OLD DRESS AND NEW.

Contrast of Costumes Presented by Pictures of 100 Years Ago.

London Daily News.

In looking at the portraits by the old masters in the Royal Academy and at the Grosvenor Gallery one cannot fail to be struck by the extremely unpleasing outline of the female form of those days. There are no undulating lines; everything is rigid and uncompromising. The corset of those days must have been a kind of daily torture, and the result of wearing it was every more hideous than the terrible wasp-waist with which our own day is so familiar. The waist itself, in these portraits, is situated somewhere in the region of the hips, an arrangement that must have greatly inconvenienced the internal organs, packing them together like sardines in a tin—only rather more so. From the waist up to the shoulders there is a perfectly straight line, sloping outward, it is true, but with no variations from absolute rigidity of outline. One thinks with amazement of the pains our grandmothers must have taken and the excessive inconvenience they must have endured in order to destroy all the grace and beauty of their forms as nature made them. Uncompromising stiffness must have been the characteristic of their gait, and the high head-dresses and high heels would in no way tend to detract from these.

It was curious, at the private views, to contrast the dress of the last century portraits with that of the men and women who came to dress at them. In the matter of dress our own period compares favorably with that of a hundred years ago. Little fault could be found with the dress of today, were but the hump at the back of the waist wholly done away with, and the walking dresses kept sufficiently short in the skirts to clear the ground. There is a tendency this winter to have them long enough at the back to dip into the copious mud. Even short skirts get muddy on a damp day; when they are so long as to touch the ground the results are neither pleasant, clearly, nor advantageous to health.

An Excellent Medicine.

"My wife and myself were in bad health for some fifteen years. I chanced to be looking over one of Simmons' Liver Regulator Almanacs and saw A. H. Stevens and Bishop Pierce's names in testimonials. I then obtained some of the Regulator, and can heartily recommend the Liver Regulator to my friends as an excellent medicine."

Z. E. HARRIS, M. D., Gordonsville, Va.

WITLESS FAMILY MEDICINE!

"I have used Simmons' Liver Regulator for many years, having made it my only Family Medicine. My mother before she was very partial to it. It is a safe, good and reliable medicine for any disorder of the system, and if used in time is a great preventive of sickness. I often recommend it to my friends, and shall continue to do so."

Rev. James M. Rollins, Pastor M. E. Church, So. Fairfield, Va.

TIME AND DOCTORS' BILLS SAVED BY TRYING KEEPING SIMMONS' LIVER REGULATOR IN THE HOUSE.

"I have found Simmons' Liver Regulator the best family medicine I ever used for anything that may happen, have used it in Indigestion, Colic, Diarrhea, Biliousness, and found it to relieve immediately. After eating a hearty supper, if on going to bed, I take about a teaspoonful, I never feel the effects of the supper eaten."

THE MICROSCOPE.

Its Uses Explained by Professor Wythe.

Examiner.

The lecture room of the Cooper Medical Institute was well filled at 8 o'clock last evening when Professor Wythe, lectured on "The Microscope as a Detective." The lecture was highly entertaining, and teemed with practical illustrations which were both amusing and instructive.

In opening his address Professor Wythe said that no invention of modern or ancient times equalled in interest and general usefulness that of the microscope. For many centuries after it was discovered that a globe of water contained magnifying power, the use of the microscopic principle was not utilized. It is only 300 years since Zacharias Jansen made the first compound instrument of that kind in Holland. Then followed in improvements on the old method of adjusting lenses. The greatest discovery of Galileo, that of Jupiter's satellites, would be made by a small telescope which would be regarded as comparatively useless in this advanced age of telescopic search as well as microscopic search. These improvements have been so widespread and beneficial that navigation or commerce cannot dispense with the telescope any more than can medicine or the sciences with the microscope.

"The use of the microscope" continued the lecturer, has become general among the people of intelligence and discernment. Its use aids in the detection of disease, crime and the abatement of products. The microscope is not only an eye, and the eye is nothing but a window of the soul. But by its use every portion of the human frame liable to disease, is analyzed and the causes as well as effects of disease been discovered. The study of bacteria by Heck in 1855 with the aid of the microscope was fruitless results until Pasteur in 1881 followed Heck's ideas and actually carried them out by the aid of appliances to which Heck could not have had access. France was losing 100,000,000 francs per annum by a malignant silk worm disease until Pasteur put a stop to the damage by pointing out the cause of the trouble and its remedy, all of which he obtained by an intelligent use of the microscope. This is said to be the age of acclimations, and the microscopist of experience know it to be true. The microscope serves humanity by bringing these deceptions to light. With its use we can detect foreign matter in substances and unerringly point out the right from the wrong. So widespread is this habit of adulteration as indicated by microscopists that efforts are now being made at Washington to have rigorous laws passed prohibiting unscrupulous men from robbing people not only of their money, but of their health, by introducing poisonous substances into food. If a reform be worked in this regard it may be attributed to the use of "that little but useful thing, the microscope."

