Father and Son.

BY J. S. KANEMATZ.

CHAPTER III.

Son—"What fools are they who preferred a hopeless war against a superior foe!"

Father—"Of whatever name you may call them, they preferred death rather than to live governed by lash under a general whom they hated. This is not all. They had some hope in the firmness of our people and our congress. They heard something of our humane acts toward the Cubans. Besides they knew that if we were really willing, as we proclaimed, to give them a free and liberal form of government, we would also and certainly ought to be willing to render them a helping hand to bring into a perfection what they had already founded—a little republic. Consequently they dispatched to us a commission to appeal to the president and also to present a petition before our congress with certain claims; and also a proposition in which they would maintain a republic under our suzerainty. Thus they hope that in a short while the war might be over and that they might again be allowed to breathe the tranquil atmosphere of their tropical homes. They had, however, a rude awakening from their dreams when they were told that they had no right to send us the commissioners, and when we drove back their representatives without giving them a chance of hearing. We treated them thus because some of us held that the Filipinos are utterly incapable of governing themselves, and that to make them a self-governing people is to not listen to their cries, but face them at the point of the bayonet until they will down on their knees and pray for mercy from our generals, the great conquerors.

"The world is made up of odd ideas. Some of us seem to believe that the best way to raise a fast trotter is to keep the animal's legs tied together, and occasionally punch him in the ribs. That is it. Others believe in the opposite way For my own part I am fully satisfied that in the kindness of warm sunshine buds burst into flowers and in the severity of the biting frost leaves wither and fall. Degradation cannot make a man nobler. Brute force will never make a man freer. For my own part I would, instead of throwing the millions of dollars in shots and shells, have spent the amount in an experiment withe the Filipino Tagals in the reconstruction of their new republic. It is yet none too late to plunge into a war—none too late to be on the side of humanity.

"There was another side of the argument, however, and, in fact, many of our greatest statesmen were on that side. Their idea was that the Filipinos are a rebellious people because they were fighting against their government, and that to make a better citizen out of them, we must crush, once for all, their rebel notions.

"Nobody has ever been put into position wrongfully, who does not believe in the writ of habeas corpus Nobody has ever rebelled against a government without a cause to complain. The quickest way to determine whether he is or not a martyr is to get down to the foundation of the dispute. A close investigation clearly proves that the government of Spain was one of flagrant corruption, and why should we crush out of the Filipinos the just ideas for which they were fighting? The Filipinos were fighting against the same enemy that the Cubans were. They were fighting for the same idea that our forefathers had rebelled against the British for a century ago, and I tell you that it took the efforts of those rebels to found the best government on earth.

"Now, you crush out of these people the ideas of independence and freedom, also their ambition and aspirations, and what would be left of them would not make a brute—much less make a man. A man, to be respectable and worthy of citizenship, should be a self-supporter—should be free and independent. Take out of a man his ambitions and aspirations and he is not fit to live. Freedom is the mother of thought, ambition the nerve of progress, and aspiration the lever to civilization."

Son—"But, we are already at war with them, what else can we do but to fight?"

Father—"I would not hesitate for a moment to declare a peace or armistice, unconditionally, and stop the war at once. Then, I would tell the Filipinos that it was not our intention to wage war against them; that we came here in order to restore peace, and that if they are law-abiding citizens they must step forward and, under our tutorship, render their best abilities in founding a new republic."

Son—"Pa, that's impossible! We can never do that. Why, that's below our dignity. it would reflect upon our honor—It would hurt our pride."

Father—"Does it humble you, my son, or hurt your pride or reflect upon your honor to apologise for the wrong you have committed, or to admit your blunder and to try to rectify it? If it does you will ever be in danger of corruption. Spanish misconception of national honor, dignity and pride has cost her many a life of her best citizens, to say nothing of the loss in money, territories and ships."

Son—"That's very true, but the war is practically over."

Father—"What was done has already been done, and it will go down into the pages of history to be read by the future generations. Still, it is never too late to rectify one's errors. I hope that the angels of peace may soon arrive and that the war may speedily terminate.

"I have seen many a war—many a battle, and I can tell you what a dreadful thing this is. War, in its mildest form, is a rage of murderous demons. It made many a woman a widow—many a child an orphan. It left mothers childless and families homeless. Under its anger humanity trembled and justice fled. In its grip Napoleon ruined his empire and so did many a monarch of the world. It has arrested the weeels of industry and thus deterred civilization. War, the cruelest and the deadliest dealings of men, is a relic of barbarism!"

Son—"Yes, war is cruelty, but, pa, are you not one of those whom uncle Ted calls the anti-expansionists?"

