The Codling Moth in Oregon.

The following we take from bulletin No. 69, of the Oregon Experiment Station which is of more than ordinary interest to fruit growers in this part of the state, from the pen of A. B. Cordley:

Wonderful stories of the codling moth are told "where rolls the Oregon." From the dealer in real estate and from the optimist who depicts the advantages of his particular region in the most glowing terms, comes the story of an apple grower's paradise where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt. From the horticulturist, who by the sweat of his brow has brought forth a bearing orchard only to see the golden and crimson fruits of his labor become the noxious habitations of disgusting caterpillars, comes lamentation like unto those of the prophet Joel: "That which the palmer-worm hath left hath the locust eaten; and that which the locust hath left hath the canker-worm eaten; and that which the canker-worm hath left hath the caterpillar eaten." Seen through the blue spectacles of his experience, nowhere else is the codling moth so destructive as in his own orchard or locality.

From the entomologist comes stories of the wonderful powers of reproduction exhibited by an insect, which, in other apple growing regions develops but one or two broods a year, yet, under the revivifying influence of an unknown something in our climate, geographical or geological conditions, multiplies even unto the third and fourth generation in a single season.

Is it not possible that there is a happy middle ground of truth for all these stories? Is it not possible that we have all been mistaken? Is it not possible that even in the land of the real estate dealer and the optimist an occasional codling moth may be found? Is it not possible that other horticulturists in other regions have likewise had equal cause with us to echo the lamentation of Joel? Is it not possible that even the entomologist has been mistaken and that here as in less favored regions, the codling moth has refused to be stamped by the wonderful prospects of new worlds to conquer and still goes on the even tenor of its way producing but two broods annually? Is it not true we call a halt until the grounds on which these claims have been made can be thoroughly reconnoitered, that we may not be unduly elated by false hopes nor unduly discouraged by imaginary difficulties?

It is undoubtedly true that there are small apple-growing sections scattered here and there throughout the entire Pacific northwest that are still free, or practically free, from the codling moth. But does this necessarily imply that they are to remain free? Does it necessarily imply that the climatic or other natural conditions are such that the moth cannot thrive there? May not the present immunity be accounted for in other grounds? During the past six years it has been my privilege to visit several of these favored sections and to note the conditions, both by observation and by conversation with resident fruit growers. Six or seven years ago Hood River, probably the most famous apple growing region in the state, was said to be practically free from this pest. Its presence in small numbers was admitted but little damage had been done and little fear was left for the future. The cold evening breezes that come down from the mountains were said to prevent the moths from depositing their eggs. Today the mist from the spray pups as it floats over the orchards of that region demonstrates alike the progressive nature of the fruit growers and the error of their former belief.

There are still scattered here and there throughout the eastern part of our state, communities that indulge in this same hope of immunity from the codling moth and form the same reason. It is seriously to be doubted whether their expectations have a firmer foundation of facts than existed at Hood River.

West of the Coast range of mountains there are other communities which also indulge in this same hope of immunity but for other reasons. There, it is not the cold breezes which come down from the mountains—the breezes do not come that way—but the moisture, and the temperature, the "salt" or some other unknown feature of the ocean winds which kiss the orchards of those regions, that is supposed to carry death and destruction to the codling moth and joy to the hearts of the apple grower.

"During the last few days of August and the first days of September, 1899, I took a hurried trip through portions of Coos county, Oregon, for the special purpose of demonstrating, to my own satisfaction, the presence or absence of the codling moth, and in case of its absence to investigate so far as the time at my command permitted, the conditions under which this immunity existed.

"Leaving the railroad at Drain I went by wheel to Scottsburg, a distance of some twenty-five or thirty miles. Apple orchards along the route were visited and in every one the codling moth was present. One grower, within a few miles of Scottsburg, told me that it had been in his orchard about six or eight years. From Scottsburg to Gardiner I went by boat and no orchards were visited. Indeed if any exist they are probably moth free since they are separated from each other by considerable distances and completely shut off from intercourse with the outside world except by boat. From Winchester, across the bay from Gardiner, to Coos bay, the road leads along the beach and no orchards are present. In the immediate vicinity of Empire and Marshfield, the principal cities of the Coos bay region, and the points at which the moth would most likely be introduced in imported fruit, no orchards are seen. Across the bay from Marshfield I visited the orchards of Mr. Anton Wirth and Mr. McIntosh. In neither of these orchards was there to be found any evidence of the codling moth, and Mr. Wirth informs me that it had never been seen there. The McIntosh orchard is an old one and showed evidence of neglect, conditions favorable to the development of the moth had it ever been introduced. Mr. Wirth, who has been a deputy fruit inspector of that region, did not know of any codling moth in that immediate vicinity, but had heard that it is present in some orchards about the headwaters of Coos river, presumably along the Roseburg and Coos Bay stage route, as that would correspond with the conditions I found on going out by way of the Myrtle Point-Roseburg route. From Marshfield to Myrtle Point, several orchards were noted along the line of the railroad, but none were visited. At Myrtle Point I spent one day in examining orchards but found no wormy apples. Mr. T. J. Perkins, a nurse, man of Parkersburg, who has canvassed the county thoroughly each year, told me that the codling moth has appeared at a certain ranch on the Fishtrap between Coquille and Myrtle Point, in the North Carolina settlement on the headwaters of the South Fork and in an orchard on Big Creek near Bridge P. O. Mr. A. H. Black, a merchant who handles a large amount of fruit, reports that "wormy" apples are very scarce but that a few have been found in the fruit from one orchard near Norway. One of these orchards was visited later, but no codling moth could be found, and the owner assured me that he had never seen a wormy apple in his orchard.

