthy sympathized with the slave-holders—even cultured Boston closed its doors to such a splendid specimen of noble and cultured manhood as Wendell Phillips. The early temperance workers were not only denounced, but were egged. In fact, every movement that has benefited humanity has met the fierce hostility of those people who claimed to possess the intelligence and culture of the time, and who should have been friendly.

"What is still more remarkable is the fact that this hostility assumes to speak for patriotism. The Tories talked patriotism. The abolitionists were denounced as agitators who disturbed the peace of the country. The temperance advocates were condemned as fanatics who disturbed the good order of the community. The legislation to take women and children out of the mines in England and the subsequent movement to shorten the hours of labor from fourteen and fifteen to ten was bitterly opposed even by the bishops in parliament on the ground that it threatened the supremacy of England.

"In this country every effort to bring about a permanent improvement in the conditions which surround the men who toil with their hands is denounced as dangerous agitation. No matter what wrong you attempt to right there will be people to denounce you, and generally they will be people who are in some ways good people and who make much pretension to respectability. You will find that the side of the strong will always be the most ably and the most forcibly presented through the press and otherwise, while from the very nature of the case the side of the weak, even when right, will be imperfectly presented. Consequently the public is often misinformed, so that public sentiment, for awhile, will often run against the right. It was so even in Christ's time. Yet, if you would serve your country you must do justice—justice to the weak as well as the strong—and you must not stop to inquire what will be popular.

"Therefore, unless you are prepared to stand alone and be utterly independent and indifferent as to who approves or who disapproves, it will not be worth your while to think about doing much for your country. In that case it will not be worth while to get accurate information on any public question nor to have convictions on any subject, for it might be inconvenient to suppress them. Just accept newspaper statements and misstatements and go with the crowd. That is the course usually pursued by the people who seek popularity, and although it is a sign of weakness, yet it is the easy way.

"On the other hand, if you are prepared to serve your country in the same manner as you must serve your God to be heard by him at all, that is—be deeply in earnest, ask only what is the right; seek for facts; have convictions and act on them; and care not who approves or disapproves. If you believe that public men should be positive leaders instead of weak followers, then I repeat that your country is calling for you and I will remind you that the despised teachers of one age often become the heroes of the next, and that those measures which have to be nursed through great tribulation in one age frequently become the controlling forces of the next, in fact, become in turn themselves a part of the crust and have, in time, to give way to new forces. I will further remind you that the great men and women of the past who led the human race onward were not reared, as a rule, in the lap of luxury. They came, as a rule, from the bottom and not from the top; they were familiar with hardships and were acquainted with sorrow.

"The lesson of their careers is that one hour spent in contemplating the stars and gazing into the silent depths of the universe will lift you higher and carry you farther, will give you more lofty purpose and elevation of soul than would a whole year spent in the most splendid drawing rooms of the land. Very respectfully yours,
JOHN P. ALTGELD.

"A Money Maker."
The Ashland Tidings of the 6th inst., under the above heading, contains this reference to A. L. Neil and his thrifty dairying experiences in that section, which we believe will be interesting to many of the HERALD'S readers. The gentleman is a brother of our countyman W. L. Neil, now occupying Adam Wimer's ranch above this place, who is also a practical and progressive dairyman. The Tidings says:

"L. A. Neil, one of the thrifty dairymen and farmers of this section, who resides just south of Ashland, has figured up the returns from a single cow of his herd during the past nine years, which go to show that there is profit in a good milk cow on the farm. The cow in question is a half-blood Jersey and Durham, and has been giving milk for nine years steadily. Mr. Neil has figured up the amount he has realized from her during that time, and from the sale of the calves she has raised, and finds that it foots up $995, or an average of over $110 per year. This is the actual cash returns easily traced and does not include any allowance for the skim milk that during that length of time has fattened a good many hogs. The cow is now 12 years old and apparently as valuable as ever as a money-maker. The Tidings dairy editor would be glad to hear of a record surpassing this in this section, or any other. Mr. Neil feeds his dairy cows 'milk feed' (wheat bran and shorts, mixed) during the winter months, but during seven months in the year rich alfalfa pasture supports them without any chop-feed. The butter product was sold at from 20c to 25c per lb."

It is the same old story and yet constantly recurring that Simmons Liver Regulator is the best family medicine. "We have used it in our family for eight years and find it the best medicine we ever used. We think there is no such medicine as Simmons Liver Regulator."—Mrs. M. E. S. Adington, Franklin, N. C. "Each member of our family uses it as occasion requires."—W. B. Smith, Mt. Vernon, Ky.

It was in a North Side drug store the funny conversation between Gottlieb Fricks and Adolph Goeke was heard. Fricks was at the telephone. "Hello, is dis Goeke?" he asked. Evidently the answer that came back was in the affirmative for his next remarks were: "Vell, I want some oats and two bales of hay sent out by de house already yet. Who is it for? Vy, it's for my horse, of course—don't get gay mit me."

