A Steamship Collision Results in the Death of 16 Persons—Mathew Arnold Dead—Coast Notes.

WASHINGTON, April 16.—The president this afternoon sent to the senate the following nominations: Frank Nicholson, of Missouri, to be assayer of the United States assay office at St. Louis, Mo.; Robert Colver, Wisconsin, collector of customs for Port Lacombe, Wis.; W. T. Waltham, Miss., U. S. Consul at Demara; Harvey E. Shields, Indiana, to be receiver of public moneys at Seaside (formerly at Olympia) W. T.

NOTED CHIEF DEAD.
Mathew Arnold Drops Dead of Heart Disease in London.

LONDON, April 16.—Mathew Arnold, the noted poet, scholar, critic and theologian, whose recent article on "Civilization in the United States" attracted marked attention, died suddenly to-day in Liverpool from heart disease. Yesterday morning he attended the Presbyterian church, and after lunch went out for a walk with Mrs. Arnold. He was in high spirits. Soon after leaving the house he fell forward and never afterwards spoke. His daughter arrived from Liverpool an hour after his death. Immediately after Mr. Arnold fell he was carried into the hospital for heart disease. The physician who attended him said that he never rallied, and died in a few hours after being taken in doors. The doctors have given a certificate that Mr. Arnold's death was due to heart disease.

DEATH OF FAILING.
The San Francisco Tragedy Results in the Death of Failing.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 16.—Charles D. Failing, who was shot yesterday by his wife while riding with another woman died at the hospital early this morning. It was first thought the wound would not prove fatal, but his physicians discovered he was addicted to the morphia habit and the severe shock hastened his death.

STEAMSHIP COLLISION.
The Ship Goes Down and Draws Sixteen Persons.

LONDON, April 16.—The British steamer Euela, from Antwerp, had her bows stove and afterwards was seriously damaged in a collision off Deal in a fog with the steamer Vena, from Bilbao for Rotterdam. The Vena sank and sixteen of those on board lost their lives.

Ellensburg National Bank.
WASHINGTON, April 16.—The comptroller of currency has authorized the Ellensburg National Bank of Ellensburg, Washington territory, to begin business, with a capital of $50,000.

The Emperor, Worse.
CHARLOTTESBURG, April 16.—3:30 p. m.—The emperor did not pass a good night, bronchitis having manifested itself yesterday, accompanied by high fever and shortness of breath. His disease is said to have assumed a new type, and is accompanied by very alarming symptoms. The emperor is in a state of high fever and there is no improvement in his other symptoms.

Conkling's Condition.
New York, April 16.—Conkling still hovers between life and death. His condition remains unchanged.

Try a bucket of Sapon for house cleaning, it has no equal. Wallace & Thompson.

SHAKESPEARE'S SCHOOL-DAYS

How the Gentle Bard of Avon Got His Early Education.

It is obviously essential for the Baconians to set out with the assumption that Shakespeare was an illiterate boor. They say as much as that he was so from the first and remained so to the last. He was a butcher's boy, they tell us; he could only have been some two years at school, and so completely had his nature become "like the dyer's hand, subdued to what it (had once) worked in," that when he returned, at near fifty, to Stratford, he resumed the trade of butcher and wool stapler. The ascertained facts of Shakespeare's life are few. Still some facts there are which cannot be disputed, and which give the lie to this scandalous assumption. Shakespeare came of a good stock on both father and mother's side. They held a good position in Stratford, and were in easy circumstances during the boyhood of Shakespeare. There was in Stratford an excellent grammar school, to which they were certain to have sent their son, when he reached the age, about six, at which boys were usually entered there. What course of study pursued at this and similar schools is well known and was pointed out in an admirable series of papers by the late Mr. Spencer Learnt at School? Shakespeare learned at School? In Fraser's Magazine in 1789-90. It was very much the same as that of the Edinburgh High School in the days of our youth, and brought a boy up by the time he reached the age of twelve, to the reading of such writers as Ovid and Cicero in Latin, and the New Testament and some of the orators and tragedians in Greek. To send their children to the school was within the means of all but the poorest, which John Shakespeare and Mary Arden were not; and all that is known of them justifies the conclusion that they would not have allowed their son to want any advantage common to boys of his class. Desperate indeed, are the straits to which the Baconian theorist are driven, when, without a particle of evidence, they deny these advantages to Shakespeare.—Blackwood's Magazine.

DECAY OF SOUTHERN HOMES.
How Former Abodes of Chivalry are Yielding to Chance and Change.

