A Visit to Myrtle Point.

A representative of this paper visited Myrtle Point last week, the first time for about 3 years, and was surprised to note the important improvements in that busy little town. After stepping on board of the train at the depot in this city, we were soon rushing up the valley at a good speed, passing through rich cultivated fields, that give promise of yielding bountiful crops, and through pastures green, in which were feeding bands of dairy cows that supply the milk for the creameries in the valley. The model farms of J. F. Schroeder, T. Devereux, Capt. Butler, R. C. Dement, A. H. Schroeder and Archie McNair presented beautiful pictures of thrift and comfort, and a stranger can get a good idea of the wonderful powers of production our bottom lands contain. While taking this momentary ride on the rail from our town to our neighboring city, the rich level lands that the train pounced upon after crossing the North Fork, just as we approach Myrtle Point, are also covered with a wonderful growth of vegetation and the two valleys of the south and north branches of the river, the famous Sugarloaf mountain and lower hills, all combined and unrolled to our veiw as lovely a picture as can usually be seen, and these magnificent landscape views, with lofty mountains studded with forests of mammoth trees in the back ground, added profound interest to the picture. Myrtle Point is located on a beautiful bench that seems to have been pushed out from the Sugarloaf mountain on purpose for a lovely town site, and Hon. B. Hermann showed good judgment when he commenced building up a town about two decades since on this favored spot. That gentleman's elegant brick structure is a surprise to one as he approaches the magnificent building as he emerges from the wilderness, so to speak, in other parts of the county.

There are several good and substantial edifices in the town that speak well for the enterprise of its inhabitant. Spruce street runs back on top of the plateau across a dozen blocks, and along each side of that avenue are business houses that would be a credit to a town of greater pretensions. First Hermann & Brown have on elegant selection of merchandise in the large brick, in which is also the postoffice, and F. P. Hermann, an old friend of the HERALD, has established a reputation as an accommodating and efficient deputy postmaster, whom we understand will succeed Capt. E. Bender in full charge of that important office.

Wells, Fargo & Co. have their office on the same block, and it is kept by E. A. Dodge, one of the most efficient young business men of Coos county. He also has the agency for the railroad passenger and freight line to Marshfield on the bay. His office is in rooms with his father, Hon. O. Dodge, who is U. S. commissioner. The latter's office has doubtless transacted about one-third of the business for the government land office of this district during the last six years. This place seemed to be next to the postoffice in importance and business, being visited by land searchers constantly.

Will Guild has a confectionery and barbershop between the express office and postoffice that presented a very clever appearance, and he is a very agreeable gentleman.

On up the street we noted Thos. Cornelius, confectioner, B. C. Lehmanowsky, general merchandise, J. Machado, grocer and provision dealer. Each deserves a notice, for as tradesman they are energetic and one can see at a glance that they are prospering. Mr. Machado once lived in our city, and we were pleased with the neat appearence of his elegant quarters.

The hardware stores of Huling & Lundy and Wm. Volkmar are opposite to each other in this block, and they show that they are well patronized.

Dr. Roberds, who arrived at the place two months ago, has an office well supplied with drugs, and we learned that he had already established a good practice.

East of Huling & Lundy's hardware house, Mrs. D. Giles has a cosy and well-stocked millinery store, and the office of the Upper-River Department of the HERALD is located in the upper story of the building. The able editor of that portion of our weekly budget of news has a snug parlor and sleeping apartments, where he enjoys visits from friends and spins out his interesting and truthful articles for the press.

[This article, we find, would be too long for our crowded columns, and we will continue it next week.]

None so Blind as Those Who Will Not See.

TO THE EDITOR: There is a stolidity manifest by many persons that is perfectly astonishing. I got into conversation with a man a few days ago, and though his business is such that he has to be appealing to the public for money, yet he made this startling assertion, that there was no derth of money. The trouble with such people is that they do not take as testimony the statements of the common people that they hear every day, but look to the statement of bank clearances away in New York or London.

