R. PUBLICAN PLATFORM.

We, your committee on Platform and Resolutions beg leave to report as follows:

The Republicans in the State of Oregon, in convention assembled, reaffirming their allegiance to, and confidence in, the great Republican party, of the nation, of whose grand achievements and long and successful administration of the government of the United States they have so much cause to be proud, and the glory of which they are entitled to show, now make it their duty to follow the principles of their party.

First—We favor honest and efficient administration of the departments of government both State and National.

Second—The right of the citizen authorized by law, and to have his vote honorably counted, ought to be respected and all efforts to control or limit that right deserves the condemnation of all good citizens.

Third—That while disclaiming the right to interfere with the administration of the internal affairs of foreign nations, we sincerely approve the efforts of Irish and English statesmen to secure by peaceful methods the American principle of Home Rule for Ireland.

Fourth—That we are in favor of such legislation as should prohibit and punish the manufacture of adulterated foods.

Fifth—That we are in favor of the enactment of a law by Congress, whereby the homestead and pre-emption rights of settlers shall not be forfeited by cancellation of filings by the land department when settlement on them are made in good faith.

Sixth—That we favor the encouragement and development of our State by the construction of railroads and other systems of transportation and that we hold all corporations to be strictly responsible to their liabilities under the law, and recognize the right of the Legislature to enact all reasonable limitations on corporate powers.

Seventh—That we regard the further immigration into the United States of Chinese laborers as directly opposed to the interests of American labor; and we therefore heartily approve the action of the Republican Senate in providing by proper legislation for so amending our treaties with China as to prevent their further immigration here.

Eighth—We recognize that the nation owes a debt to the surviving veterans of the rebellion which can not be adequately repaid, and hold it to be the duty of the general government to provide for the necessities of them and theirs by prompt payment of liberal pensions.

Ninth—That the action of President Cleveland in ordering the restoration of the rebel flags was an unwarranted assumption of the right to use for political purposes the trophies of a valor he did not possess and the fruits of a victory he did not help to secure.

Tenth—While we approve every honest effort to preserve our public lands by the punishment of willful trespassers upon them, and are in favor of such measures as will encourage our citizens to settle upon and improve them, we condemn the action of the present administration in its present efforts to protect such lands under color of which, instead of pursuing the policy of the Republican administration by causing the arrest and punishment of those who by whose actions appeared to be the cause of such trespasses, it has refused to cause such lands to be surveyed, thereby giving our citizens settlement by peopling, and desiring to take them. The administration also filled the country with a horde of officers styling themselves "Special Agents of the Interior Department," who have been made to act as spies and informers upon such of the honest citizens as have ventured to settle upon the public lands for the purpose of carving for themselves homes in the wilderness and has caused the arrest of honest settlers upon those lands upon charges false and infamous, and publicly branding them as robbers and thieves has caused them to be dragged into both the civil and criminal courts to be tried upon false and fictitious charges, thereby compelling them to incur the expense of two defenses against the same act; has caused these same special agents to raise questions and dispute the right of honest citizens to require title to the public lands upon which they have honestly and in good faith settled and for which they have paid their money, and acting upon the suggestion of such matters have under the direction of the administration, like a court organized to convict, deprived the settler of his land, robbed him of the benefit of his labor and refused to return his money; and these wrongs have been perpetuated against the settler with no apparent object but to furnish a pretext for so-called Democratic reform.

Eleventh—That the policy of the Democratic administration, which would place wool and lumber on the free list and woolen goods on the highly protected list, custom printed on the free list, and other similar articles; and which policy would continue the collection of $50,000,000 on sugar each year, while at the same time the majority applaud the claim to carry out the President's idea that a tariff tax is robbery of the people, constitutes a piece of unparalleled political dishonesty, having for its sole object the success of the Democratic party at the next election, even at the expense of the practical destruction of many of our most important agricultural and manufacturing industries.

Twelfth—We favor the policy of providing, chiefly for the revenues of the general government and for the

LIFE'S HAPPIEST DAY.

They sat upon the rocks beside the sea, And talked of what had been and what might be:

And she whose heart was lightest, turned to say: "Some careless thing about a 'happy day'—"

"I wonder when life's happiest day will be? Said he whose thoughts were like the ships at sea, Blown here and there by every 'anton gale That chafed to dally with each shifting sail."

