ULTIMATE FAMILY MEDICINE!

"I have used Simmons' Liver Regulator for many years, having made it my only family medicine. My mother before me was very partial to it. It is a safe, good and reliable medicine for any disorder of the system, and if used in time is a great preserver of life. I often recommend it to my friends, and shall continue to do so."
—Rev. James M. Rollins, Pastor M. E. Church, So. Fairfield, Va.

TIME AND DOCTORS' BILLS SAVED BY always keeping Simmons' Liver Regulator in the house.

"I have found Simmons' Liver Regulator the best family medicine I ever used for anything. It has cured my indigestion, biliousness, and found it to relieve immediately. After eating a hearty supper, if on going to bed, I take about a teaspoonful, I never feel the effects of the supper eaten."
—OVID G. SPARKS, "Ex-Mayor Macon, Ga."

The American Ahead in the Race on the Thames.

THE ADMISSION OF TERRITORIES.

They are Likely to Become a Part of the Union—Their Political Complexion—Eastern News.

The Herald's Special Dispatches.
LONDON, Feb. 13.—The sculling race between Wallace Ross, of America, and George Bubeary, of England, for the championship of England, challenge cup and stake of £400, took place to-day over the Thames course from Putney to Mort lake. Ross won by two lengths.

Roof Fell In.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—The roof of the ordinance building at the Washington navy yards, fell in this morning, being unable to support the heavy weight of snow upon it. The damage is estimated at $30,000.

ADMISSION TO STATEHOOD.

Encouraging Prospects for Dakota, New Mexico, and Washington.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—Democratic members of the house and senate committees on territories have agreed to report the bill for admission to statehood of Dakota entire, New Mexico, Montana and Washington. It is the expectation of these members that the bill can be passed by both houses during the present session. They urge that republicans are not opposed to the measure on political grounds, as Dakota will come in as a republican state to offset the democracy of New Mexico, while in Montana and Washington the other party has the decided advantage.

A Heroic Kentuckian.

Nashville American.
A story is told of the heroism displayed by a Kentucky Colonel—a son of a Colonel, who was out soliciting with the narrator. During the absence of the regimental surgeon one day the Colonel was seized with a violent discomfort in the region of the sword belt, and he was advised to drink a scoundrelly potion compounded of turpentine and water. He took it down with never a wink. "How do you like it, sir?" asked the Major, with mock solicitude. "Bah—it is nothing," said the hero of the performance as tranquilly as he would have described the loss of a leg by a cannon shot. "I could drink it without the turpentine."

Sweet Satisfaction.

gentleman (to uncle Rastus, who is in trouble with a balky mule)—Uncle Rastus, do you think kicking that mule in the stomach will make him go?
Uncle Rastus—Da haunt nifian' wot'll make dat mule go when he chides not to, sah. I'm only kickin' him for my own satisfaction.

Life in Dakota.

"Mama said a little Dakota boy, as he came into the parlor, "where is papa?"
"He is crawling up the chimney, dear, to see what kind of a day it is."

Peace on Earth.

Awaits that countless army of martyrs, whose ranks are constantly recruited from the victims of nervousness and nervous diseases. The price of the boon is a systematic course of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the finest and most genial of tonic courses, pursued with reasonable persistence, easier, pleasanter and safer than to swill the vitriolizing department of a seductive alcoholic or the reverse, beef extracts, nerve foods, narcotics, sedatives and poisons in disguise. "Tired Nature's sweet restorer, balmy sleep," is the providential recuperant weak nerves, and its glorious franchise being usually the consequences of sound digestion and increased vigor, the great stomachic which insures both is productive also repose at the required time. Not undressed awakens the individual who uses it, but vigorous, clear-headed and tranquil. Use the Bitters also in fever and ague, rheumatism, kidney troubles, constipation and biliousness.

What am I to Do?

The symptoms of biliousness are un happily but too well known. They differ in different individuals to some extent. A bilious man is seldom a breakfast eater. Too frequently, alas, he has an excellent appetite for liquids but none for solids of a morning. His tongue will hardly bear inspection at any time; if it is not white and furred, it is rough, at all events. The digestive system is wholly out of order and diarrhea or constipation may be a symptom or the two may alternate. There are often hemorrhoids or even loss of blood. There may be giddiness and often headache and acidity or flatulence and tenderness in the pit of the stomach. To correct all this if not effect a cure try Green's August Flower. It costs but a trifle and thousands attest its efficacy.

