A GREAT STORM

The East Visited by a Most Disastrous Storm.

MANY HUMAN LIVES SACRIFICED.

The Loss to Property Will Aggregate Hundreds of Thousands of Dollars—A Long List Deaths.

The Herald's Special Dispatches.

which swept over Eastern Ohio, West Virginia, and Western Pennsylvania yesterday afternoon was of a very destructive character, and the aggregated loss of buildings, crops, railroad and telegraph poles will foot up many thousands of dollars. Several lives were also sacrificed and a number of persons were injured. About Point Pleasant and Huntington, West Virginia, at Canton, Ohio, Beaver county, Pennsylvania, and through the oil regions the storm was particularly severe.

HAIL FALLING IN MASSES, while the wind was very violent. Near Kaywood, West Virginia, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Powell were killed by lightning while sitting in their home. At Chandlerton, West Virginia, Mrs. Robert Shannon was killed by a falling tree. At Bridgeport, Ohio, the six year old son of Joseph Powell was caught by the rush of water in a narrow ravine and drowned, and his two companions had a narrow escape. At Belaire, Ohio, a railroad brakeman named Castello was killed while endeavoring to manage a train during the storm. At Canton, Ohio,

HOUSES WERE LIFTED from their foundations and the steeples of several churches were wrecked. The south wing of the New Hampton water works, 200 feet in length and three stories high, was blown down and is a total wreck. The Duober watch case works are badly damaged. At Oil City the roof of the Arlington hotel was blown off and there was a rush from the building of PANIC-STRIKEN PEOPLE. Titusville also suffered severely. Frank Birchfield, of Pleasantville, was crossing Pine Creek bridge in a buggy and was blown over into the water. The vehicle was reduced to splinters and the horse lifted bodily and carried 100 yards away.

About this city the storm was not so heavy, but specials from many other points report hail falling as large as hen's eggs. The telegraph lines are down badly, and in many places the railroad tracks are covered with debris from ruins. The damage to orchards has been particularly heavy, many trees in the regions visited by hail being stripped of every leaf, and other crops in the same area are correspondingly damaged. The total loss will probably reach several hundred thousands of dollars.

THE STORM GENERAL.

CHICAGO, May 29.—Dispatches received this morning state that destructive rain storms prevailed all through Kansas, Illinois, Ohio, Minnesota, Dakota, Iowa and Nebraska Sunday and yesterday. In Illinois considerable damage was done to crops and a number of cattle and horses were killed by the hail. In Iowa the rain descended in torrents and hailed hailstones as large as eggs, and drifted up on the ground from two to four feet deep in places. The damage to crops and fruits is very heavy. In Nebraska two children were drowned while crossing a little stream which had grown into torrents by the heavy rains. Near Sioux City, Iowa, the Missouri river is again out of its channel, doing great damage. In Kansas small grains suffered, and hail fell with great force, tearing shingles off houses and cutting live stock till they were covered with blood.

IN NEW YORK.

WELLS VILLE, N. Y., May 29.—Twenty business blocks, the Unitarian and Baptist churches and other buildings were damaged by the storm yesterday afternoon. Only two or three persons were injured. Heavy rains added to the damage. Windows were broken by the hundreds. The storm swept violently eastward through southern New York felling trees and doing great damage. A church and several buildings were wrecked at Allentown, and many derricks in the Allegham coal fields were blown down.

MORE TERRIBLE THAN "SHE."

An Unvanquished Queen of the Mountains of Zanzibar.

London Corr. New York Times.

One has often heard of the mythical old man of the mountains, but it would seem there is a veritable woman of the mountains more terrible than he. I met the other day Mr. H., her majesty's Consul at Zanzibar, on the east coast of Africa, who told me the following tale of this redoubtable person which will give our readers a better idea of her.

