A SURPRISED THUG.
He Wanted Money, But Did Not Thirst
for Gore and Gracefully Retired.

Last night as a young business man was returning home he was accosted, in passing a dimly lighted portion of the city, on Broadalbin street, by a thug, who called out for him to throw up his hands. Instead of doing so the young man made a movement as if to draw a revolver and thrust forward his hand, leading the bold, bad thug to believe he was about to be fired upon. He hung out, "Don't shoot, I was only joking," and turning about he quickly disappeared down an alley in the darkness.

Such occurrences ought to encourage the police force to renewed vigilance in capturing and making an example of a few of these would-be toughs, and also for the city to have erected a suitable receptacle for her prisoners, the present city jail being too frail a shanty to hold even the mildest sort of a bad man.

In a short time, when the sickly street lamps are supplanted by the electric light system, the corners "for ways that are dark" will not be so numerous, and some of the now somewhat lonely streets will have a more metropolitan appearance.

Going out of the Shoe Business.

THE FARMERS AND THE TARIFF.
Cleveland's "Free Trade" Policy Is Not Wanted by the Grangers of Oregon.

Pomona grange of Marion county, a representative body of the order, met January 12th at Woodburn grange hall. It was a good meeting, and in addition to the regular order of business heard an interesting description of the state lecturer's tour in Eastern Oregon, where he has recently been, having organized twelve new granges.

The grange had under consideration the resolutions adopted by Salem grange on the 7th, and published in the HERALD of the 10th. They were adopted by unanimous vote in open meeting in the afternoon. An address on the subject of the president's message, and an address made to the Oregon state grange while in session at Salem last May by Governor Pennoyer, was made by John Minto. The criticisms on the message were to the point. 1st. The proposition to continue the internal revenue taxes were a glaring injustice to the farmers cultivating the raw material upon which they take effect. 2d. That the main purpose of the message seems to be to persuade the laboring man that he is a grievous sufferer by the law levying duties on imports to an extent beyond what a fair examination into the subject will warrant. 3d. That the proposition of the president to make a radical reduction upon or admit free raw material, was in its effect to tax the American farmer for the benefit of the manufacturer, and make the burdens of taxation more unequal than they now are. 4th. That the message read like a labored attempt to array the laboring and manufacturing interests against the interests of producers of raw material, showing no other interest in the farmer than to try to make him believe that he now pays more for the protected clothing that he buys than he receives in the enhanced price of his wool by the tariff duties. In other words, the message, as to farmers, advocates free trade, but not with the openness and candor of the address made to the Oregon state grange last May by Governor Pennoyer.

The governor's address was reviewed and it was shown that in his use of the statistics of the gross earnings of farms and manufactures, respectively, as proof of the great profits of manufactures and small profits of farming, there was a great deal of distortion. The governor, quoting the statistics of 1880, showed over ten billions invested in farms, giving a gross annual product of over three billions, and showing an investment of less than three billions in manufactures, turning out a gross product to the value of more than five billions of dollars. These statistics being used by Governor Pennoyer as a proof of the comparative profits of farming and manufacturing, the speaker claimed were utterly worthless, as there is nothing in them to show the profits of either branch of industry; and if used to show the great advantage secured to manufacturing, or against the interests of the farmer, they ought to have the very opposite effect from that intended by the governor—namely, to emphasize his advice to buy as well as sell in the markets of Europe, as they embody the value of all the raw material the American farmer produces as a basis of manufactures and all that is imported for the same purpose, as well as all the products of the forest and mines used in raw material. Consequently they prove home manufactures to be the best market the American farmer can have for at least three-fourths of his surplus. The speaker illustrated his point by showing that out of a table of the values of eighteen leading manufactures, according to the census of 1880, all but four were based on farm products, and in those of breadstuffs, slaughtered and packed meats and woolen manufactures, aggregating $1,076,001,068, all the grain, live stock and wool, except 128,000,000 pounds of wool imported, were products of American soil and claimed the cotton ought to be. He, therefore, claimed it is unwise for the American farmer to become dependent upon a customer to the manufacturers of Europe. That such a course would feed the interests of aliens and starve our own, would surely bring down the amonuments of American labor and condition of the laborer to the European level, as the protection afforded by our revenue laws for the past twenty-five years have tended to keep them up, while we as a people have made such advancement in power and wealth as no other nation of any size can ever rival. The speaker closed with the statement that, taking the history of the influence of free trade upon British farming, it was the one line of British industry that was bled and not blessed. That the system under which Ireland has been held by the mere power of England had produced results that ought to be a warning to every American to not place his country voluntarily under the trade travel of Europe as Ireland and India is held by Britain. He closed by saying that though the Oregon farmer was so situated that his grain surplus would mainly be shipped to Europe for some years to come, his standpoint as an American citizen on the question of a national policy was above that of a resident of Oregon. That the best interests of Oregon lay in a policy that would induce investments in wool and flax manufactures for which nature had fitted western Oregon beyond any other portion of the United States. That climate and other causes were at work bringing both the population and capital here to plant and maintain manufactures that the Oregon farmer should welcome as tending to realize the chief purposes of the patrons of husbandry.

OF INTEREST TO OREGON.
Measures Introduced in Congress Relating to this State—Postal Changes, Etc.

Among measures introduced this week in the interest of Oregon by Congressman Hermann is a resolution calling on the secretary of war for special action in relation to five bars above Oregon City, which it is represented are formidable obstacles to large shipping in the river above. It also asks what is being done by the engineer department to prevent diversion of the river channel at Corvallis.

Representative Hermann has introduced a bill in the house providing a large supply of improved Springfield rifles, and equipment and ammunition, and several pieces of artillery for the militia of Oregon. The preamble to the bill sets forth the necessity for a full supply in addition to the regular quota. Mr. Hermann asserts that there are precedents where congress has loaned arms and equipments to states where a proper showing was presented.

Representative Hermann has also introduced a bill which provides for the withdrawing from market of vacant lands which are on the Columbia river, on the line of the proposed boat railway at The Dalles rapids.

C. B. Frissell has been appointed postmaster at Cascade Lake, Wasco county, Oregon, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Postmaster Thomas F. Hope.

Senator Dolph has introduced in the senate a bill to amend the Indian land severalty, so that its provision shall not apply to any Indian tribe until the consent of two-thirds of the members of the tribe, over twenty-one years of age, has first been obtained. Pension have been granted to Wm. Smith, Healdsburg, Or.; James S. Phillips, Weston.

Explanation.
In another column appears under our signature an advertisement announcing the closing out of our shoe business altogether at cost. Why we sell at actual cost is because we won't buy any more and wish to clear out every shoe as quick as we can. Of course the public understand very well that if we intended to continue the shoe business such a course would be to say the least, nonsensical, and our announcement to that effect would be considered deceptive. Ladies will please note this fact and govern themselves accordingly.

The Ounce of Prevention.