Near Big creek, about ten or twelve miles out from Myrtle Point on the road to Roseburg I was informed by two ladies that the codling moth had been present in the orchard of that vicinity for several years past. "In cutting up a pan of apples they usually found two or three wormy ones." No more orchards were seen until the home of Mr. L. B. Fetter was reached, seven or eight miles farther out on the Roseburg road. Here I found the first codling moth larvae I had seen on the entire trip, and was told by Mr. Fetter that they had been present each season for the past three or four years. From Mr. Fetter's place a ride of some sixteen miles, during which no orchards were passed, took me to Canas. Here wormy apples were to be found in every orchard, a condition of affairs that proved to be true in the orchards between Canas and Roseburg.

"As a result of this trip I became convinced that at that time (1900) the codling moth was not present, to any great extent at least, in the Coos bay region. I also became convinced that the present immunity can be accounted for on the ground of isolation rather than that of peculiar climatic conditions, and that it is not likely to be permanent. Coos county is a beautiful region, broken, mountainous and timbered. Its only connection with the outside world is by boat, or by wagon roads over the mountains from Drain or Roseburg. The codling moth must of necessity be introduced by one or more of these routes. As shown above, the absence of orchards in the immediate vicinity of Empire and Marshfield, render it unlikely that the moth could obtain a foothold even though repeatedly introduced at these points in imported fruit. From Drain it has advanced from orchard to orchard nearly to tide-water at Scottsburg where it has been checked by the absence of other orchards to conquer. From Roseburg it has spread along the Roseburg Myrtle Point route over the mountains to within ten or twelve miles of the latter place and is reported in several orchards about there. It is also reported in orchards about the headwaters of Coos river, having probably advanced from orchard to orchard along the wagon road from Roseburg to Coos bay as it has along the Roseburg Myrtle Point route.

"It seems evident that the reason for the present immunity from codling moth ravages in the orchards of the Coos bay region is not far to seek. On account of its geological conformation, the highways leading to this region mostly follow the windings of the streams in and out among the timbercovered mountains. The orchards, mostly home orchards, are located here and there along the highways in little valleys or pockets between the mountains, often at considerable distance apart. Each orchard, or little group of orchards, is therefore protected by a natural barrier of timber and mountains, practically insurmountable to the codling moth unless it be carried over or around it by human agencies.

"I believe the idea that climatic conditions are responsible for the absence of codling moth injury has been decidedly harmful. It has carried with it the idea that no effort is necessary to keep the orchards free from this, the greatest apple pest. I believe that by a rigid system of orchard inspection put in operation a few years ago along the highways leading from Roseburg to Myrtle Point and Coos bay, and a rigid quarantine of infested fruit, that it would have been possible to exclude the codling moth from this entire region for years to come. It is probably too late now. Still there are undoubtedly many isolated orchards in which it is not yet found and which can be kept free from its ravages for years by a little effort. The utmost care should be taken to prevent its introduction into such orchards either in infested fruit or in the packages in which such fruit has been packed."

Shot in His Left Leg.
For all kinds of sores, burns, bruises, or other wounds De Witt's Witch Hazel Salve is a sure cure. Skin diseases yield to it at once. Never fails in cases of piles, cooling and healing. None genuine but De Witt's. Beware of counterfeits. I suffered for many years from a sore caused by a gun shot wound in my left leg," says A. S. Fuller, English, Ind. "It would not heal and gave me much trouble. I used all kinds of remedies to no purpose until I tried De Witt's Witch Hazel Salve. A few boxes completely cured me." R. S. Knowlton.

Representatives are elected to enact the will of the people into law. Now they can only guess at the people's will on any great question, and if one guesses wrong, political death is the probable and always possible result. Then we lose a valuable public servant, valuable perhaps because of many years of experience, wide acquaintance with public men, and positions on legislative committees as well as unusual natural ability. The system is terribly wasteful of talent as well as courage in public life.

