Cyrus Hedden's Second Visit to Coquille.

As promised in our last issue we give the following sketch, a description of the second visit of Cyrus W. Hedden to this section of the state during the time of Indian hostilities. The sketch is taken from Dooler's Pioneer History of Coos and Curry counties, and not only proves Mr Hedden to be an indomitable Indian fighter, but a true companion under all circumstances:

"The party under T Vault had a disastrous and fearful time. Little of mountaineer skill was ever used or exhibited in the devious wanderings. Mountain ridges were not followed or regarded. Immense gorges were plunged into without apparent hesitation. All the animals had to be abandoned, everything was disposed of as far as possible to enable them to travel or wander. In the following year Lieutenant Stoneham, with his party of explorers, traced their trail as shown by the cuttings, and found evidence of more insanity than rationally. They finally reached a point on the South Fork of the Coquille river, near which camp a depot was established the following spring, by Company C. First Dragoons, under Col. A. J. Smith. T Vault sat down and cried like a child and all but one of his men declared they would abandon him. Cyrus Hedden, now a resident of Scottsburg, on the Umpqua river, a man esteemed by all who know him, declared he would die rather than abandon a comrade, and by the influence he had over the balance of the party undoubtedly saved the life of T Vault. They gathered roots and berries to save life, being in a state of starvation, rendered greatly by fatigue and want of food, and they made slow progress in following the river down, but were determined to follow that course to the ocean. Many Indians were hovering around them. Reaching the main river they finally induced an old Indian in a canoe to approach them and by exhibiting buttons and such articles as could be spared, engaged the canoe to carry them down the river to its mouth. When about two miles above the mouth of the Coquille river some of the party declared that they should land and procure some food if they had to fight for it, while others protested, fearing an encounter with the numerous savages on shore, and while there disputing the canoe drifted into shoal water. The savages from the shore rushed into the water, grasping the canoe and those in it. The fight was then inaugurated. It was every one for himself. A portion of the men rushed for the shore, while others were killed at once. A young Texan by the name of Brush was struck down by a blow of one of the canoe paddles, the sharp edge striking him on the head, glancing down the side carrying a large piece of the scalp with it, he fell into the canoe. The Indian, who had assisted in bringing them down and by signs had warned them of the danger of landing, paddled the canoe into the stream with Brush prostrated in it. T Vault struck out to swim the river. He was picked up by the Indian and carried with Brush to the opposite shore. T Vault made all haste to escape, leaving Brush and pursued his way down the coast for a Cape Blanco, then in sight, a cape well known by him, being near Port Orford. He reached the mouth of the 'Sa-quah,' now called the Sixes river. His rifle was taken from him and he was stripped of all his clothing, save the remnant of what was once a shirt, and permitted by the Indians to pursue his way to the fort. He arrived there in a nude and starving condition the second day after the disaster. Brush avoided the Indians and wounded as he was and with only the remnants of a shirt and a pair of pants arrived at the fort the third day.

"To return to the place of disaster. Williams and Hedden reached the shore fighting their way as best they could. The former was cinched by a heavy savage. In the struggle they fell with Williams on top. His knife finished the brute; but while down another Indian drove an arrow into his groin. He sprang to his feet and Hedden pulled out the shaft leaving a three-inch piece with the arrowhead was attached. They escaped to the brush, holding the Indians at bay with their guns while so doing. They both had made good work, and caused much mourning in the Indian camp. It was not long before the fatal arrow shaft and head began their terrible work, causing much acute pain and intense suffering. The following day his bowels commenced swelling. He could only with the greatest difficulty put his foot to the ground. His faithful companion would gather salubrious berries for him to eat and aid him to advance. He begged to be permitted to lay down and die. Hedden encouraged him and helped him in every way he could. Upon they reached the Umpqua river, where fortunately they found the brig Fawn, and Capt. Wood sent his boat to carry them seven miles up the river to the town now called Gardiner. Williams was fearfully swollen, his bowels seemed ready to burst, and on the night of the landing at Gardiner the wound opened and discharged. This relieved him greatly from the intense pain. Hedden never left him, but labored to earn means for his support, bandaged and tended to his wounds for nearly three years. In the Spring of 1855 the shaft and arrowhead were extricated, at Roseburg, Douglas Co., Ore.

"Five of the party were literally cut to pieces so that the remains of them could not be identified."

What Constitutes Legal Assessment Work on Mining Claims.

(A. H. Ricketts in Mining and Engineering Review.)