His argument in regard to the great depreciation of property was that the property itself had been held away above its real worth, and as a consequence had to come down to its true value; that money moved along perfectly steady, not subject to fluctuations, as it was something of fixed and regular value. A thousand illustrations, and even very hard pressure, does not seem to have any effect upon the minds of persons who have become crystalized into a political mould and are ready to follow a party name anywhere it may go. Such people have to be waited for, as nothing but time can have any effect upon them, and the money cormorants know the value of such fellows to them and humor their whims as they use them for the blind stool-pigeons they are. After such fellows get down to the position of serfs they will not have wills enough of their own to ever give very much trouble. The statement of the man who is tramping from place to place in vain search of work is just as good as that of the millionaire, and it is not at all improbable but what, when it came to a true statement in regard to the business affairs of their own, the tramp's statement might contain the most truth, but it is the common custom to pass the statement of the tramp by without as much as giving it one moment's consideration, or allowing it to have one grain of valuable information in it, while the statement of the millionaire is taken as all correct and as being entirely above being questioned. The rich appear to have a power hypnotic that fixes with a spell akin to the fetich the minds of the toiling masses so that they cannot evolve an independent thought of their own, and the poor, blind dupes stand ready to strike down any one who may try to make them aware of their own blindness.

There appears to be but one thing to do, and that is to keep adding line upon line and precept upon precept, and while we are patiently waiting, be careful that we allow no compromise that will vitiate the true and correct principles that we advocate. THOMAS BUCKMAN.

Marvin McIvor, in S. F. Star: "Judging by their actions the Americans in London are a pretty fair lot of flunkeys. Mark Twain is the only decent one in the assortment, and I guess he is as much ashamed of his countrymen as we are. What the Britishers think of them can be imagined. The shoddy aristocracy of this country is something to make the Sphinx laugh; it would bring tears of merriment to the dusty eyes of a dead Pharaoh; it makes intelligent people experience a feeling that is akin to nausea. I am willing to respect the queen as a woman, and for the many estimable virtues she has shown as a wife and mother. But further than that I cannot go. The two-legged jackals who toady to the English aristocracy and insult our Stars and Stripes by claiming it as their own, are not worthy the contemptuous indignation that naturally arises in the breast of every honest American. Their names should be published in every comic weekly in the country. As jokes they might be less offensive than if we are supposed to take them seriously."

Sacramento Bee: People have often wondered what the naval officer at San Francisco does for an excuse for drawing his salary. It appears now that it is to see that "sheep dip" is not shipped out of the state labeled "California brandy." It was for a time thought that the only duty of that officer was to travel in the east making gold-bug speeches.

Kansas City Star: It is curious that the corporations, with all of their pretended shrewdness, have never discovered how much cheaper it would be to create a feeling of good will among the people by a friendly and liberal policy toward the public than it is to forestall hostile legislation by the use of boodle.

Ruskin says: "It is as much a theft to steal with a long head as with a long arm." He says that the remark that "a man may do what he pleases with his own money" is equivalent to saying "If a man's powder and shot are his own, he may shoot where he pleases."

The New York Tribune thinks that abbreviations are sometimes objectionable, as, for instance, when the Tennessee centennial exposition is referred to as "the Tenn. Cent. Show."

The latest development of "the new woman" is a New England woman train-wrecker. New England is "no slouch."

Second Edition of the Strike at Newport.

ED. HERALD: One of the Marshfield newspapers having stated that Goodall, Perkins & Co. had abrogated a former rule, intending to compel their hands at the mine to work ten hours instead of nine, as heretofore, and to find their own oil and wick for the lamps, I forgot to mention in my last communication that no credence should be placed in any statement made by that paper in reference to the troubles of labor, and published in its columns, particularly when discussing such matters in connection with the Newport coal mine. The sheet is managed by a company, having no apparent editor, and one of that company enjoys a position at Newport; consequently, nothing of an impartial color can be seen in its word-painting. As a frozen truth it is persistent in its advocacy of capitalistic tyranny, and a perpetual apologist of the extreme measures pursued by the undignified despots who govern that mine.

As a fact, coal miners always find their own oil, lamp-wick, powder, fuse, etc. They are taxed 75 cents per month for a doctor; they are taxed for a blacksmith, and what, with employment—there being too many men—for only ten or fifteen days in a month, and the infernal truck system inaugurated by those Republican party progenitors of prosperity, the miners are driven into the cage of demoralization and death until all hope of extricating their bodies in tact from the grasping tentacles of this avaricious corporation has vanished. Now, let us go back a little way and compare a past rule of this firm, that is composed of prosperity producing barnacles, with a rule that is now to be made, and is, already, public property.

