FIFTY MILES AWAY.

Landing Place Much Further Than at First Supposed.

San Francisco, Nov. 3.—The nine occupants of the car of the balloon which escaped from this city yesterday afternoon returned safely today. The balloon landed near Pescadero, 50 miles from this city and but a short distance from the ocean. The balloon was in the air nearly two hours, and at one time was out at sea, but was blown back over the land.

Those who made the involuntary trip were: Ed P. Dudley, the aeronaut; A. L. Dodge, Ed Foster, jr., Walter Leon, C. P. Vildecop, M. L. Howarth, John A. M. Swift and Mrs. J. P. Gunsaulus.

When the balloon broke its bonds it sailed away in a southerly direction. South of Redwood City it struck another current which took it towards the ocean over the summit of the Coast Range. Nine miles from Lahonda and about six miles from Pescadero lies Beatty Thompson's place. Thompson was up and out when the balloon came along by Wurr's mill, the grappling hooks slipping through the trees and raking along brushy patches of ground. By this time much of the gas had been let out of the balloon and the power was weak. The rope that had snapped and caused the captive to run away was sweeping along the ground, and when it came within Thompson's reach he grasped it and bore down with all his weight. This stopped the flight. Soon the balloon was brought to the ground, and the overjoyed passengers and the aeronaut alighted and took supper with Thompson.

A. L. Dodge, one of the passengers, describing the trip, said that the balloon first started toward Oakland, and after circling about for a time drifted southward and became stationary for a short period. Then, in response to a breeze from the eastward, it sailed over the San Mateo hills and stood far out over the ocean. The hearts of all the occupants of the wicker cage were filled with fear as the prospect of being dumped into the ocean stared them in the face. Twice, according to Dodge's story, the balloon dipped close to the surface of the water, but rose again each time to a considerable altitude. Finally, a breeze from the sea caught the balloon and carried it back over the land and, after dragging the cage through the tops of a grove of trees, landed on a side hill six miles from Pescadero.

"It was a terrible experience," said Dodge, "and I wouldn't undergo the same adventure again for any consideration. Everybody was more or less shaky, while the lady passenger and two or three of the men were so frightened and sick that they sat in the bottom of the basket throughout the trip. We were all pretty glad when we finally landed without sustaining any injuries except from fright."

Jumped on a Ten Penny Nail.

The little daughter of Mr. J. N. Powell jumped on an inverted rake made of ten penny nails, and thrust one nail entirely through her foot and a second one half way through. Chamberlain's Pain Balm was promptly applied and in five minutes later the pain had disappeared and no more suffering was experienced. In three days the child was wearing her shoe as usual and with absolutely no discomfort. Mr. Powell is a well known merchant of Forkland, Va. Pain Balm is an antiseptic and heals such injuries without maturation and in one-third the time required by the usual treatment. For sale by R. S. Knowlton.

DAIRY NOTES.

From Hoard's Dairyman.

We have been told so often that this country is the home of sharp dealing, and that on the other side of the waters the rights of the consumer are looked after more carefully, that it comes somewhat as a shock to find that while the Englishman has been lecturing us on our sinful ways in adulterating dairy products, his own dealers in dairy goods have been working him by passing off water as butter.

In one case that was recently in court, it was stated that larger quantities of colonial and Danish butters, with a low percentage of moisture, were purchased and conveyed to the factory. There it was spread on tables and softened out. Then it was placed in the wells of large churns or mixing machines, to the extent of about one ton in a machine. Milk was poured on the butter in the proportion of eight or ten quarts per cwt. of butter.

A small quantity of borax having been added, the lid of the churn was fixed on, and the machinery set going, with the result that in a few minutes the butter and milk became thoroughly mixed. Then it was made into 1-lb. and 2-lb. rolls and sent to the branches for sale, marked "Pearke's pure butter." It was contended that every hundred-weight of butter treated in this way yielded from 132 to 144 lbs. of butter.

In other words, the addition of the milk resulted in 20 or 30 pounds being added to the weight of every hundred-weight of butter. As much as ten tons a day was the ordinary output.

All of which shows that virtue is not monopolized by any one country and that the chase after the mighty dollar, or its equivalent, is just as strenuous in England as in this country.

