LABETINE MED. CO. OROVILLE, CAL.
HAVE YOU A COLD in the head which does not get better? Have you an excessive secretion of mucus or matter in the nasal passages which either must be blown from the nose or drop back behind the palate, or hawked or snuffed backward to the throat? Are you troubled by sneezing, sniffing, weak and inflamed eyes, frequent soreness of the throat, ringing or roaring in the ears, hoarse or less impairment of the hearing, loss of smell, memory impaired, dizziness or heaviness of the head, dryness or heat of nose? Have you lost all sense of smell? Have you a hacking cough? Have you dyspepsia? Is your breath foul? If so you have the CATARRH. Some have all these symptoms, others only a part. The leading symptom of ordinary catarrh is increased secretion of mucus of yellow or greenish colored matter. Foul breath is caused by the decomposition of mucus exhaled from festering ulcers far back in the head; sometimes the membrane covering the bones is eaten away and the bones themselves gradually decay. Such cases are in fact objects of pity, as stretch from sore throats to the corruption within.
As every bath drawn into the lungs must pass over and become polluted by the secretions in the nasal passages, it must necessarily follow that poisoning of the whole system gradually takes place, while the morbid matter that is swallowed during the sleep passes into the stomach, enfeebles digestion, and often produces dyspepsia, and finally great debility, nervousness and consumption.
DO NOT PROCRASTINATE.
If you have experienced any of the above symptoms do not delay, but try CALIFORNIA CATARRH CURE at once. We positively guarantee a few applications to relieve, and a thorough treatment to cure. $5 in bottles, treatment for $15, sent by mail $1.

Furniture Dealer
—IN A—
Live Town.
This is what Albany is at present, and in order to keep pace with the lively times in this city, W. H. Wilbard has enlarged his store and stock up that he now has the most complete and desirable line of furniture in the valley. His double salesrooms in Froman's block are filled with an elegant assortment of new furniture, consisting of lounges in new patterns, fine gold picture frames, Willow chairs, easy rockers, marble tables, brackets, etc., etc. An examination of the stock will show this to be true in every respect.

TO THE PARENTS OF THE PUPILS OF THE ALBANY PUBLIC SCHOOLS.
Among the evils that may be connected with a school there are none greater than that of irregular attendance. The effects of this evil are not only felt by the school as a whole, but they extend, in a still greater degree, to the individual pupil. I am sure that much of the irregular attendance in our schools is caused by a misunderstanding of its effects, on the part of many who have a large control of the matter. In consequence of this fact, many pupils are absent from school through the indifference of the results. Parents are often to blame for the backwardness of their children in school, and it is not to be wondered at that pupils sometimes fail to retain their places in class. Experience shows that most of those pupils who are degraded, or put into lower classes, are put there through the effects of irregular attendance. The pupil who is absent a day here and a day there, has lost a link in the chain of reasoning that must be continued from lesson to lesson; he is conscious of weak places in his recitations. The loss of one or two recitations might be remedied, to a certain extent, by extra exertions on the part of the pupil; and yet he is lower. He loses the enthusiasm that a class give him, from not being present to recite with them. In almost all classes there are new thoughts and ideas developed in every recitation. He loses these. The pupil who is absent several days in a month, losing a number of recitations, becomes hopelessly discouraged eventually, unless he be of an unusually hopeful disposition. Soon all is darkness and blank. He does not see why "this is so" or "that is so" nor does he remember of having recited on this subject before; for the very good reason that he was absent when it was presented to his class.

What is to be done? The teacher can not take the time of the whole class to clear the pupil's mind of this seemingly mysterious subject. The good of the majority is the object for which the teacher must work. No, the pupil must do the best he can, and in ninety-nine classes out of every hundred he will not be able to regain his footing in the class; he will lose all his interest in his studies, and the time which should be spent in preparing his lessons will be wasted in idleness and mischief. I recognize the fact that there may be emergencies which will render occasional absence of pupil from school desirable and necessary, and I also understand very well that in cases of sickness there must be a relaxation of the ordinary requirements. But are there not often times that children are kept at home for this little thing and that little thing, when it would be far better for all concerned that the children should be in school? It is convenient, I know, to keep them at home to do this and that, but think what evils are entailed upon them, when by a very little inconvenience and effort on the part of the parents, they might be happy in school, keeping pace with their wide-spread classmates.