Formerly their rules, or I should say one of them, was, when it became necessary to disharge some men, to discharge single men and to retain those with families. Now, a change has come. Owing to the fact that the pressure has been too great on all the miners, married and single, and there being great danger consequent on overcrowding the mines that the men with families might get into irremediable debt, and the profits from that damnable store truck system would decrease, consequently, the men with families are to be weeded out.

Oh! the blessings of Republican party prosperity! Fall down on your knees and howl with delight in the fact that one of this benevolent firm is an U. S. senator and is working with tooth and nail to promote prosperity by the very doubtful method of forcing families, the heads of which have been in his employ, into the poorhouse. Having ground them between the upper and nether millstones, they are now to be ejected and abandoned. In trying to compel miners to work ten hours, and no less, their object, knowing that some men will work all day and part of the night, enabling them to send out plenty of coal on certain days, is to show that the miners are making big wages. On this taking place, they will attempt a reduction of wages. The mine being shut down when the bunkers are full, and the men being allowed to go in and get coal ready, it is easy to see through the scheme of the bosses. MINER.

Riotous Riverton.

Last Sunday proved a disorderly and riotous one at Riverton, resulting in the drowning or murder of a colored miner named Charley Stinson, and the battering and bruising of several others. It was the 4th of July and being celebrated by drunkenness, rowdyism and riotousness, chiefly among the colored miners, but including some white men. The man Stinson was missed, but Monday evening was found at the bottom of the river. His head was badly battered, strongly evidencing foul play. The river boatmen mention the crowds as they passed, and observed that as high as three fights were going on at one and the same time, beer bottles and other dangerous missiles playing a prominent part. Sheriff Gage went down immediately on learning of the affair, and after the negro's body was found went again with Justice Harlocker as acting coroner to investigate the case.

Up to going to press we have received no additional news.

Not the least of Victoria's honors are those which come of her having been the mother of nine children, a grandmother and a great-grandmother. The advance in morality among those in elevated station has been most marked since her accession to the throne. No sooner had her immediate predecessor been crowned than he made it his first business to provide places and titles for his ten illegitimate children, the oldest of whom was made an earl.

Roseburg Review: The next district conference of the M. E. church, south, will be held at Medford. The recent meeting at Myrtle Creek was quite a success, and the reports indicated that the church is in a prosperous, growing condition.

UPPER-RIVER DEPARTMENT.

Myrtle Point and the Upper-Coquille and What is Going on There.

The meddler is still in town, though comparatively harmless.

The Grand Army Encampment will begin at this place on Wednesday, August 18th.

County Clerk Edward Rackleff and family celebrated independence day at Myrtle Point.

The penny catchers were very active here during the celebration, and apparently made a good collection.

Dr. Elgin is visiting town. Every one is glad to see the genial doctor, when he comes down from his mountain retreat.

Lost! A fine singer and very pretty; any one capturing the bird and returning the same to W. T. Reed will receive a liberal reward.

E. A. Adams, the Bazar man, now occupies one department of J. L. Lewellen's new building on Spruce street, having moved therein on last Monday.

Three large horses, weighing from 1300 to 1500 lbs. each, were sold at this place last week at constable's sale for the grand total of $82.50—an average of only $27.50 each.

Little Mable Lehnherr, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Lehnherr, has been quite sick for the past few days. At this writing she is slightly improved. Dr. K. A. Leep is the attending physician.

The junior editor of the HERALD visited our burg Wednesday of last week. He was a guest of Commissioner Orvil Dodge, but gave our office a pleasant call. We look for a write-up of his trip.

Orvil Dodge's late appointment is simply U. S. commissioner instead of U. S. court commissioner as formerly. Mr. Dodge took charge of his new office on July 1st to the pleasure of his many friends who know his ability and appreciate his qualifications.

It is expected that the city council will invite the pioneers to meet at this place in August, and our citizens would no doubt give a hearty and sincere welcome to those who were the advance agents of civilization in this state, and especially of Coos county.

