shot an arrow in a field near London 412 yards against the wind and 482 yards with the wind. The Theobald of the ambassador on hearing the expressions of surprise from the English gentlemen present, said the Sultan had shot 500 yards. This was the greatest performance of modern days, but a pillar standing on a plain near Constantinople, recorded shots ranging up to 800 yards.

Besides fishing up herring and hake the poor people at the head of Bantury bay fish up sand. "Sand-raising," as it is called, is as important an industry as catching fish. This kind of sand, known sometimes as "coral sand," is used for farm manure and costs from 8 to 9 shillings a ton—a poor price considering the poisonous character of the work and the cost of the boats required to carry it on. A sand boat costs £35 when new and £2 a year in repair. The utmost a boat-owner or partner in a boat can do in a day is to bring to shore two boatloads. The proceeds have to be divided among a number of workers, while the working season lasts for a portion of the year only. In spite of all their lifelong labor from morning to night, in winter and summer, and in calm and in storm, these crofter fishermen are in a state of chronic poverty. They do not live by their scrappy patches of holdings. They earn with difficulty from the sea barely enough to buy sleeping room and a foothold on the land. They even do more than that, they partly create with the help of the sea, the very soil for which they pay rent. The calcareous deposit which they call "coral sand" they have used to reclaim these shores of rock and bog. They have used the seaweed for the same purpose, cutting it up from the deep water with a primitive machine which may be described as a marine scythe, and the seaweed has to be paid for, if not as a separate item, then as included in the holding. Coral sand, seaweed, the refuse of house and pig-sty, and basketloads of soil found among the bowlders, these are the ingredients out of which, after years of work, the crofter fishermen have produced the tiny green patches which dot innumerable the rocky shores and the gray-brown sides of the sterile but incomparable picturesque mountains that surround Gengriff, the beautiful and the dwellings of these hard-working people! They are more fit for the pigs that go grunting and snorting in and out of them than they are for beings created in the image of God. A dry stone box with earthen floor and without windows, two or three recesses stuffed with straw for beds and the whole filled with peat reek, such as is the ordinary type of house where a fisherman and his wife live with half a dozen or more children. In one such house which I visited there were seven children.

WHAT CROCKER DIDN'T KNOW.

President of a Road He Had Never Heard of Lakeview (Or) Examiner.

When Charles Crocker was at Portland on his spike driving tour over the California and Oregon an incident occurred which is illustrative of the bewildering magnitude of the railway interest of that gentleman. He received a call at the Esmond House from the General Manager of the Oregonian Railway, a little narrow-gauge formerly under the control of a Scotch company. Mr. Crocker regarded the visit as purely complimentary but when the narrow-gauge manager began to talk about the prospects of his line, the need of repairs at certain points, and gave the magnate the assurance that it was a fairly prosperous concern. Mr. Crocker's mind became cloudy. He clearly did not know what the man was driving at. Still the official went on until he was interrupted by a friend who happened to be present and who said:

"Mr. Crocker doesn't understand what all this is about."

"Oh, I guess he does," said the General with a confident air. "I guess he knows I am President of this railroad."

"But I'm—if he did," said Mr. Crocker, "until you said so this morning."

The incident created a ripple of merriment among the railroad men who happened to be present, and some of the Portland magnates who heard the story thought a great deal less of their railroad interest when they reflected on the fact that there was a man who was President of a railroad and didn't know it.

THE DOMINION GOVERNMENT.

To Dissolve the House and Appeal to the Country.

WINNIPEG, Jan. 22.—In view of the announcement that it was decided in the Conservative caucus yesterday to oppose the re-election of Greenway and Ministers, the Government has practically decided to dissolve the House and appeal to the country. It is understood that nearly all of Greenway's followers are in favor of a general election. Norway has asked the House for the appointment of a commissioner to investigate the charges preferred against himself and his Government in regard to acting in collusion with the Hudson Bay Railway contractors and defrauding the Province in the matter of the Red River road.

A ROBBER KILLED.

He Shoots an Officer and is Himself Killed.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 22.—Early this morning an unknown man was noticed by Policeman Thomas Duff acting suspiciously in the vicinity of a fine residence on Pine street. The officer ordered the man to throw up his hands. The command was met with a pistol shot from the man, which lodged in the officer's abdomen. Duff drew his revolver and fired three shots at his assailant, killing him. The wounded officer was removed to the receiving hospital, where it was ascertained that the wound, though serious, will not prove fatal. From a description furnished the police by several men who have been robbed in the vicinity, it is believed the man who was killed is the person who has been committing the robberies.

To Our Many Patrons and Friends.

Should we place a private selling price on our goods in the shape of letters or other characters, how easy it would be for us to give a liberal discount, and at the same time add a greater per cent to our profit. We believe in justice and equity in business as in all things else, and have with this in view marked our stock of boots and shoes in figures which all can understand, and are during January giving 15 per cent off from these prices to all cash buyers.

A Storm Reproof?

The girl arose and moved for the door. The fat man, thin man, the medium man, and several other men started also. When they stepped the girl turned back and re-entered the train. And there stood the men who had followed her out on the station platform. They had been routed. The game had doubled on them. I tell you, a pretty girl needs to have a face of iron to go on an elevated train between 9 and 10 in the morning.