Salesman—Do you want to have your goods sent by any particular express? Customer—Certainly, if you can find a particular express, I can't.

"Gussie, why did you refuse Smithett? Did he show the cloven foot?" No; but he showed the cloven treads."

Proof of Insanity.

The attorney for the defense became impressive.

"Do you ask proof that my client is insane?" he asked. "Well, there is plenty of it. When he came to engage my services he promised me $10,000 if I would take the case, and yet he hasn't a cent. Is that the act of a sane man?"

"Did you know that when you took the case?" asked the attorney for the prosecution.

"Certainly."
"Well, I can't see that that helps him in anyway, but it would make a splendid plea for you, if you were on trial."

The situations in which men frequently find themselves in dreamland was well illustrated by an Irishman who, when recently relating a remarkable dream he had had, remarked: "Thin I thought I was a walkin' about naked wid me hands in me pockets."

Bobby—Papa, who was the man who woke to find himself famous?
Mr. Wallace—Some fellow who snored in a sleeping-car, I guess.

PATENTS

NOTICE TO INVENTORS.

There was never a time in the history of our country when the demand for inventions and improvements in the arts and sciences generally was so great as now. The conveniences of mankind in the factory and workshop, the household, on the farm, and in official life, require continual accessions to the apparatuses and implements of each in order to save labor, time and expense. The political change in the administration of government does not affect the progress of the American inventor, who being on the alert and ready to perceive the existing deficiencies, does not permit the affairs of the government to deter him from quickly conceiving the remedy to overcome existing discrepancies.

Too great care cannot be exercised in choosing a competent and skillful attorney to prepare and prosecute an application for patent. Valuable interests have been lost and destroyed in innumerable instances by the employment of incompetent counsel, and especially is this advice applicable to those who adopt the "No patent, no pay" system. Inventors who entrust their business to this class of attorneys do so at an imminent risk, as the breadth and strength of the patent is never considered in view of a quick endeavor to get an allowance and obtain the fee then due. THE PRESS CLAIMS COMPANY, John Wedderburn, General Manager, 618 F street, N. W., Washington, D. C., representing a large number of important daily and weekly papers, as well as general periodicals of the country, was instituted to protect its patrons from the unsafe methods heretofore employed in this line of business. The said company is prepared to take charge of all patent business entrusted to it for reasonable fees, and prepares and prosecutes applications generally, including mechanical inventions, design patents, trade-marks, labels, copyrights, interferences, infringements, validity reports, and gives especial attention to rejected cases. It is also prepared to enter into competition with any firm in securing foreign patents.

IN ADDITION TO THE ABOVE CLUBBING RATES FOR PAPERS, We have concluded to offer the following books as premiums for cash subscribers:

Coin's Financial School, price 25 cents, and Coin's Hand-Book, price 10 cents, and one year's subscription to the HERALD, all for $2.

Coin's Financial School, by W. H. Harvey; illustrated, 150 pages and 64 illustrations. It simplifies the financial subject so that an ordinary schoolboy can understand it. It is the text book of the masses, absolutely reliable as to facts and figures, and the most interesting and entertaining book on the subject of money published.

Coin's Hand-Book, by W. H. Harvey; deals with the elementary principles of money and statistics.
Shylock, price 25 cents, and The Anarchists of Wealth, price 10 cents, and the HERALD one year, all for $2.

In reference to the above publications, it is necessary to say but little. Everybody knows what magnificent papers the "Examiner" and "Call" of San Francisco are, as also the Thrice-a-Week New York World and Twice-a-Week Boston Traveler—each of which are worth the price asked. The Home and Farm is a splendid agricultural and family journal, large 16-page paper, and of itself worth the price of both papers. Womankind is a most attractive and entertaining home monthly, heartily welcomed by and instructive to the mothers and daughters; and the Farm News is edited by a staff of experienced agricultural writers, is handsomely printed, and contains what the practical farmer wants. Word and Works is Rev. Irl Hicks' paper of St. Louis. This is a scientific journal and is full of excellent reading matter. The Almanac, given with the paper, contains 100 pages of forecasts and other useful information and is a valuable book.

The Road is a large, wide-a-wide Populist paper, published by "middle-of-the-road" Herbert George, of Denver, Col. Of The Silver Knight it is only necessary to say that it is Senator Stewart's fearless paper, and is published in Washington City. Our Nation's Crisis is best advertised by saying that it is owned and edited by Gov. Waite, Colorado's great Populist governor, the War-horse of the Rockies. It is good reading. The Rural Northwest is an Oregon farm journal, and is clean and well managed. It will be worth the price we charge for both papers to any farmer in Coos county.

These Club Rates, of course, imply payment in advance.

We can only make these splendid terms where cash is paid in advance.