Professor Wythe then arose spoke of the microscope and its uses in the detection of crime. By its use have murderers been brought to justice and accused innocent men acquitted. Its use in courts of justice has become universal, and the most skillful forger's efforts prove fruitless when his handiwork is displayed for critical inspection beneath the microscopist's lens.

The physician can detect disease, and the scientist matures most profound secrets with its aid. While the telescope takes us far away to other worlds, and reveals to us their hitherto buried mysteries, the microscope explains to us the things of life which surround humanity, and points out the remedies which, if acted upon, will be of inestimable service to mortal men.

Southern Antidote for Malaria. It is generally known that Simmons' Liver Regulator is relied upon to secure immunity from all malarial disorders. This is proven by its popularity, and anyone who has lived in the South has been curative effects and the protection it gives against this weakening and dangerous malady. It acts more promptly than calomel or quinine, without any of their injurious consequences.

Mothers and nurses may give Simmons' Liver Regulator to children and to the most delicate home-bound invalid with the utmost confidence in its safety and efficacy. It saves no end of doctors' bills. Always keep it in the house, for it is a household remedy, and there are many ailments that the Regulator will cure. It is safe to take in any condition of the system. No fear from exposure after taking this medicine.

The Crown Prince.

SAN REMO, Feb. 20.—A bulletin issued at 11:30 this morning states that the crown prince's sleep last night was disturbed by violent fits of coughing. He is without fever. His expectation is copious, the mucous being of a brownish tint. His general condition, however, is fairly good.

CRUELTY TO INSECTS.

A Bird in Florida That Impales Them on Thorns.

Florida Correspondence New York Sun.

Of all the birds in this section, there is one that affords an idle lot of amusement if he will spend an occasional hour watching closely. It is the shrike or butcher bird. A few days ago I was in an orange grove a few rods from the house, where an old dorky, with the assistance of a mule, was plowing, and a butcher bird was flying from tree to tree, following up the newly plowed furrow, looking for insects. Every few minutes he would go to pick up a beetle or insect, and for some time he simply swallowed his victims. After a little he seemed to have had enough to eat, and just then a little flock of larks were seen running along in the newly turned furrow, at times almost touching the old dorky's heels. Now and then they would come across an insect too large for them to easily manage, and then would begin a little scuffle. Then the butcher bird would sweep down in the center of the little flock, snatch up the insect and fly off with it before the larks knew what had happened. The butcher bird had eaten all he wanted, and so, with the beetle in his beak, he flew to the nearest orange tree and, selecting a long, sharp thorn, he impaled the insect upon it. I watched this bird put at least ten insects on different thorns. During an hour, besides numerous large insects, the butcher bird captured two snakes, the largest of which was two feet long and very lively. These snakes, although they squirmed and twisted, were taken with difficulty to an orange tree, and after a good bit of hard tugging, they were left with a thorn through their bodies.

When the butcher bird is not looking for food or for victims to stick on thorns, he is generally looking for other birds for the purpose of fighting them, and so he keeps busy from daylight till dark.

Peace on Earth

Awaits that countless army of martyrs, whose ranks are constantly recruited from the victims of nervousness and nervous diseases. The price of the boon is a systematic course of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the finest and most gentle of tonic nervines, pursued with reasonable persistence. Easier, pleasanter and safer than those to swash the vitualizing department with pseudo-tonics, alcoholic or the reverse, beef extracts, nerve foods, narcotics, sedatives and poisons in disguise. "Tired Nature's sweet restored, balmy sleep," is the providential recuperant of weak nerves, and this glorious franchise being usually the consequence of sound digestion and increased vigor, the great stomachic which insures both is productive also of repose at the required time. Not unrefreshed awakens the individual who uses it, but vigorous, clear headed and tranquil. Use the Bitters also in fever and ague, rheumatism, kidney troubles, constipation and biliousness.

What am I to Do?

The symptoms of biliousness are un happily but too well known. They differ in different individuals to some extent. A bilious man is seldom a breakfast eater. Too frequently, alas, he has an excellent appetite for liquids but none for solids of a morning. His tongue will hardly bear inspection at any time; if it is not white and furred, it is rough, at all events. The digestive system is wholly out of order and diarrhoea or constipation may be a symptom or the two may alternate. There are often hemorrhoids or excoriation of blood. There may be eddiness and often headache and acidity or flatulence and tenderness in the pit of the stomach. To correct all this if not effect a cure try Green's August Flower. It costs but a trifle and thousands attest its efficacy.
