GENERAL NEWS.

Important Pension Law for Widows Approved.

WEST POINT CIRCUS RIDING.

Gresham Takes the Lead—St. Louis Delegates Returning Home—Sheridan is Worse—Blaine Talks.

The Herald Special Dispatches.

WASHINGTON, June 9.—The president has approved the act of congress providing that pensions heretofore and hereafter granted to widows of soldiers of the war of the rebellion shall commence at the date of the death of their husbands.

This legislation favorably affects the claims of widows of the late war, which have been filed in the pension office on or after July 1, 1880, and which have been allowed from the date of filing of the claims, but will not favorably affect such widows as filed before July 1, 1880, and which have been allowed, pensions having already been granted in those cases from the date of their husbands' death.

The commissioner of pensions gives notice that in the settlement under this law of claims already allowed no formal application will be required and that the services of an attorney will not be necessary.

Widows entitled to pensions under said law need only to write a letter, giving name, postoffice address and certificate number, and the claim will be allowed with as little delay as possible.

CAVALRY DRILL.

Cadets Give an Exhibition of Their Skillful Riding.

WEST POINT, June 9.—This morning there was a riding drill in the hall. The two small galleries were crowded with spectators, and not half of those who desired could get into the building.

The cadets gave a splendid exhibition of horsemanship. They jumped hurdles, cut out imaginary heads while galloping at full speed, vaulted into saddles without the use of hands or stirrups, and some of the most expert and skillful circus tricks.

The drill will take place this afternoon. The sermon to be read by a guest will be delivered tomorrow.

How Personal Friends Do Not Want to Give Him Up.

ALBANY, June 9.—It may be a surprise to many, in the light of Blaine's two letters of declination, that there is a well defined and strong feeling manifested among some of his friends here that he will be a candidate for his party in the coming campaign.

The nomination of Thurman is regarded by republicans here as a very wise one, and as strengthening the party in the west. "What is to be done?" someone asks almost daily.

Report has been received here from different sections of the country common upon the withdrawal of Blaine, and declaring that it cannot be accepted.

Col. Allen, a delegate from the third Maine district, was just returned from the West, and he says he finds Blaine men decidedly set against a declination, and opposing its acceptance with determination.

Many republicans here think that the only thing to do, if the demand for the Maine man continues, is to nominate him. It is acknowledged that he does not want the nomination, but it is said by his supporters, that if by repeated ballottings, the relative strength of the other candidates does not change materially, then the convention ought to turn to nominate one man, and give him their unanimous and hearty endorsement. In such an event, they ask, "can he refuse?"

DELEGATES TRYING TO UNITE.

Gresham in the Lead, With Sherman a Second.

BOSTON, June 9.—Nearly all the Massachusetts delegates to Chicago and several members of the state central committee dined together in this city this afternoon and finally discussed the candidates.

An effort was made to unite the delegates on one man, but the attempt failed. The delegates were divided in their preferences between Gresham, Sherman, Harrison and Depew. It was thought Depew might become the general choice, but it may be said authoritatively that the delegation cannot be united in his favor.

KNIGHTS OF LABOR.

Adjourned Meeting to be Held in Chicago.

PITTSBURGH, June 9.—The national convention of the Knights of Labor and ironworkers, which has been in session here for a week past, adjourned this afternoon to meet in Chicago the first Monday in April, 1889.

Previous to adjournment resolutions were adopted endorsing General Master Workman Powderly for re-election, and pledging Robert D. Layton of this city the support of 28,000 ironworkers and furnacemen in the order for the position of general secretary, now held by Charles H. Lichtman. This action is regarded as the beginning of a big fight on the present incumbent.

Sheridan's Condition Not So Good.

WASHINGTON, June 9.—General Sheridan is not quite so well this morning. He had a bad night and was frequently disturbed by coughing. He was very restless and nervous. He rested well during the latter part of the night. His pulse and respiration are full. No unfavorable symptoms have appeared.

Tired Delegates Returning Home.

NEW YORK, June 9.—A special train conveying the Tammany hall delegates from the St. Louis convention rolled into the Grand Central depot today.

The delegates were travel stained and looked tired out. Nearly all the delegates and those who accompanied them wore bandannas around their hats or necks.

GOSSIP OF A MAIL AGE.

Once upon a winter's even,
Long ago when life was young,
I sat there with my mother,
With a dozen mail-bags flung
Heater skelter on the table,
Ready for the morning train;
And a thousand flitting feet
Flitted through my sleepy brain.

And I heard a gentle murmur,
Like the whispering of leaves,
Like the eddy of the night wind
Sighing up along the eaves:
I thought not twas but fancy,
Faction of the brain that aces,
Then the whispers were all centered
There among the letters bag.