Chas. F. Dodge has leased the Hermann livery barn, recently vacated by Barklow Bro's, and has supplied the same with feed, teams and buggies, and is now prepared to furnish the public with any thing in his line. Mr. Dodge is a rustler and is sure to make a go of anything he undertakes.

Evangelist Ross is still with us and doing good work at each meeting. He is a fearless upholder of true Christianity, who does not hesitate to point out to the hypocrites the way their lives betray them, and make of them a stumbling block in the path of all honest people. We believe his labors at this place will not be without reward.

E. M. Hoffman has purchased the Alva Rowley homestead, situated near the junction of the South and Middle Forks of the Coquille river. Mr. Hoffman is an energetic and entrprising young man, and one of the few who still tills the soil located by his father in the pioneer days of Oregon, to which he is continually adding new tracts.

M. R. Lee and wife of Bandon took in the celebration at this place on July 3d.

Our city will entertain the Pioneers' Association and reunion, to convene August 15th.

Every livery team available in town was engaged for the Lee celebration on the 5th.

Jesse Warfield returned to Myrtle Point last Sunday from Gilliam county. He gives a very nice report of the bunchgrass county.

A large number of men's and boys suits arrived by express last week, which had been ordered in view of their arrival before the 4th.

Many of our citizens took in the celebration at Big creek and Lee on Sunday and Monday respectively. They report a grand time.

Mrs. B. C. Lehmanowsky left on the stage last Monday for Portland. She goes to visit with her grand-parents, Dr. W. C. Ransom and wife, of that city.

Misses Birdie Walker, Bertha Prey, Bertha Roberts, Katie Braden, Lulu Walker and other of our local teachers spent the 4th in Myrtle Point, choosing their home town as the proper place to celebrate.

Noble & Saunder's crew of workmen at the government works took out a cottonwood log Thursday at "Nancy's Punch," below Norway, that was 100 feet long and 5 feet in diameter at the butt. The snag lay across the river and was the principal cause of the shoals at that place.

Chas. W. Hill secured a filing on a homestead in the U. S. commissioner's office this week. There are other worthy young men neglecting to accept that great bounty of our government, and people from the east are coming here often and securing public lands. Wake up, young man, or your homestead right will be lost.

The 4th of July was appropriately observed in Myrtle Point by our good citizens and friends from adjacent towns and country. A fine program was arranged and carried out to the letter by the band boys and associates. An entertaining matinee was given in the opera hall in the afternoon by the local dramatic club. The order on the streets was remarked by many to be first-class. All in all the occasion was a complete success.

Last week Judge E. Bender, one of our most enterprising citizens, bid farewell and took his departure for Washington, D. C., where he will remain indefinitely. Mr. Bender came to Coos county over 20 years ago and has served the people in various official capacities almost ever since, and in each and every instance has acquitted himself in a most creditable manner. He is a familiar character in the history of Myrtle Point, being one of its founders and a continual resident since. He has many warm friends throughout the whole county, with whom we join in wishing him a pleasant journey, pleasant associatons, a prosperous sojourn and a timely return. A host of his friends called upon him and gave him a rousing and hearty reception, under the auspices of the city council at Opera Hall. They also presented him with a handsome gold-headed cane as a memento of their good wishes.

A Successful Year.

The State Normal School at Monmouth has just closed a very successful year, with an unusually large enrollment in its professional classes. The school offers a strong academic and professional course of three years, designed throughout to train for teaching in the public schools.

The catalogue of the school shows that fully 90 per cent of its graduates of recent years are, at present, engaged in teaching, which argues well for the work of the Normal.

Reports received from the canneries in Astoria Saturday were to the effect that fish were running better than during the past few days, and the size and quality continue above the average. At Kinney's 20 fish were picked out of one lot, each of which weighed from 60 to 70 pounds. They were photographed in one bunch, and afterward three of the larger ones were hung up on a line and a picture of them secured.

In the matter of E. D. Shattuck, appellant, vs. H. R. Kincaid, respondent, mandamus proceedings to compel the auditing of state claims and issuance of warrants, the supreme court on the 28th made an order that the cause be advanced out of its regular order, and set date for hearing July 6th.