Father—"No, son. I am one of those who believe in the expansion, but at the same time I want you to understand that I am strongly opposed to a military aggression. I want the expansion of industry and commerce—of education and humanity. Expansion of these causes may bring about an addition of territories into our national family, but if it does, it will come naturally and unsought. The expansion of industry and commerce brought the Hawaiian islands within our domain. The expansion of humanity and education spun a closer tie between us and the Cubans, so it will with the Philippine Tagals. Expansion of territory by a military aggression means an eternal discontent to the conquered, and on the part of the conquerer a perpetual expense. One must maintain a strong standing army and navy ready for an emergency, while the other would always be on the watch for a chance to strike for liberty. England, the greatest of all the aggressors the world has ever known, is today trembling upon the balance of fate between existence and extinction. Her enormous expenditures for the maintenance of her arms and armaments have reached to such a magnitude that her colonies are feebly tottering under the heavy burdens of taxation."

Advance in Oil.

The Standard Oil trust announces another advance in the price of kerosene for the middle of this month. As a sort of valentine it made the date of the advance the 14th. A year ago—less than a year ago—the retail price of kerosene oil, the people's luminant, was eight cents a gallon. Since that time it has been raised to 12 cents a gallon. The new price puts it up a cent higher. This is an advance of 62½ per cent within the year. Meantime the Standard Oil trust, which has been dividing profits at the rate of 30 per cent for several years, has paid during the past year 80 per cent to its shareholders. The enormous profit is paid, not on a capital representing money actually invested, but upon a capital largely of water. The public has been squeezed on both sides. And this is the trust which brazenly makes demand upon Mr. McKinley's secretary of the treasury for favors for the bank which is its financial agent, on the ground of political aid in the election of 1896. And Secretary Gage recognized the force of the demand and turns the people's money by the hundred millions into the Standard Oil bank in New York city.—Boston Post.

The Chicago Record places the capital stock of the trusts now organized at $9,000,000,000. Of this amount less than $2,000,000,000 is preferred stock. This latter amount represents more than the total amount of money actually invested. Yet the public is expected to put up interest on three times the value of the plants. But the public seems to be considerable of a "fish," hence makes no complaint.

Ohio State Journal: A colored citizen dropped into the office of a well-known Columbus attorney the other day and after stating his case said: "Now I know you's a lawyer, boss, but I wish you'd please, sah, jes' tell me de troof 'bout dis matter."

The Voters Allow It.

The fight between Carnegie and Frick ought to open the eyes of the dear workingman. The profits for last year were $21,000,000 and Frick says that for 1900 Carnegie's share alone will be $25,887,500, or over 6800 per day. At $3 per day, about twice the average wages paid to his workingmen, a man would have to work over 200 years to earn as much as Carnegie makes in one day. Many harsh things have been said about both Frick and Carnegie, but would it not be well to stop and think how it is that they are able to get so much money in so short a time. Who is responsible for the laws that enable these men to rob the public? The very workingmen who now grumble and growl. These men have done what 99 in a 100 would do—take advantage of the laws made by the people. When the fool workingmen and fool farmers stop worshipping a political party idol and do some thinking for themselves, there will be no such gigantic robbery, and until they do, they deserve just what they are getting.—Farm and Factory.

"Flaming Sword" Thrusts.

The world is being guyed by blind guides.

Forget yourself and others will think of you.

The trouble with the trusts is that the trustees will not trust the people.

The so-called leaders of the people are dealers in their own wares for the sake of the profits.

The Almighty is always first in universal peace, first in war against evil, and first in the hearts of his disciples.

Purchasing power inheres in the value of uses performed, in the products of labor. Values no more depend on money than temperature depends upon the thermometer. The mythical God of modern christendom cannot be the father of the tangible human race, because he is not a(p)parent.

The millionaire who expends $14,000 in purchasing votes and bribing courts and election boards for the office of senator, with a salary not exceeding $10,000 a year, sees more in the office than the mere honor and salary. The case of Millionaire Clark of Montana is exciting the attention of the people of America. He had his eye on such profits as accrue to corruptionists from corporations which purchase legislation in their favor.

Custom makes duty to be done; custom houses makes duties to be paid. Duty may be given or it may be taken; it can also be discharged, but it comes back again to be re-employed. The British and the Boers are discharging duties toward each other, in the shape of lyddite shell and mauser bullets; and they must stand the consequences of continued exchange of courtesies. Duty is summed up in the Golden Rule: Duty others as you would have them duty you.

The average salary paid last year to Methodist ministers in this country was $473.35, says an exchange. When the sums gained in a year by even the third-class prize fighter are compared with this pitiful stipended, the fact that there is something wrong with the public pocketbook becomes decidedly apparent. More than this, the world must conclude that a man is terribly in earnest and sincere who will work for the sum named. When there is a small stipend there is no hypocrisy. Scoffers may sneer, but there is much of the heroic in men when struggling to better their fellowman on less than living wages.

In almost every neighborhood there is some one whose life has been saved by Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, or who has been cured of chronic diarrhoea by the use of that medicine. Such persons make a point of telling of it whenever opportunity offers, hoping that it may be the means of saving other lives. For sale by R. S. Knowlton.

No man liveth to himself. His life has an influence on the welfare of others whether he so wills it or not. He whose life benefits no one injures some one. The man who is no benefit to the community is an injury to the community.

