Linn County Republican Convention

A republican convention for Linn county is hereby called to meet at the court house in Albany on April 4th at 10 A. M. for the purpose of electing delegates to the state republican convention, which convenes in Portland April 11th, and for the purpose of placing in nomination candidates for the various county offices, and to transact such other business as may properly come before the convention.

Table listing delegates for various townships: East Albany, West Albany, Halsey, Harrisburg, Brownsville, Shedd, Lebanon, Scio, Waterloo, Orleans, Crawfordville, Sweet Home, Fox Valley, Center, Santiam, Franklin Butte, Syracuse, Liberty, Brush Creek, Rock Creek.

Total 79. The committee recommend that the primaries be held on March 31st, at 2 P. M. S. S. TRAIN, G. W. DAVIS, Sec. Chairman.

LAUGH AND GROW FAT.

The full bearing of the homely maxim at the head of this article is not duly appreciated by the mass of the people, and in consequence thereof the disciples of Esculapius find greater enjoyment than they would otherwise do, for it is an apparent fact that good nature and hilarity lead to health and longevity.

Laugh and grow fat could very appropriately be rendered laugh and live long, for real genuine laughter means good health, which is one of the results of a contented and evenly poised mind, which is also conducive to laughter.

Very few realize how much the mind and will of the individual is capable of influencing and controlling the state of bodily health, of creating and perpetuating the "laugh and grow fat" condition of life. If they did there would be more hearty indulging in mirthful contentment of mind and less running after the illusive benefits of physic.

The condition spoken of is one very materially of education, and its benefits run all through the various ramifications of business and social connections of human existence. The Fortnightly Review says: "A good joke partaken with a man is like the Arab's salt. Our common emotion of humorous pleasure is a bond between us which we would not thereafter break."

The education of the emotions of actors and actresses, apart from that which they afford to the emotions of the public, is a very curious subject of consideration. A great part of the training of an actor consists in learning to give the utmost possible external expression to those emotions which is the task of other people to reduce to a vanishing point. Undoubtedly (as one of the most fitted of the profession remarked), the habit of representing fictitious feelings tends to produce a superficial sensibility and an exaggerated mode of expressing the same. But it may be questioned whether this extreme be worse than the opposite, wherein the expression of the emotions is so feebly repressed that the feelings themselves die out for want of air and exercise—a consummation not unknown in the reprobate caste of Vere de Vere. Besides literature and the stage, music, no doubt, is a most marvelous agency or calling out emotion. It is, in fact, the art of emotion. The musician plays with the strings of the human heart while he touches those of his instrument. Since Collins wrote his "Ode to the Passions" and Pope his "Ode to St. Cecilia's Day," there is no need to describe how every emotion known to man may be brought out by music. Something may well be hoped for a generation which, rejecting the more trivial and sensuous music of Italy, finds delight in the exalted play of the emotions which follow the wands of Bach and Beethoven and Wagner. The efforts now made to offer music at once cheap and good to as many of the working classes as can be found to enjoy it is perhaps the most direct way conceivable of fostering their best emotions. The beauty of nature and of art are also powerful levers of the higher emotions, which it becomes us to use for the benefit of our fellows whenever it is practicable to do so. But while these varied engines are at work to stir beneficently the emotions of the masses, there are on the other hand certain agencies in full play amongst us which have, I fear, a totally different effect; which in fact can only tend to deaden, if not to destroy, the most precious of emotions—those of family affection. I do not know that the question has ever been faced. What are the moral effects of our enormous hospitals? From the side of the bodily interests of the patients they may be wholly advantageous. But as regards the sacred institutions of the family, on which society itself is based, I ask, what, except evil, can result from the habitual separation of relatives the moment that illness makes a claim for tenderness and care?

The points hinted at in reference to the destruction of family affection, by the influence of the workings of the immense hospitals in large cities in this quotation, is one that deserves attention from philanthropists. There certainly would appear to be some foundation for the assertion made. But the main object shown in the extract is that the study and practice of good humor promotes a better condition of society, and worth the while of human beings to cultivate and expand. In fact, laugh and grow fat.

THE democratic Alta says: "Alabama offers her compliments to the other thirty-seven states, with its debt provided for, interest paid up and $400,000 in the treasury." Great Scott, with such an appalling surplus in the treasury, what a terrible fix Alabama must be in. Certainly she deserves commiseration.

The retention of the internal revenue system at present, after the demand for its use is entirely gone, is due to the fact that it creates a vast army of appointees that are supposed to be vulnerable to the control of the power that appointed them.

It would not be amiss for all other wife-beaters to follow the example of the New Hampshire genus homo of that persuasion. Go and shoot themselves in the head, until entirely dead.