"The happiest day," said he before whose feet Life seemed a pathway through a meadow sweet—

"That day, for me, will be the day that brings The dawn of which the poet dreams and sings."

"Life's happiest day," said he whose life had been One long, hard struggle against fate and sin—

"That day will be for me—'O poor gray head And grief-worn heart'—the day when I am dead."

MEMOROUS DRIFT.

The woman question: "What are you going to trim it with?"

A kicking mare in Portland Me., has been named "She," because she makes her rider haggard.

The Emperor of Brazil wears a buckeye or horse chestnut tied to his neck to keep off evil spirits, and has been a great success.

Somebody asks, "Does it pay to be good?" It does when the business becomes firmly established; but you've got to sink money at the start.

The Emperor William left a personal fortune of $75,000,000 showing that he never put a National Opera Company on the road.

"Harry, you should not ask Cousin John how much money he is worth: that is not polite. I just wanted to know."

A paper in New York has changed from a political journal to a religious weekly. It will now leave the credits off of its clipped paragraphic humor.

Most of 'Em Do—"Your boy James is writing some poetry now, isn't he?" asked a woman of her neighbor. "Yes," was the reply, "he says he feels the divine hiatus."

"The Smiths must be awfully poor—they never give anything to charities." He—"Well, but we don't either." She—"Oh, but it isn't because we haven't got plenty."

Marion Harland says that the coming woman will have her own bank account. This will prove pleasant news for the coming man, especially if her bank account is big enough for two.

Queen Victoria was born on a Friday, and the Prince of Wales, who is somewhat short-sighted, thinks Friday an unlucky day for him. He thinks if his mother hadn't been born he would be king.

Don't worry because other people don't manage their business just as you think they ought to. Nine chances out of ten the reason they don't is that they are worrying because you don't manage your business as they think you should.

Umbrellas were in use by the Egyptians 4,000 years ago.—Albany Express. Right you are. There is one of them standing, even at this moment, behind our office door. Man exchanged with us in the departing rush at a picnic last summer.

"Isn't it strange?" said the Chicago girl: "they say the Czar of Russia eats pie with a knife." "I don't see anything strange about it," said her young friend from St. Louis: "them educated Russians has gone into good society, and they learn what is proper very quick."

He Was—"What's all the crowd about?" he asked as he came to the City Hall. "St. Patrick's Day," some one answered—"His birthday." "He is dead, sir!"—"Oh—ah—beg pardon. Well, I'll stand here and see the hearse come along, I guess. Quite a popular citizen, wasn't he?"

Happy Hostess—"Do you know, Mr. Grandison, I feel quite proud of having you here to-night? They told me you were so busy writing that you'd given up everything in the social way." Grandison—"Well, yes; so I have. That is, everything of any importance—er—I mean—what a mild winter we've been having."

Hopeless.—Miss Chatty LaFite (showing her library to Boston friend)—"Yes, that's Browning. It's a awfully good, I suppose, but I don't understand all of it. I like something lighter." Boston friend—"And you have Præd?" Miss LaFite (blushing a little)—"Yes, I have. But it didn't do any good." (Boston friend drops the subject.)

At the Chicago Art Exhibition.—Miss Laker—"Mamma, I want you to know Mr. Cromos. He painted that paintin' or something of that sort." Mrs. Laker—"Proud to know you, sir, I've been meanin' to ask my husband to take me down to your—er—ata—no, that ain't it—abattoir—for a long time."

He Was Lacking in Faith. Boston Transcript. A lady who was a firm believer in the cure of everything by the mind, or, rather, the non-existence of all pains and maladies, has a little boy who complained of a terrible toothache. She took him to a scientist to be cured, and remarked to that lady as soon as she had entered the room:

"My boy thinks he has a terrible toothache, Mrs. Scientist, and I have brought him to you to be cured of it."

Having brought her attention to the case, Mrs. Scientist said: "Now, my little boy, you must look me right in the eye. (A pause.) Now you haven't any toothache."

"Yes, I have, too!" shouted the boy.

The scientist smiled patiently, and tried it over again.

"You must look me right in the eyes and try to forget your toothache," she said. (Then there was another steadfast pause.) "Ah, now you haven't any toothache."

"Yes, I have, too!" screamed the boy again.

The practitioner went through the process once more with fresh persuasion. The boy seemed inclined to be quiet this time.

"Well, I guess you haven't any toothache now, my boy," said she.

"You lie," said the boy, quietly.

He was taken away, toothache and all.
