

Accountant: The Labor Exchange is the best form of co-operation because of its adaptability, as it can be made successful in any community even under adverse circumstances.

The Labor Exchange is a National institution that in spite of the sneers and prophecies of failure which it met at its inception and that have followed it along its course, seems to have reached a point where it may demand respect.

Accountant: If the wages of the laborer are reduced, then his power to purchase and consume has been reduced. If he continues to produce at the same old rate while his purchasing and consuming powers are lessened he is bound to create a surplus, is he not?

Accountant: Just as the individual wagon maker, shoe maker, weaver, tailors, butchers and packers, and hundreds of other small manufacturers have been crowded out by the establishment of immense factories, so are retail and commission merchants, small jobbers and traveling salesmen being slowly and surely supplanted by the department stores.

Accountant: The more the cost of production is reduced, under present conditions, the less the producers get, and every piece of labor-saving machinery used, swells the army of unemployed.

Inland Empire: Debt-system is a system in which the worker is burdened with the care of both himself and his products, while the only care of the lender is the tribute, in the collection of which he may command the assistance of the government if it be needed.

The Sugar Beet Question. SPALDING HAS COMPANY.

What effect upon a locality will the growing of sugar beets have upon general agriculture in that region? is a question which very naturally arises under the present agitation of the sugar-beet question. Although it might be an advantage to have a material reduction in the agricultural products in some localities, sugar-beet growing need not necessarily bring about such reduction.

No merchants, nowadays, would dare to ask big prices unless you want credit which means "uncertainty of pay," maybe. They sell goods cheap, but there are others who sell cheaper, and still others who sell cheaper, and still others who sell cheaper.

There was a great amount of political conviction sacrificed, last November, for bread and butter, which is not materializing. The 1897 wool clip is the best on record. San Francisco, May 23. - Several persons on the wharf at the foot of Third street this morning saw a woman hurled into the water from the end of the pier, and a man run away leaving his victim to struggle in the churning tide. Boatman James Peterson jumped into his boat and rescued her. The woman's name is Mrs. Mary Miller. The man who is charged with attempting to drown her, is William Herrin, who was locked up in the city prison on a charge of assault to murder. He refused to make any statement, but Mrs. Miller asserts that the assault was the result of a feud of long standing, the two families having once occupied different floors of the same house.