Mothers and nurses may give Simmons' Liver Regulator to children and to the most delicate home bound invalid with the utmost confidence in its safety and efficacy. It saves no end of doctors' bills. Always keep it in the house, for it is a household remedy, and there are many ailments that the Regulator will cure. It is safe to take in any condition of the system. No fear from exposure after taking this medicine.

RACE WITH AN AVALANCHE.

Three Miners Pursued by a Vast Mass of Snow.

Victoria (B. C.)
Several young men, among whom was A. Stevenson, arrived in Vancouver yesterday from up the line. They say the weather is very severe in the mountains, and it seemed like striking a tropical reef when they got to Vancouver. Mr. Stevenson says he witnessed a snowslide a few days ago the like of which he never desires to see again in such close proximity to him. He and two companions were working on the side of a deep ravine when one of the men called for him to "look at the snowslide." Looking in the direction of the noise, which just then burst upon his ears, he saw the whole side of a lofty mountain peak moving down the slope. Notwithstanding the deep valley which separated them from the slide, they thought it advisable to put as much space as possible between them and the fast advancing snowslide. They accordingly took to their heels and ran with all their might. The roaring avalanche came tearing on, carrying before it large trees, rocks and earth, while on either side of the tumbling mass the tornado swept the towering forest trees as straws before the swiping scythe. Scarcely ten minutes elapsed from the time they noticed the movement till it had filled the ravine and was climbing the opposite slope, as if eager to engulf the flying forms. Barked for they had outrun their hats and wellnigh their breath, they fled before the impending danger. The wind shrieked, the snow flew high in the air, making day almost as dark as night, and rendering more hazardous their doubtful situation. Huge trees snapped like pipestems or with a terrific crash lay uprooted in the way. Completely exhausted and almost overwhelmed with snowdrifts, Stevenson stopped beside a giant fir and turned to look for his companions, and to his consternation they were nowhere to be seen. He called loud, but received no answer. What had happened? Had they been swallowed up by the devouring slide, or struck by a falling tree? Fearful lest some evil had overtaken them he awaited the subsiding of the storm.

Soon all was over, the uplifted snow fell lightly on the troubled scene, the tall and stately forest trees raised once more their benighted heads, the slowly sinking sun had shed his bright rays along the lonely mountain side, where but a few minutes ago had stood a lofty evergreen, but now glistened in the sun blanched and bare. Sadly and almost hopelessly he retraced his steps, looking to the right and left to see if aught remained to tell him of his comrades' fate. He had not gone far when, coming to a telegraph pole, he was delighted to find scrambling from beneath a mound of snow his two companions, who had become bewildered and fatigued in their race for life and had sunk beside the pole to die. With glad and thankful hearts they returned to their shack, which they found buried, but which they soon unearthed, and reviving the fire they set about to prepare tea, while they cheerfully talked over their hair-breadth escape.

High Priced Orchids.

Philadelphia Times.
The extravagance of the tulip mania in Holland were not greater than that of some of the flower crazes of some of our rich men. We read of $500,000 worth of orchids being sold at auction, and among the millionaires who spend a part of their surplus income in flowers is Erastus Corning of New York. He has thousands of these choice plants, and some of the cost several hundred dollars apiece. His gardener offered $500 for an orchid at Mrs. Morgan's auction, but a flower-fancier from New Jersey overbid him $400, and got the orchid for $900. Erastus Corning's green house covers about two acres, and his gardener has been in his employ for thirty years. He knows all about flowers, and it costs Corning a good salary to keep him. His flowers are of all kinds, and he raises oranges, lemons and bananas in these greenhouses. He has all kinds of tropical plants, and he welcomes visitors to his establishment.

A Joke on a Pawnbroker in China.