No assessment work need be done upon a tunnel location or a mill site location. A mining claim may be held without the performance of annual work thereon but at the risk of adverse interests being acquired therein by a third party. The resumption of work upon a claim after failure, and before an adverse location by the original locator, his heirs, assigns or legal representatives prevents forfeiture. For future it is to be distinguished from abandonment. The former takes place upon failure to duly represent the claim; the latter at any moment, even during the time that the claim is protected by assessment work done. Annual expenditure is required upon a mining claim for the purpose of its protecting and development, and incidentally to prevent the public domain from being acquired by dogs in the manger. Hence not all work done in or about a mining claim as assessment work may be sufficient to hold the claim. The views of the land office upon this subject may be said to be these: All improvements made upon a mining claim having a direct relation to the development thereof may be taken into consideration. Any building, machinery, roadway or other improvements to be used in connection with and essential to the practical development of the claim. Necessarily, however, improvements indicated must be associated with actual excavations, such as cuts, tunnels, shafts, etc., so as to clearly show that they are intended for use in connection with the claims. Prospecting work is within the spirit of the law but picking rock from the walls of a shaft or from outcroppings in small quantities from day to day for the mere purpose of ascertaining the value is not sufficient. Good faith has much to do with the matter, and it is said by our Supreme Court that a court will not be permitted to substitute its own judgment as to the wisdom or expediency of the method employed for developing the claim in place of that of the owner. There is nothing which excuses the non-performance of annual labor except the action of an adverse claimant, or possibly in exceptional cases for some unusual natural condition. It is immaterial whether the work done is paid for or not, or by whom it is paid, i. e. the work can be done by either the legal or equitable owner of the property with like effect. A co-owner in a mining claim who does not pay his proportionate share of the expense of representing the claim may be deprived of his interest by being given notice of claim for contribution. This notice may be by personal service or by publication in a newspaper. The right to give this is limited to a co-owner who has performed the labor. The claim for contribution must also be limited to the delinquent's share of the yearly expenditure as fixed by statute or local law. If payment is not made within the required time the delinquent co-owner's interest vests by operation of law in the contributing co-owner.

A Cure for Cholera Infantum.

"Last May," says Mrs. Curtis Baker, of Bookwalter, Ohio, "an infant child of our neighbor's was suffering from cholera infantum. The doctor had given up all hopes of recovery. I took a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy to the house, telling them I felt sure it would do good if used according to directions. In two days' time the child had fully recovered, and is now (nearly a year since) a vigorous, healthy girl. I have recommended this Remedy frequently and have never known it to fail in any single instance." For sale by R. S. Knowlton.

Run Over By a Logging Train.

Henry Franklin Sanford, of Haynes slough, who has been in the employ of the Gardiner Mill Co., at their camp on Schofield creek, was fatally injured Monday morning.

It is customary for the crew to ride on the logging train to their place of work about a mile from the camp, and this was done last Monday. The train was at the end of the road and about to stop, some of the men began to jump off the cars and Mr. Sanford, who was riding on the first car, lost his balance as he reached the ground and fell across the track. His legs were run over, at above the ankles and his body, particularly the chest, mangled between the ties of the roadbed and a block of wood on the log truck, the space between the two being about eight inches.

He was unconscious when picked up, but soon rallied and was taken care of by comrades and John Patterson, a medical student and brother of Dr. Alex. Patterson, of Gardiner. It was the intention to convey the injured man to Gardiner by row boat, but he expired before reaching Decker's Point, about half way between the camp and town.

The remains were taken from Gardiner to Marshfield on the tug Hunter, Tuesday, arriving at Dean & Co.'s wharf about 6 o'clock, and were conveyed to the home of Ed. Robinson in West Marshfield. The funeral services were conducted under the auspices of Coos Bay Camp, No. 195, W. of W., Wednesday, August 20, at 2 o'clock, Rev. Thos. Irvine officiating. The remains were interred in the I. O. O. F. Cemetery.— Coast Mail.

Whereas, the Legislature of Oregon has set apart the first Monday in September of each year as a legal holiday to be known as Labor Day;

Therefore, I, T. T. Geer, Governor of said State, do hereby recommend that all places of business of whatsoever kind, as far as possible, be closed Monday, September 1, 1902, and that the day be devoted to an observance of such exercises as may contribute to a better understanding between labor and capital, the great moving forces behind modern industrial development, and it is especially urged that employers cooperate with their employees in a mutual observance of the day in such manner as will fittingly recognize the reliance which each must place upon the other before the best results from both may be expected or attained.

In Testimony Whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State to be affixed hereto.

ALL CASES OF DEAFNESS OR HARD HEARING ARE NOW CURABLE by our new invention. Only those born deaf are incurable. HEAD NOISES CEASE IMMEDIATELY.
P. A. WERMAN, OF BALTIMORE, SAYS:

March 30, 1901.
Gentlemen:—Being entirely cured of deafness, thanks to your treatment, I will now give you a full history of my case, to be used at your discretion.
About five years ago my right ear began to ring, and this kept on getting worse, until I lost my hearing in that ear entirely.
I underwent a treatment for catarrh, for three months, without any success, consulted a number of physicians, among others, the most eminent ear specialist of this city, who told me that only an operation could help me, and even that only temporarily, but the head noises would then cease, but the hearing in the affected ear would be low forever.
I then saw your advertisement accidentally in a New York paper, and ordered your treatment. After I had used it only a few days according to your directions, the noises ceased, and to-day, after five weeks, my hearing in the diseased ear has been entirely restored. I thank you heartily and beg to remain
Very truly yours,
P. A. WERMAN, 730 S. Broadway, Baltimore, Md.
Our treatment does not interfere with your usual occupation. Examination and YOU CAN CURE YOURSELF AT HOME at a nominal cost.