Her name is Mrs. H. Her jurisdiction extends over an area of 2000 miles, of which he is supposed to visit in his official capacity. Laying toward the interior of the country is a range of mountains, over which reigns supreme a rich and powerful Queen—Kabuta by name. So terrible is her reputation, and so greatly feared is she by the natives far and wide that she is never called by her rightful appellation, but is designated as "The Woman Who Lives Over There," with a wave of the arm toward the frowning hills. This Queen has two sons, who rule provinces under her to the north and south. She is particularly antagonistic to white men, regarding them not only with abhorrence, but with an unquenchable hatred, dubbing them as "monsters, wizards and dealers in magic. And so well in her warlike attitude toward them understood that no white man has ever dared to penetrate into her presence, or indeed desired to do so, since instant death is the just retribution that would follow on his temerity. Mr. H. however, was determined to interview this queen of the mountains. He therefore started inland with a strong armed guard and twenty interpreters. It was a four days' march through the jungle before he reached the outlying territory on the south over which reigned the son of this terrible monarch. The King being of a more pacific nature and possessed of considerable curiosity, consented to receive the white wizard, and even went so far to say he would speak a good word for him to the white Kabuta, and thus encouraged the Consul proceeded on his way. But after another day's journey his interpreters came to him in great haste and said that the queen had received secret warning from some friendly natives that Kabuta was preparing to greet them in her own peculiar royal style—a dungeon for Mr. H., with perpetual imprisonment to be terminated only with execution, and the slave stakes and torture for his servants and guards. On hearing these sanguinary prophecies thirty-two of his men at once deserted and fled, fearing possible death in the trackless jungles to falling into the hands of "The Woman Who Lives Over There." Mr. H. was rendered almost defenseless, and though knowing himself to be in the greatest danger, dared not to show the least fear or apprehension. He prepared to push on further, and would undoubtedly have fallen a victim to Kabuta's cruelty had not a messenger arrived secretly from the friendly son, entreating him to go no farther, and saying that his mother's rage and fury at the white monster's presumption knew no bounds; she was already gloating over the varied forms of torture wherewith to punish him. He further offered, at the risk of his own crown, to have Mr. H. conducted back in safety; but the journey must be performed by night and with the greatest circumspection.

Taking all things into consideration, Mr. H. decided to accept the friendly king's offer, and quietly moved off and out of the dangerous neighborhood. His way lay for miles and miles through dense jungles and morasses before the orders of civilization were reached. The ferocious Kabuta still remains unvanquished and unseen by the white man, but Mr. H., who returns to his consulate in August, intends in October to push his way into the very presence of the terrible one. In those delightful regions pounds and pence are unknown and of no value, the accepted currency being beads, handkerchiefs and colored lines; and so particular and fussy are the native monarchs that to offer a bead of last year's shape, a handkerchief of last year's color, or a calico of last year's dye, is a dire offense, and of about as much good as a bag of stones would be. De rebus, the climate is charming, the verdure perpetual and noxious insects are unknown.

Among the living topics of the day which will be discussed in the Forum for June are: "The pending tariff discussion" by the Hon. W. D. Kelley, tariff legislator; "Review of American tariff legislation during the past hundred years to show what disastrous effects the passage of the Mills bill would have made;" "The negro in politics," by Senator Wade Hampton of South Carolina, who reviews the reconstruction period of politics in his state to show the effects that negro supremacy had there; "railway problems, Senator J. F. Wilson, who discusses the government regulation of railways, and by Prof. Arthur T. Hadley, who shows that the remedy for railway strikes is to be found in the development of railway managers, who are great leaders of men as well as great makers of dollars; "labor troubles," by W. H. Mallock, the distinguished English essayist, who makes a plea for the universal study of the principles of economy: "Family Economies," by Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, who discusses the pecuniary obligations of a man to his wife and daughters. The Forum is now published from its new offices at 253 Fifth Avenue, N. Y.

The press has become the conservator of public morals, and to the newspaper as much as to the pulpit are we indebted for an enlightened moral sentiment, and whatever concerns the weal of society. Wrongdoers dread the censure and exposure which the press gives them more than the rigors of the law, and many a luckless wight is deterred from the commission of crime through fear of publicity. The press is the bulwark of society, the disseminator of knowledge, the promoter of virtue, the defender of truth and honor, the terror of the lawless, the swift messenger of justice, and the only power which can hold in subject those occupying high official positions and charged with the execution of sacred public trusts.