North China Daily News.
The new District Magistrate in Shanghai is making himself a name among the people and correcting abuses for them. The last story is that he visited a large pawnbroker for shop incognito and pawed a coat for $00 cash. Having received the money he departed, but afterwards returned to redeem the article. The cash he tendered was the same he had received from the pawnbroker's assistant. Nevertheless, the latter said there were some bad ones among them and that every one hundred was two cash short. The magistrate went away, and, having returned to the city, sent his card to the master of the shop with a request that he would pay him a visit. On complying with the request the man was informed that he was cheating the people, and the magistrate recounted the incident which had occurred to himself. He then gave the pawnbroker the choice of two evils, namely, that he should receive a beating with the bamboo or else pay 1000 taels to the Yellow River inundation fund. The man chose the latter alternative and paid the money.

BLAINE'S LETTER.

Comment of Leading Republicans Concerning It.

WHAT JOHN SHERMAN SAYS.

The Opponents of Blaine Consider Him Positively Out of the Field—The Strongest Man.

Special to the Herald.
Chicago, Feb. 13.—A Columbus, Ohio, dispatch says: John Sherman, who is in the city, on hearing Blaine would not allow his name to be used before the Chicago convention, said he had been expecting some such utterance from Blaine for some time. He had understood it would be forthcoming. Blaine was one of the foremost Americans, whom every republican would have delighted to honor, and it was a source of regret that he had not concurred to make the race again. Sherman did not care to talk much about Blaine's letter, but thought it would cause a number of other candidates to come to the front. He proposed to take the race for the Ohio delegation and would contest honorably for the nomination. Blaine was a republican that could sweep the country if nominated. But he had understood all along that Blaine would not again seek the nomination. It was on this hypothesis that he had entered the race.

SENATOR HAWLEY'S OPINION.

New York, Feb. 13.—The Herald says: Senator Hawley, who is staying at the Astor house, when shown Mr. Blaine's letter, said: "Well, I am not altogether surprised, and yet I did not expect this. I was talking to some of Blaine's closest friends only a few days ago and they had then no idea that Blaine would come to such a decision. They did not expect anything of the sort, in fact they were drawing plans for a Blaine campaign. Still, as I said, I am not altogether surprised at Blaine's action."

THE GENERAL TOPIC.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13.—Blaine's letter is the leading topic of political gossip to-day. Blaine's avowed friends in congress show a desire not to express their opinions, but intimate that the letter only indicates the disinclination which he has shown to press his claims for nomination. The prominent men known as opponents to Blaine hail the letter as an actual withdrawal on his part from the presidential race. Senator Allison and others who may be classed as presidential candidates content themselves by saying that Blaine's expressions are undoubtedly sincere, but that he would have to yield to the demand of the party that he should become a candidate, if it should so express itself in the convention. Among the prominent democrats in both houses the expression seems to prevail that the letter is far from establishing the fact that Blaine will not be a presidential candidate.

His Portrait Didn't Suit Him.

New York Herald.
When New York photographers sent a proof of a photograph to a customer it is usually accompanied by some such directions as these: "Please suggest any changes when you may think necessary in proof, such as brightening and straightening eyes, making mouth smaller, thinning lips, reducing shadows, making hair lighter or darker, softening lines, removing stray hairs, wrinkles in dress; also altering expression of mouth—all of which can be done directly on the negative."

One of the most prominent photographers in the city received these instructions from a rustic customer on Friday last; "Please make hair smoother. I don't think my mouth is quite so large as shown in picture. The attendant did not call my attention to the fact that my necktie was on crooked. Can it be straightened? On the whole I would rather have the whiskers removed. They make me look too old."

I wonder what he takes my establishment for—a barbershop?"

exclaimed the indignant artist.

Considerably Mixed.

General Alexander told a neat anecdote at the Inman dinner the other night. He said he had been standing that day in the capitol overlooking the busy city of Atlanta, and thinking of the great corporation he represented, the Central road, he wished that the two might find their interests so identical that there should be no difference between them. "Indeed," he said, "I want to see them as much mixed up as was the fellow at Petersburg. When the crater was exploded, a part of our line was blown into the air. Up the brave fellows went, and down they came in debris. We were digging them out, one after the other, when we struck one man who had been entirely buried. He was a pitiful sight as we pulled him out, but he rubbed the dirt from his eyes and said: 'Boys, have ye tuck them or have they tuck us?'"
