Life Saving Stations.

A letter from Congressman Hermon states that the house committee on commerce has reported favorably on the house bill No. 8181, authorizing the secretary of the treasury to establish life saving stations, among other places, one at or near the mouth of Umpqua river, Oregon; one at or near Yaquina bay, Oregon; one on Yaquina beach, Washington territory. The report concludes: Your committee have caused the said several bills to be referred to the honorable secretary of the treasury for his opinion thereon, and the same were by him referred to the general superintendent of the life saving service, who has given the matter careful consideration, and recommends the establishment of life saving stations at the several points named in the substitute hereto annexed. From the information before your committee we are entirely satisfied that the interests of humanity, commerce, the safety of vessels and property require the establishment of said several life saving stations.

Fire on the Three Sisters.

When Steward Frank Bean, of the Oregon Pacific steamer Three Sisters, lying at Portland opened the door to Watchman Guy Power's room at 3:20 Tuesday afternoon a volume of smoke and fire poured out that compelled him to beat a hasty retreat. The fire spread to the freight cabin, which was soon enveloped in flames. The steamer's hose was turned on the fire, which was soon extinguished. The fire department responded to an alarm from box 3, but their services were not needed. It is not known how the fire originated, and the cause is attributed to spontaneous combustion, as there was no fire in the room and the watchman, who had just arisen, neither smokes nor carries matches. Damage, $75.

A Female Tramp.

A woman named Branson, accompanied by two little boys aged about 6 and 14 respectively, all of them veritable tramps, made their appearance in this city yesterday. The oldest boy came into the Herald office and said he wanted to get some "visiting cards" printed. The cards were the usual appeal to the public for the customary quarter. The boy said his father was dead and that they had been tramping all over the country. They left Iowa about three months ago, walking a portion of the way and sealing a ride on the railroad quite often. "But hold on," he said, as the writer began to take down some notes, "don't go to the paper just 'cause we're tramps," and he flew out of the office and went down stairs three steps at a time. The woman was dressed in the coarsest of clothes, chewed tobacco, and looked as tough and hardened in the face as the worst tramp in the country. The boy said he was the business manager, he said they begged and got plenty to eat and slept in barns and in the woods in fair weather in the open air. They were going, he said, to Portland.

THE FOSTER-CRAWFORD CASE.

It is Argued and Submitted—History of the Case.

The time of the United States circuit court was occupied all of Monday and Tuesday in hearing the case of Neal vs. J. H. Foster, John A. and Wm. Crawford, of Albany. Briefly stated the case is about as follows: In February, 1883, Foster was the owner of the Magnolia mill in Albany, and by a fall in the market he was supposed to have lost about $30,000 on flour at sea and in Portland. He was also supposed to be short 20,000 bushels of wheat in his warehouse, which he had used and had not paid for, it taking more wheat to make a barrel of flour that year than usual. He owed J. A. Crawford some $15,000 to $20,000 on account of the latter indorsing notes for him which Crawford had to pay. In this state of things he conveyed his mill and warehouse to Crawford at a valuation of about $50,000, in consideration of which Crawford agreed to pay for the shortage of wheat in the warehouse. He had at the same time conveyed to Wm. Crawford, brother of John A. Crawford, a brick block valued at $20,000, in alleged payment and satisfaction of a balance of $16,000 said to be due on notes given by Foster when he purchased the mill from Wm. Crawford in 1867.

Foster was in debt to other people about $50,000, among which was $13,000 due to Sibson, Church & Co. for advances they had made him on flour. This suit is brought by Neal, assignee of Sibson, Church & Co., to enforce a judgment which was obtained for this $13,000 to set aside the conveyance of property to the Crawfords as fraudulent and intended to defraud the other creditors. As to the brick block, it is claimed that the notes were paid long ago, and no consideration passed at all. As to the mill, it is admitted that he owed J. A. Crawford not to exceed $60,000, but it is alleged that the conveyance was made to hinder delay and defraud other creditors.

The case was argued by Messrs Williams & Wood for plaintiffs and Mr. Wolverton, of Albany, for defendant Goltra, who is a plaintiff in fact, and Messrs E. C. Bronaugh, of this city, and L. F. Fimm, of Albany, for defendants. After hearing the arguments the court took the matter under advisement.

A Crooked Agent.

A correspondent in the Yaquina Post, in an article upon the equipment of the surveyor Lackland and the girl Anna Pierre from the Siletz reservation, thus pays his respects to Lackland and Jo Ben Lane, the agent: "He (Lackland) is guilty of theft of government property; has corrupted one of the very nicest girls on the agency; has disgraced the finest family there making good men and women bow their heads in shame, and yet Lane makes no effort to punish the offender. Of course, no one knows it to be absolutely so, but every thing points toward Lane's connivance in the matter. If he is not in cahoots with Lackland, he has bungled the matter as he did the lack Rooney affair, making the county a lot of expense, and not allowing the officer to subpoena the prosecuting witness. She was subpoenaed against his will, he would not assist her to go out, and thus Benton county has an expensive bill to pay and no conviction. Later—it has developed that Lane tried to buy off John Adams, Anna's uncle, by offering him $50 and telling him that Lackland would send him $100 from Portland. It is time this rotteness was broken up."

The Salvation Army Case.

The case of the city against Wm. Price, for assaulting the salvation army captain, came up in Recorder Denton's court yesterday morning. The charge was assault and battery, and L. H. Montanye appeared for the city and H. H. Hewitt and Capt. N. E. Humphrey for the defendant. The court held that the salvation army had no right to obstruct the street so that passers could not pass, and when the defendant attempted to pass through and the members of the salvation army took hold of him, their captain being knocked down, both were subject to arrest and fine for disorderly conduct, but that on a charge of assault and battery there was no case, and the defendant was discharged.

Charged With Arson.

In the suit of George Cohen & Bro. vs M. Peyer, defendant, and the Northwest Fire & Marine Insurance Company, garnishee, the answer of the insurance company was filed in the state circuit court Tuesday, denying nearly all the allegations set forth in the complaint. The company also denies that it had any knowledge that Peyer had any interest in the saloon at the time of the making of the policy on it, also that Peyer suffered a loss of $3864 25 by fire in the saloon or any sum more than $600. The insurance company further charges that Peyer willfully and for the purpose of defrauding the company, caused the saloon and property therein to be burned and destroyed.

The Paul Boulton Company.

The Paul Boulton Comedy and Specialty Co. gave a performance at the opera house last evening to a good audience. Mr. Boulton is the champion violinist of the Pacific Coast and he certainly deserves it. The entertainment was a clean, enjoyable and amusing performance. The ladies' band is an interesting attraction of the company, and they furnished some good music on the street yesterday. From here the company will go to Corvallis, where they will play tonight.
