The sad intelligence of a serious misfortune having befallen Charles Olive, a former resident of this city, reached us last week. Mr. Olive has been working in a sawmill in California for some time, and it seems that by some accident lately he got one of his legs crushed and amputation was necessary, and that blood poisoning had made its appearance and his life was most despaired of.

The Masonic fraternity have let the contract for the erection of a large addition to their hall, J. H. James being the successful bidder. This is going to greatly increase the capacity of this building the only general-purpose hall in town. The Empire Stock Company who played a three-nights engagement in this city last week drew a fairly good house each evening and were well pleased with their success. The first given was "Capital vs. Labor." This is a splendid play, setting forth the great difficulties which so frequently arise between capital and labor, and was well presented. "Faust" was presented on the second night and was enthusiastically enjoyed by a large crowd. The play needs no introduction as to its merits, was presented in a far better manner than was expected in a small town, and because it was not done as well as some claims to have seen it in large cities, is not saying the members of this company are not clever actors. Alfred Aldridge and Miss Corinne Snell are far above the performers usually visiting this section and were well supported by the others of the company. The third night was given to Married by Mistake which for fun was a ringer. All enjoyed a hearty laugh and felt well paid for having attended.

A Costly Mistake. Blunders are sometimes very expensive.
