

THE LABOR EXCHANGE.

Two Fundamental Propositions.

If we clear away the mists which surround the study of economic science we shall discover that two fundamental propositions stand out clearly and boldly above the bewildering labyrinth of philosophical, historical and statistical data. These two propositions are first, the employment of all the idle laborers in the country (using the term laborers in its most comprehensive sense) and, second, the securing for laborers the use of the surplus value which they create—the full product of their labor. We hold it to be a self-evident truth that any scheme of economic adjustment which contemplates these two measures is radical and fundamental, and it is equally clear that whatever plan will the most quickly and easily accomplish them is the most practicable plan to pursue.

The Labor Exchange takes up these two fundamental propositions and deals with them direct. The principal object of the association is to employ all the idle laborers of the country and to keep them employed. We have many times explained how this can be done. Every branch of the Labor Exchange now in active existence employs laborers who otherwise would probably be tramping the roads and streets vainly looking for work. Every additional branch that is organized reduces the number of unemployed, and makes easier the solution of the question.

Another great object of the Labor Exchange is the saving of the entire product of the producers. The Labor Exchange is a co-operative association, and members performing services for the association virtually employ themselves. They allow themselves sufficient wages (the rate of which is measured by the price of wages elsewhere), and by mutual agreement permit the surplus value which they have created to remain in the association, to be used co-operatively by its members in strengthening it and extending its usefulness. Excepting a portion, which at present goes to the landlord and monopolist, the product is retained in the possession of the actual producers. No outside capitalist makes a direct profit out of the sweat or skill of those who thus employ themselves.

As the Labor Exchange grows, the power of the landlord and monopolist wanes; opportunities become more and more free. Finally, when all the laborers are employed, they dictate their own terms of employment, universal co-operation takes the place of universal competition, and the labor problem is solved.

The Labor Exchange accomplishes all this without appealing to prejudice or passion. It is peaceful, easy to put into practice, certain (when followed intelligently) in its results. It is altogether the most practical plan to pursue, and should be universally adopted.—Labor Exchange Guide.

Accountant: New discoveries of gold are reported almost daily, many of the finds approaching the fabulous, and the Accountant most sincerely hopes that this relic of barbarism may become so plentiful that it will no longer be sought after and made a basis money, but will be used in paving streets, manufacturing harps, etc. Then, with the Labor Exchange financial and social systems generally adopted, this old fool will assume a heavenly aspect and the much talked of "Brotherhood of Man" will become a reality.

Accountant: Under the legal tender wage system you work (if you are lucky enough to get a chance) one day for a dollar and a half and then spend it for the product of some other fellow's toil—the money being a simple medium of exchange; under the Labor Exchange you employ your self and get a "labor check" for the fruit of your industry and use it to buy what others have produced. What is the difference in the result?

Subscribers can pay up their subscriptions for the HERALD on the Labor Exchange plan, bring us good, marketable wheat, oats, barley, rye, corn, eggs and chickens. We urge especially those who are back with their subscriptions to take this opportunity of liquidating the same. We want good, marketable produce for which we will allow the ruling market price.

Sacramento Bee: The entire police force in San Francisco is trying to prove the innocence of Figel, while all the bluecoats in Chicago are endeavoring to place a rope round the neck of the sausage-maker, Leutzger. Both forces are denounced by the attorneys whom they oppose, as being venal, dishonest and perjured.

Caught in a Whirlwind.

Ritzville, Wash., Sept. 28.—Saturday morning Bernard Ryebrooks, a bachelor, residing five miles east of here, while returning home from town was overtaken by a whirlwind and in a moment the wagon, horses, man and produce were going skyward. The outfit quickly returned to land again, striking with such force that Ryebrooks' thigh bone was broken. Owing to the man's mode of life, no one missed him, and he was compelled to lie out of doors until Sunday afternoon when a neighbor found him.

After the accident the injured man dragged himself over a mile, becoming so parched with thirst during the journey that he chewed sagebrush for relief.

Burdette Wolfe Again.

The ubiquitous murderer, Burdette Wolfe, who in the fall of 1894, shot and killed Birdie Morton, in a fit of passion, at Montavilla, is again alleged to have turned up alive—and this time in Arizona. Several days ago Chief of Police Barry received a letter from Jerome, Ariz., written by a detective named John Burke. The writer requests a full description of the fugitive, and also asks if the original reward posted for his capture is yet offered. He intimates that he is pretty certain that he has Wolfe located, and that he can get him provided there is "anything in it." The chief turned the letter over to Sheriff Frazier, who answered it at once, stating that $1000 will be paid to any one returning the murderer to the authorities of this county.—Portland Telegram.

They Backed Down.

Lecton, Mo., Sept. 27.—The lynching, threatened by farmers of Jefferson township, did not materialize today at the preliminary examination of James Hill, Joe McKeekhan and Lee Jackson, accused of abducting, outraging and robbing Mrs. Andrew Stiles, a young woman who was forcibly taken from her husband on the highway two weeks ago, and held prisoner, as she claims, for several days. Two thousand men from the surrounding country thronged the village and there was much talk and excitement, but ten armed deputies under Sheriff Lear succeeded in preventing any disturbance. No building in the village was large enough to accommodate the court, and the trial was held under a big tent.

Mixed the Dead Husbands.

Over the grave of Otto Jones, in Mountain Grove Cemetery, Bridgeport, Conn., his widow decided to erect a monument. Charles H. Gould, who died about the same time, was buried close beside Jones. Widow Jones got the graves mixed, and ever since she has wept over the remains of Gould, watered the flowers on his grave and put up a monument, while Mr. Jones' grave has been left to be covered with weeds. The other day Widow Gould decided to put up a monument to her husband. The deeds showed that the spot where Widow Gould wanted to put up a monument was occupied by Jones' monument. Mrs. Jones wouldn't believe she was wrong till Gould's grave was opened then she fainted. She will now weep for Jones.

49 YEARS OF SUFFERING FROM RHEUMATISM.

Read carefully this testimonial found below, also letters from those who have been cured of other diseases, and remember that "Drops" has and can never fail to quickly relieve and permanently cure. Dear Sir:—Your bottle of "Drops" received. It was for an old friend, Mr. Wm. Edwards, of Martinovon, Wis. He has had Rheumatism in his chest, suffering a great deal of pain, and he had been in the care of the most eminent physicians, but found no relief until I gave him a dose of "Drops." The very first night he rested well, and has ever since been in good health. I myself am 67 years old and began taking your medicine last April for Rheumatism, which I have had for 49 years, also for a weak heart. Since taking "Drops" the Rheumatism has all disappeared, the stiffness is gone from my joints, and my heart never gives me a beat. I am to-day a well, strong woman, and I owe it to "Drops." I could wish I could sound my bugle of praise loud enough to be heard all over the world, and could convince every one that "Drops" is all you claim it to be and more. Mrs. D. T. Carver, Winslow, Stevenson Co., Ill.

This is the most wonderful and the cheapest remedy ever discovered. I am more thankful to you than words can tell, and I will ever be glad to know what "DROPS" has done for me. Although I am over 70 years old, I am feeling better than I have in years. I shall be glad to answer any questions regarding my case from anyone consulting me, two cent stamp. Greatly yours, MRS. S.
