

FIVE GOOD BIRD STORIES.

A large white swan flew down William Henderson's chimney at Swansea and put out the kitchen fire.

Shelden, N. Y., is alive with partridges. A single hunter in a single hour recently shot twenty-seven.

A Georgia man had a pure white hen. Recently she began moulting, and every white feather that dropped out was replaced by a black one, and now she is clad in deep black bill to tail.

Hundreds of English sparrows are being dragged from their nests or roosts beneath the cornices of the high buildings in Columbus, Indiana, by large flocks of screech owls, that carry them away and devour them.

For the fifth year a common crow has come with the first snow to the home of a correspondent of the London Field. He will take a piece of fat from the hand. There was a heavy snow storm on December 11th and the bird appeared for the first time this season, received his breakfast, and departed. He returned again with the first severe weather.
