Freedom.

In the consideration of this question it may be well to ask ourselves if there is not a limit beyond which freedom becomes unbridled license, breaking through all legal restraint, and giving full play to the vindictive passions inherent in human nature? Are the bloody outrageous feuds so common in Kentucky and some of the border states and territories examples of our much boasted freedom? There is such a thing as too much liberty. The liberty that cultivates murder is despicable. The power that is unable to suppress it or to apply legitimate remedies is unworthy the name of government. Equity demands that the restraining hand of the law be laid on the rich as well as the poor; otherwise, wealth will usurp the supreme power; mankind will be subject to barter—be bought and sold like cattle, and then what? There is nothing in the make-up or the attributes of this people to make it differ from people who have passed away. The nation is liable to suffer from the same ills that have afflicted other nations, both moral and physical. If we possess no immunity from diseases which have beset the world of humanity, we have no exemption from its varied characteristics. The love of tyranny is as strong with us today as it ever was with the nations of old. We may flatter ourselves and proclaim to the world that it is not so; but evasion is ineffectual; the handwriting is on the wall, and he who runs may read. The world has seldom produced a crop of audacious disciples of mendacity and acquisitiveness as we possess at the present date. The nations of antiquity were, generally the tools of a single tyrant; but we are the tools of many in combination, and the logical sequence is apparent; therefore, the result may be anticipated—from a number of conspirators one will become supreme. It has been the fate of nations to retrograde simultaneously with the rise of a supercilious and indolent aristocracy; consequently, as we possess the same material and are pursuing the same path, we will fall into the same pit.

These are some of the questions for consideration at the present time. When we arrive at a due appreciation of them we may expect some reform. Then we will acknowledge and respect the rights of others, and no insane, partisan venom will enter into the consideration; that is the evil which is confusing all sense of justice; but all will suffer from its continuation. We will be prepared to suppress lawlessness with a heavy but just hand, and cultivate and perpetuate a correct regard for the law. Not till then can we claim to be an impartial, liberty-loving and law-abiding people.

STAR KEY.

Willie McCormick is Victim of Kidnappers.

New York, April 2.—After vainly running down every clew the police became convinced last night that Willie McCormick, Jr., a 10-year-old High Bridge boy who disappeared last Wednesday night, is the victim of a kidnaping plot. Captain Titus, of the Central Detective Bureau, and Captain James Gannon, of the High Bridge Police Station, have put every available man on the case.

Wednesday night two of the boy's sisters were going to church with him when he found it necessary to return to the house for his overcoat. He was delayed for a few moments, and the sisters walked toward the church. When he failed to rejoin them soon they walked rapidly to the church, both believing until they had returned home that he had decided not to go with them. As a matter of fact he had slipped on his overcoat and started after them.

Willie is the son of a retired florist living in Ogden avenue, in High Bridge. The child has 11 sisters. The mother is prostrated from grief and anxiety, and the father equally so.

It is said that the powers of either man or woman are developed fivefold by working with a life-companion who is in entire harmony. The ideal wife as a rule has it in her power to make the ideal husband. What constitutes the ideal wife is discussed in an extremely able article by Lavina Hart in the April Cosmopolitan.

Washington, April 1.—The President today appointed Calvin T. Titus to be a cadet at large at the United States Military Academy at West Point. Titus was the first soldier to scale the wall at Pekin. Display ads couched in superlative adjectives are fast becoming obsolete. The pictorial ad is gaining ground. Of what value are words in advertising miscellaneous wares? They are naught but a grandiloquent effort to excel others. Pictures are what we need, and must have. They will be a benefit to both the printer and advertiser, and enable the former to save space and increase his profits. I admit, in concluding, that it will be impossible to boom a coal mine with a picture, or to make sugar taste sweeter; still, the conception deserves consideration. A picture with the advertiser's name, address, and a sack marked flour, and there you are. For brevity, that's hard to beat.