And I heard a plaintive sighing,
Words that pierce my very heart;
"Hasten quickly! I am dying,
And we are so far apart."
Then a jingle like to nooky
"Quick, the saddened sillage spells
"We were married, dear this morning,
Speed with joy our wedding bells."

"If you love, tell me truly,
Do not keep me in delay."
"I'm sorry, but I can not
"See you on next Saturday."
"Have you got the swag in hiding?
I've a new crib now to crack;
"I have fathomed all your baseness,
Give me now my freedom back."

"Dearest Jack, I am delighted—
In a d d d d—
"I'm a writer. Can you give me
On your paper some employ?
"You have broken father's patience,
Mother's heart is bowed with grief
"Say old pardie, can you send me
Just a twenty for relief?"

I will meet you when the swallows
Nest and in spring the crows
"You are fat—I read more plainly,
And no more your love deceive."
"There's a cheek I find you
For you are so red with wine."
"You have steered us all in sorrow,
And you need not try the door."
And a thousand other rhymes
Fit across my dreary brain
And I wake up just in season
For the mail to catch the train.

AN INTERESTING DECISION.

The Klamath Salmon Fisheries Legal and Open to All.

The liability of persons trading with Indians of the Klamath reservation has been decided in the United States circuit court in an elaborate opinion filed in a suit brought by the government to condemn a lot of merchandise seized from R. D. Hume at the mouth of the Columbia river, last fall.

Hume hired Indians to fish for him, paying them for the labor in goods. Claimant contended that no liability was involved in bartering with the redskins, as the reservation had been abandoned, and the land was not "Indian Country" within the meaning of the statute under which the forfeiture proceedings were begun.

An appeal was taken to the circuit court. The decision states that by an act of 1864 four Indian reservations were established in California. The Klamath reservation was not included in any of these, but specific acts of congress, and under the general laws, the judge held that R. D. Hume, owner of the seized merchandise, did not violate the law forbidding trading with Indians living in Indian country. He employed Indians in fishing, and paid them in clothing and other useful merchandise, and the cessation of this trade is not demanded by the claims of policy, or morals of humanity. The Klamath salmon fisheries thus become legalized and open to all.

Storing Hay.

In the storing of hay in the barn I found a shrinkage of from 17 to 23 per cent. I did not ascertain whether the loss was moisture or dry matter, but certainly it was largely water. American experiments have made it probable that there is loss of dry matter in stored hay. If further investigation finds a material loss in this direction, it will be a strong argument in favor of the silo, or of compacting hay, as done by the advocates of half-dried hay. Dr. Armsby quotes foreign trials touching the digestibility of stored hay in the Fall, and again in the Spring, as follows: At the time of cutting, 62 per cent; three months after cutting, 56 per cent; in the Spring 54 per cent. Possibly the result may be due to the impaired digestive capacity of animals in the Winter and in the Spring, but it is not probable that the whole difference is thus caused.

I stored weighed corn fodder where air circulated over and under it, and got a startling shrinkage, that certainly involved the substance of the fodder heavily; 2071 pounds weighed in Winter only 1080, and 1977 came out 1140 pounds. It is probably best to mass and compact hay as firmly as possible. The housing of hay will pay a high rate of interest on good shelter. With improved haying tools, the cost of housing is not now severe and time in preserving hay is often debated, and is of questionable value. The use of lime is more than doubtful, while an excess of salt induces thirst, and is found undesirable.—Prairie Farmer.

Spontaneous Combustion.

J. A. Crow, who lives in the northern part of the town, got a lesson in natural philosophy and lost a hat last Sunday. Coming into the house in the afternoon he tossed his hat carelessly on a table whereon stood a globe with gold fish. After a time Mrs. Crow said she smelled something burning, and they made a search without finding anything. In doing so the hat was turned around and soon the smell was noticed again. This was repeated several times before they noticed that the hat was being burned. A close examination showed that the sun's rays in passing through the globe were concentrated on the hat and had burned a series of little holes at intervals around it. Every time the hat was turned a new place was burned, and the smell of burning felt filled the room. That hat will do for ordinary wear, but as a Sunday ornament its career is past.

An Angry Young Woman.

Marysville Appeal.

There is one mad young woman in Marysville. She has been searching for a husband, and has answered a number of advertisements by men who professed to desire to become good husbands. Not many days ago this young lady answered an advertisement in the Examiner, and giving her true name asked to become acquainted through the medium of photographs. She has received the advertiser's photograph, and also a letter which has caused her to shed tears. The picture was that of a young Marysvillian who has not been away from here many months, and the letter advised her to take the stock of dry goods, bustles, wigs, and small bank account and go to the highway and lay in wait for a lantern jawed son of toil who could appreciate her loveliness.