A man by the name of Corn was married in Indiana county to a lady named Wheat. The choir sang "What Shall the Harvest Be?" A boy in the audience yelled "nubbins," and they forthwith ejected him from the church.

"Papa," said the seven-year-old, "is heaven a nice place?" "Yes, my little daughter," replied the father. "It is said to be." "But you will never know for sure, will you, papa?"

"Miss Bunk says she feels as free as a bird in her rainy-day skirt." "Well, she looks like a jay."

Boer Women and Boys Fighting Against British Armies.

Petaluma, Cal., March 24.—Carl Klein, of Petaluma, is fighting with the Boers in South Africa. Klein left Petaluma two years ago, leaving his wife and family of five little ones here. He is a barber, but was running a store in a small Boer village near Johannesburg when the war broke out. Saturday his wife received a letter from him, that he had written when he was a member of the besieging army before Ladysmith. Klein may have been captured by the British forces, as, when the letter was written, his detachment was cornered, and starvation or capture stared them in the face. Klein says the Transvaal government forced him to close his store and go to the front. In his village of 500 population not a single able man was allowed to stay at home. In the fighting around Ladysmith were many boys of thirteen and fourteen years of age and "hundreds of women." Many of the boys and women were the equals of the men in skill with the rifle. The letter was written in December and Klein concluded by saying that the struggle was a hopeless one but that the Boers would fight it out to the bitter end.

Washington, March 27.—The present indications are that W. A. Clark will hold his senatorial seat as a representative of Montana until the first session of this congress is ended.

It seems to be the disposition to delay final action on the Clark case in order that the multi-millionaire from Montana will have had a "little run for his money." The supposition is that he paid anywhere from $1,000,000 to $2,000,000 to secure his election to the United States senate. That his immense wealth has given him sufficient power to bring about delay on his case is said to be a fact by those who know the exact situation.

In connection with the case of Senator Clark there seems to be a disposition on the part of the majority of United States senators to dodge a vote, not only on the Montana case, but also on the proposition to give Matthew Stanley Quay a senatorial seat by grace of his appointment by the Governor Stone of Pennsylvania.

Putting the feet in hot water will invariably cure a headache, from whatever cause it arises. The head aches when, from any cause, the little blood vessels in the brain are too full. Putting the feet in hot water draws the blood from the head.

Crete has lost through political disturbances of recent years olive trees to the value of $10,000,000. It will take 40 years to restore the orchards to full bearing condition, and in the meantime 200,000 Christians will have to starve.

People who suffer from heat in the hands and feet can obtain speedy and easy relief from the same by putting inside their stockings and gloves a small portion of very fine oatmeal.

The Best Food for Intellectual Thought.

No man can vote intelligently unless he thinks intelligently. In this time of "wars and rumors of wars" the greatest aid to intelligent thinking and the best food for intelligent thought is that newspaper which is greatest and best.

The Semi-Weekly Republic is the greatest and best of all newspapers. Its telegraphic and cable news service excels that of any other paper. It prints the new news fully; not imaginative occurrences, but domestic and world-distant, fully authenticated facts.

The policies of the great political parties are now being formed and the candidates discussed. Now is the time to subscribe for the best medium of keeping in touch with the whole world, The Semi-Weekly Republic.

No less worthy of attention is The Republic's Sunday Magazine. It is replete each issue with the best of special articles written by the best of literary talent. Its beautiful half-tone illustrations have already made it famous and their quality and quantity will be preserved.

News features are illustrated and enlarged upon in a manner equal to the high-priced magazines. Events of current interest are set forth in entertaining style. There is humor in its pages, too, and for the benefit of the ladies the latest Paris fashions are each week exquisitely illustrated and described. The Republic's Sunday Magazine is standard.

The subscription price of The Semi-Weekly Republic is $1 per year. With HERALD—both one year—only $2.25.

The Republic Sunday Magazine is $1.25 per year; with The Semi-Weekly Republic—both—$1.50 per year Both the Semi-Weekly and Sunday Magazine, clubbed with the HERALD, three papers, $3.

One Woman to Another

From one who has suffered to all who are suffering. The words of Mrs. Nellie Cameron, of Lockport, N.Y., convey a broad meaning to every thoughtful woman. Mrs. Cameron says: "In the fall of 1898 I was in a deplorable condition. I had stomach trouble in the very worst form. Nothing at all would stay on my stomach, and I had to almost starve myself. My side pained me constantly. The lack of nourishment caused me to lose flesh rapidly; I dropped from 138 to 97 pounds, growing weaker all the time. There was not the slightest color in my face. I was simply a shadow of my former self. Able physicians treated me, but failed absolutely. I was a complete wreck when a friend told me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. One box greatly improved my condition; it was astonishing how quickly they built me up. I believe saved my life.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People

I was enabled to sleep, and in the morning I felt refreshed and rested. My stomach was strengthened, what I ate benefited me, my weight increased, and I soon regained all I had lost. I am now well and strong. I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People."
NELLIE CAMERON.

Subscribed and sworn to before me, this 3d day of July, 1899.