In one respect at least the milk very quickly shows the nature of the food given. If strong flavored foods are given to the cow, strong flavored milk is the result, unless precautions are taken as to the time and method of feeding.

The milk is part and parcel of the body, and if the body is saturated with odors so will the milk be. As soon as food containing strong odors is eaten, the body begins to remove it through the excretory channels, viz., skin, kidneys, lungs, bowels or udder. This is a question of time and it follows that the longer the interval between the taking of the food into the body and the milking, the less will be the danger of the production of tainted milk.

This accounts for the fact that some dairymen always produce tainted milk when they have any strong flavored foods to give their cows; they feed the turnips, rape, rye, or whatever it may be, and milk before the cow has time to dispose of the objectionable flavor. The food gets the blessing or cursing according to the nature of the feeder, whereas the trouble is nearer home. Of course the dairyman should avoid such feeds if possible, but in seasons like the present anything that will produce milk must be used of necessity, and the usual results will follow unless precautions are taken. Give the taint-producing food after milking—at night if possible so that the cow may have time to dispose of it through the excretory organs instead of the udder, and the result will be favorable.

The question of clean milk cans is ever new and always important enough to discuss. How much poor butter and cheese can be traced directly to dirty milk cans, will never be known, but the loss is sufficient to buy many new cans every year and would go far towards paying the cost of cleaning the entire supply of the country. Much of the trouble with milk cans comes from delay. Fresh milk is easily washed out of the can. A rising with cold water, followed by the usual hot water and soda will make the can clean, but if the same can has been allowed to stand till the milk is dried in places and soured in others, then it is more than difficult to make the can clean and put it in shape so that it will not immediately infect fresh milk. A good washing, assisted by live steam is about the only way in which the mischief can be repaired, but the trouble is that very few dairies have the steam.

SEIZED BY FRENCH.

Control of Turkish Revenues at Smyrna Lost to Sullian.

London, Nov. 5.—The Paris correspondent of the Daily Mail says he understands that dispatches have been received at the French capital announcing that Admiral Caillard's division of the Mediterranean squadron had arrived at Smyrna and seized the customs.

Paris, Nov. 4.—After a speech delivered by the Foreign Minister, M. Delcasse, today, the chamber of deputies, sustained, by a vote of 305 to 77, the government's action towards Turkey.

M. Sembat radical socialist, interpreted the government on the dispute, criticising the action taken as being for a material end, and contending that France ought to have intervened at the time of the Armenian massacres.

The Foreign Minister, M. Delcasse, replied that France's patience was exhausted by the Porte's breaking its own promises. France, in the present difficulty, pursued no fresh advantage, but everybody would agree that this effort on the part of France ought at least to serve to put an end to the annoyance and unjust treatment of which French workers in the Orient, scholastic and hospital establishments and commercial and industrial enterprises had been the object. He added:

"Unless Parliament arrests our action, the government wishes to show that France, after exemplary patience, has other things to oppose to the long and persistent refusals to do justice, than simple observations. The government will only present to the Port demands which are in conformity with its conscience, and which can be sustained in perfect tranquility of mind before the whole world. Our rights are certain, and nobody will dispute them. Our action is legitimate and nobody can take umbrage at it, and as our patience has been long, so our action must be more resolute."

M. Delcasse said also that the appearance of French cruisers off the Turkish coast has several times proved that France not forgotten the protection she owed the Christians, and the latter understand. It was true that the reform promised the Armenians had not been executed; that the Armenians had too often been the victims of unpunished outrages, and that oppression also reigned in Macedonia and in old Serbia. The French government had put forth every effort to restore justice and peace, but France was not alone bound by the treaty of Berlin. The chamber could rest assured that the government would never forget its duties to humanity. But, it must first of all remember its duty to France. The foreign minister's statements were greeted with applause.

To the Public.

Allow me to say a few words in praise of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I had a very severe cough and cold and feared I would get pneumonia, but after taking the second dose of this medicine I felt better, three bottles of it cured my cold and the pains in my chest disappeared entirely. I am most respectfully yours for health, Ralph S. Meyers, 64-Thirty-seventh St., Wheeling, W. Va. For sale by R. S. Knowlton.
