Is not a more tenacious monster than malaria, whether it takes the form of chills and fever, biliousness, indigestion, acute or dumb ague. Like the octopus of the story it clings the victim in its tentacles, and folds him closer and closer in a horrible embrace. Attacked with Huzzo's Stomach Bitters, however, it gradually relaxes its tremendous grip, finally abandons it, and the quondam sufferer, liberated at last, rejoices in the sense of new born freedom, engendered by the restoration of complete health.

Make no Mistake.
By dispelling the symptoms so often mistaken for consumption. Santa Ana has brought gladness to many a household. By its prompt use for breaking up the cold that too often develops into that fatal disease, thousands can be saved from an untimely grave. I feel for anyone that suffers with that terrible disease, and I hope you will give it a trial."—G. S. Morris, Brownsville, W. Va.

PAUL BOYNTON'S PERIL.

Narrow Escape of the Noted Swimmer from Drowning

CHICAGO, March 29.—Captain Paul Boynton, the noted swimmer, had an experience in Lake Michigan Tuesday which he will not forget for some time. The captain has grown heavy during the winter and to reduce his flesh he recently taken little pulls out into the lake in his rubber suit. Tuesday morning at 7 o'clock he left Fullerton avenue for a swim to South Chicago and return and met with the most thrilling adventure of his life, in which he battled for hours with a great ice floe, was carried many miles out into the lake, stripped of his navigating instruments and lost for fifteen hours in the cold, bleak waste of drifting ice, hanging clouds and struggling ducks and gulls. From 7 o'clock in the morning until midnight the captain was without food or drink and the chill of the icy water had driven him to the desperate resort of hard work all that time to keep up a vigorous circulation so that he would not chill and perish in the lake. At midnight, when he was rescued at the crib, his vitality was almost gone. Stimulants were applied and the daring navigator put to bed. A telephone message was sent to the police that the captain was saved and by them taken to his little family, a wife and son, who were distracted by his long absence and supposed he had perished.

Captain Boynton was in bed when a reporter called at his home last evening. He was exhausted, the reaction from his desperate excitement of the day before having made him weak and sick.

THE CAPTAIN'S STORY.
"When I entered the water at 7 o'clock," the captain said, "there was a fresh west wind. I swam about two miles, intending to clear the crib for a trip to South Chicago. Just about the limit of my run east I began to meet ice. I pushed through it for a time and then ran across some floes onto which I climbed. Meanwhile a heavy sky had shut out all view of the sun and the wind had got the ice together. I struggled quite a while in what I thought was the western border of the field and then ran into what I thought was a pocket. I pulled through it and came again to straggling floes. I must have fought them until 10 o'clock before I missed my compass. When I looked to get my bearings, have noticed that the city had faded from view. I found the band which bound the compass to my body had either been severed by a piece of ice or had become unbuckled. It was gone. The sun was hidden and there was nothing by which I could get my bearings. The water was cold and I had been in it so long I began to get drowsy. Chills ran through my veins in quick succession and I saw I must either pull out somewhere or perish."

FIGHTING FOR HIS LIFE.
"I looked about and saw the field of ice was at my feet. I swam feet foremost and then concluded that I had only to pull for the ice to reach Chicago. So I started, and vigorously, too. For five hours I worked as I never did before. The water was heavy and lifeless. I had to fight for every inch I made. Chicago was still nowhere to be seen and I had no notion of the time of day. Then I changed my course about half way round and pulled hard for awhile. The ice gathered about me again and when night came I was fighting again for my life. Sometimes I could dodge the drift, at others I clung upon the cakes and crossed them. When the moon rose I got a flash or a view of it and then saw my mistake. I had crossed the field in the morning when I entered what I thought was a pocket, and all the long pull of the day, with the ice at my feet, had driven me towards Michigan. The turn I had taken had sent me south. I set about and pushed for the moon. At 10 o'clock I saw a faint light in the sky, and an hour later perceived it was from the furnaces at South Chicago. Then I got my bearings and sighted the lights of the crib. I pulled up there at midnight and blew my lung. I must have called a half dozen times before an answer came. Then Captain McKay answered my signal and I shouted, 'Crib ahoy,' 'Aye, who's there?' the captain answered. 'I must stay here tonight.' 'Pull round to the port.' 'When I got there they dropped a bit of a rope, into which I fixed my foot, and then they drew me up. They gave me refreshments, put me to bed and telephoned to my wife that I was safe. Captain McKay says when I left the ice at night it was fully fifteen miles from shore, and I think he is about right, because the swim in would take about the time used. I have swam greater distances, but that was the first time I ever was lost, and the battle with the ice and cold was a more thrilling episode than I care to experience again."