A great many of the plantations in different parts of the South, which were once well known for their size, the magnificence of the residences upon them, the hospitality of their owners, or on account of the prominence of the families which possessed them, are now falling into ruins. The reason of this is perhaps that the land has been worked so long without being fertilized that it has become poor, or it may be that those into whose possession it has passed lack the energy and skill which are required to make it pay under the present system of labor. One of these famous places in Liberty county, Georgia, was lately sold to a colored man for $1,500, only part of the purchase money being required at once. It is known as Laurel View, and is within two miles of the historic town of Sunbury. It was the home of the gifted John Elliott and a very beautiful home it was. John Elliott represented Georgia in the United States senate in 1820 to 1826. The plantation contains 5,300 acres. It was purchased during the War of secession by Luther Stevens, and was sold to the present owner by his heirs. The district in which the plantation is situated was noted from the first settlement of the slaves until the emancipation of the slaves for the wealth and intelligence of its citizens. It is now, however, almost wholly abandoned to the colored people. Its great plantations have been divided into small farms, and the superb mansions, once the homes of men noted for wealth and culture, and of women famous for beauty and refinement, are falling into decay and being replaced by cabins and huts whose chimneys of sticks and mud tell more plainly than words the marvellous change for the worse which has taken place in the once rich and prosperous district.—Savannah News.

He Paralyzed the Book Agent.
The New York Critic.

Some years ago a well-known literary man, then just out of college, was called upon by the agent of a new subscription book, who probably had little hope of being able to sell him a volume, but wanted to "get his hand in" and test his fluency in reciting the printed prospectus with which the publisher had furnished all his canvassers. He had not recited more than five lines when the young gentleman interrupted him and finished the agent of the book as glibly as the engly himself had begun it. The latter was fairly paralyzed with amazement. He had evidently to deal with a mind-reader of extraordinary powers and made no effort to conceal his fright. "Don't be alarmed," said the young collegian when he had finished his recitation. "I'm not a medium. I was hard up a while ago and wrote that same prospectus as a not-boiler. I congratulate you on having committed it to memory so well."

Notice of Final Settlement.
NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the undersigned has filed in the county court of Linn county, Oregon, his final account as administrator with the will annexed of the estate of Robert Pentland, deceased, and the said court has appointed Tuesday, May 8th 1888, at the hour of one o'clock p. m. of said day, at the court house in Albany, Linn county, Oregon, for the hearing of objections to said account and the settlement of the same. TAKE MY HAT.

The Origin of a Very Common Expression.

Sometime in the year 1811, the United States man-of-war, commanded by Stephen Decatur, not yet promoted to a full captaincy, ran into one of the Mediterranean ports and dropped anchor, to find that she was not alone. Near her lay at anchor the British frigate Macedonian. Salutes were exchanged and, on the following day, Lieut. Decatur dined on board the Macedonian with Capt. Carden. In the course of aunts and wine after dinner, the fighting capacity of the two ships came into discussion. Carden insisted that his vessel's armament was the heavier of the two and therefore the more effective. "That's what will beat you if ever we fight," replied Decatur. "My guns are so much lighter that I can fire five shots to your four and you'll find they are big enough if ever they hit you."

"Mine will be more effective at long range," said Carden.

"Now look here, Carden," said Decatur, "we are both friends and I'd rather we should never fight. But all the indications point to war and if ever we do meet, I'll whip you sure."

Carden smiled grimly and said: "Bet you a thousand pounds, mib'y."

"No, that's more money than I ever will have," replied Decatur, "but I'll just bet you a new hat."

Carden accepted the wager, laughing heartily at the time. But war was declared in the year following and the United States was on the high seas with Stephen Decatur on the quarter-deck and Gore in his eye. One day she met the Macedonian and, after a hot battle, the British surrendered.

When Decatur came on board, Carden extended his sword.

"D—n your sword!" laughed Decatur. "We didn't bet swords at all. It was hats—Carden, you've got an awful bad memory. Give me that hat. It's about a thousand miles to the nearest hat store, so you might as well give me your hat now."

"But I protest," said poor Carden who was all broken up at being allowed to retain his sword. "You remember, Capt. Decatur, our wager was a new hat and this is an old one."

"It's new enough to suit me!" laughed Decatur as he snatched Carden's hat from his head and threw his own overboard. He wore it all through the voyage in which he towed the wreck of the Macedonian back to New York; and it got to be the fashion among naval officers, when overcome in an argument to say, not "I surrender," but, "Take my hat."

CUT HIS WIFE'S THROAT.
A Jealous Husband Uses a Razor with Fatal Effect.

OMAHA, Neb., April 15.—Peter Bergo, a mechanic, aged 47, living on Twenty third street between Cumings and Burt, last night cut his wife's throat with a razor and then attempted suicide with the same weapon. Mrs. Bergo's wound is thought to be fatal, but the husband will probably recover. The couple have been married nine years and have two children. Mrs. Bergo is several years younger than her husband and quite pretty. For some time he has been very jealous of her, and accused her of being unduly intimate with other men. Last night about 9:30 he again accused her of infidelity in the presence of their two little children. She maintained her innocence.

A violent quarrel followed, and Bergo, rushing into their bedroom, returned with a razor, and seizing his wife by the hair, said:

"Nellie, I'm going to kill you."

After a struggle he succeeded in tripping her over a footstool and throwing her on a sofa. He then bent her head back by the hair, and putting his knee on her chest, cut her throat from ear to ear. Bergo then bid his children good by and cut his own throat. The screams of the children brought in the police, who took Bergo to the station, where his wound, which was found to be only an ugly cut, was dressed.

Mrs. Bergo had a high fever and frequent hemorrhages, and it is thought cannot recover.