When the Initiative and Referendum is adopted, if the representative is in doubt as to the will of the people on any great question, he can refer it to them for their own decision—and let them take the consequences as well as the responsibility. If he guesses wrong at any time the people can then correct him without losing his services and experience.—Ex.

Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, with a membership of more than a million trade unionists:

"I have full faith in the people. The safety of the future as well as the interests of the present can safely be entrusted in their hands. The whole are more honest, more intelligent than the few. We must soon choose whether we are to have an oligarchy or a democracy. All lovers of the human family, all who earnestly strive for political reform, economic justice and social enfranchisement must range themselves on the side of organized labor in this demand for direct legislation."—Ex.

Neglect Means Danger.
Don't neglect biliousness and constipation. Your health will suffer permanently if you do. De Witt's Little Early Risers cure such cases. M. B. Smith, Butternut, Mich., says "De Witt's Little Early Risers are the most satisfactory pills I ever took. Never gripe or cause nausea."

The General Federation of Women's Clubs is having trouble with the race question and has appealed to the Attorney General to say whether colored persons have a right to belong to organizations chartered under federal laws. The sensible thing for the women to do is to decide for themselves and then abide by the consequences, as they are the ones most interested.

Another evidence of the spirit of progress in Japan is furnished by the organization of a cycling club by the "high caste" young ladies of Tokyo.

ANNOUNCEMENT.
In another column of today's issue appears the advertisement of the wonder book of American publications—the acme of the compilers' and printers' art, where mechanical excellence, literary perfection and the zenith of accuracy of detail are combined in a volume of over 60 pages that sells at the popular price of 25 cents.

We refer to the 1902 New York World Almanac and Encyclopedia, better known as "The Standard American Annual."

And so it is. It is more to Americans than is "Whittaker's" to the British.

By special arrangement with the publishers of the World Almanac we offer it in connection with one year's subscription to this paper at $1.65.

The New Features enumerated in the advertisement published today are alone worth the price of the book. Besides the features announced there are more than 1,000 facts touched upon.

Read the announcement and send in your subscription.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address,

HEAD NOISES CEASE IMMEDIATELY.
F. A. WERMAN, OF BALTIMORE, SAYS:
Gentlemen:—Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion.
About five years ago my right ear began to ring, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in this ear entirely.
I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, that the best noise would be this case, but the hearing in the affected ear would be lost forever. I then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and today, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain
Very truly yours,

A $65.00 Machine For $18.50
Cash with Order and Coupon
The Improved "Arlington" Sewing Machine
NEW HOME STYLE LATEST BEST CHEAPEST
Shipped to anyone, anywhere, on 10 days free trial, to your own home, without asking one cent in advance.
10 years' written warranty with each machine.
A strictly high-grade Sewing Machine, finished in a fine, durable, and beautiful manner. It possesses all modern improvements, and its construction is such that it is completely self-regulating, and its operation is simple and easy. It is made of all kinds of thread and all kinds of material. Always ready for use and unrivaled for speed, durability and quality of work. Notice the following points of superiority:
The tread of the "Arlington" swings on a patent racket hinge, firmly held down by a thumb screw. Strong, adjustable, steel and handsome in design, and beautifully ornamented in gold. Bed plate has a steel cutter and is held in position by a screw. It holds up the top of the tread. High-st Arm—stands under the tread 3/4 inches high and 3 inches long. This will admit the largest size, and even quite. It is self-threading—absolutely no hooks to put thread through except eye of needle. Shuttle is free to open and shut, entirely self-threading, easy to put in or take out; button holds a large amount of thread. Stitch Regulator is on the side of the machine, beneath the tread, and has a scale showing the number of stitches to the inch. Scale can be changed from 8 to 32 stitches to the inch. Feed is double and extends on both sides of needle; never fails to take down through, never slips at sewing; movement is positive in spring to break and set in order, can be raised and lowered at will. Automatic Bobbin Winder—filling the bobbin automatically and perfectly smooth without holding the thread. Machine does not run while winding bobbin. Light Running—Machine is easy to run, does not fatigue the operator, makes little noise and sews rapidly. Stitches in a double lock stitch, the same on both sides, will not pull, and can be changed without stopping the machine. Tension is a flat spring tension, and will adjust itself to any size of thread, and will not break. Needle is a flat spring needle, set on one side, and cannot be put in wrong. Needle on the other. Adjustable Footing—All feet are made of steel and are easily adjusted with a screw driver. All feet can be taken up, and the machine will last a lifetime. Attachment—Shuttle is held in position with necessary tools and accessories, and in addition we furnish an extra set of attachments in a select metal box, free of charge, as follows: One 1/2-inch foot, one button, one under button, one shirt or attachment foot, and one tread cutter. Woodwork of finest quality, oak or walnut, gilded cover and drawers, nickel-plated feet.