It is almost as great an evil as irregular attendance. It begets in the pupil the habit of being behind. A pupil who continues to be tardy is usually found to be behind in his work at school. He seems to feel that to be behind is a disgrace. By punctually closing, as well as by punctually opening, school, we aim to set a good example, and, by this means, to lessen, to some extent, the number of cases of tardiness. Beginning at any time between nine and ten in the morning means closing at any time between four and five in the evening. Loose time at either end of the day makes loose time at the other end. Our school does not close "somewhere along about four," but precisely at four. We close on principle and not by chance. Promptness and decision in doing common and frequently recurring duties constitute an important element in the character of any individual. By being prompt, then, in all that pertains to the school we wish not only to set a good example to those under our care, but to show both parents and pupils that we practice what we require of others, and that our school is managed in the respect of time, on business principles. We say to our school, "you come at the right time and you shall go at the right time. We believe in dismissing when the hour for dismissal comes; you must come in time, so that our work may be done before night."

It is an erroneous notion that all the schools tasks are over as soon as the lessons have been recited, whereas the plan is to secure some time each day, in school, for preparing for the next day's work, and for such general instruction and training as may be thought helpful. Under the mistaken view, that the pupils presence is not needed except during his hours of actual recitations, we receive numerous requests from parents to permit their children to come late, and to leave school as soon as they have recited. The right development of the pupils demands that they should be present throughout each day's sessions, from the opening to the closing of the day's work. If they are not actually engaged in reciting lessons, provision is made for their spending the time in study and in other suitable ways, so that there is no idle time and there are no profitless hours.

In many cases children dismissed early from school, under request easily obtained from parents, have, instead of going directly home, placed themselves in reach of temptation by loitering on the way, or by going to places of which their parents were ignorant. We feel unwilling for these reasons, to grant excuses for lateness, or to consent to early dismissal, and beg that parents will not make such applications except in case where the necessity is imperative.
If it is desired that a pupil should take private lessons in special studies from other teachers, or should assist in any home work, a very little contrivance will, in most cases, secure hours for these purposes other than the regular school hours.

I believe that the best interests of the children are secured, and their future usefulness advanced, by having them feel that in connecting themselves with the school, they enter upon the preparation of themselves for the real work of life, that for the time being, it is as real as anything can be in the future, and that therefore they should cultivate habits of promptness, patience, and fidelity. But a pupil who is taken out of school to attend entertainments, to visit with some friends or relatives, or to see him off on the train, to perform some household task which might be attended to at any other time, or to gratify some caprice, is apt to conclude that his school work is of but little importance, and he thus grows up without that painstaking earnestness and sincerity which have so much to do with success in whatever may be his calling in time to come. Our schools are to be regarded not simply as agencies for gaining information in a few branches of study but as helps for the training of character.

By example, by precept, by almost every available means, we try to remedy the evils referred to but without the hearty co-operation of parents, the faithful labors of the best teachers can but imperfectly produce their results. Regular and punctual attendance of pupils cannot be secured without it; nor, indeed, can any earnest and cheerful performance of any school duties. "Make our schools as free as sunlight and air—let wisdom cry at the corner of the streets—yet if the home does not love and cherish the school, the latter must stand as some piece of mighty machinery, grand glittering, golden in promise, but weak and imperfect in performance, lacking that impelling power which alone can set its thousands of wheels in full and fruitful action."
Parents, I respectfully but earnestly ask your hearty co-operation in securing the regular and punctual attendance of your children at school.

G. A. WALKER,
Principal.

Gold Watch Given Away.
Francis Pfeiffer has placed in his show case at the Albany soda and candy works a $50 gold watch, which will be given away to the customer who purchases of him the most cigars. Every person who buys a cigar will receive a ticket. At the end of ninety days the one holding the largest number of tickets will receive the watch. It is warranted to be a genuine gold watch worth $50. His cigars are the best in the market. This is a rare chance to get a gold watch free.
