UNCOVERING THE SPHINX.

Interesting Things Brought to Light in the Shifting Sands.

London Times.

The last occasion on which the great Sphinx was cleared down to the level on which the paws rest was in honor of the opening of the Suez Canal in 1858. The ever-drifting sands had returned it almost to the throat when Professor Maspero, during his last year of office in Boulak, began again the work of disinterment. This work has now been going on somewhat intermittently for more than twelve months and is at the present time in active progress under the direction of Professor Maspero's successor, M. Gresham. A tramway has been laid down from Sphinx to the edge of the pyramid plateau, passing close under the west face of the granite building popularly though incorrectly called the Temple of the Sphinx. Along the tramway light trucks convey the sand to the point at which their contents are discharged, the trucks being headed by Arabs of both sexes and all ages, who carry the sand up on their heads in large flat baskets, ascending and descending all day long from the excavations below to the tramway above, and vice versa. The means look curiously inadequate, but the results are astonishing. Already the entire for part of the great stone monster is laid bare, and already the huge chest, the paws, the space between the paws, the altar in front of them, and the platform upon which they rest are once more open to the light of day. Nor is this all. Between the Sphinx and the edge of the pyramid plateau a vast space has also been cleared, thus bringing to view a fine flight of steps forty feet in width. These steps, which are described by Pliny, were uncovered by Cavignia in 1817, but have been entirely lost to sight for nearly seventy years. A second flight of steps and the remains of two Roman buildings were also found by Cavignia, and will again be brought to light if M. Gresham continues to work in this direction.

To the right of the Sphinx—that it is to say, in the direction of the granite-temple to the southward—a further excavation is in progress, the results of which will probably confirm the surmises of those who believe the Sphinx to stand in the midst of a huge artificial amphitheater head-on of the sand rock. This gigantic work would of course be contemporaneous with the Sphinx itself, which Mariette attributed to the mythical ages before the advent of Menes, the first king of the first dynasty, and which Maspero considers to be, if not actually prehistoric, at all events the oldest monument in Egypt.

From the level of the area below the great flight of steps (which lead down, and not up, to the Sphinx) one measures the whole height of the huge, human-headed monster, whose battered and contorted features stand out against the cloudless sky on a level of feet above. The space between the paws is thirty-five feet long and ten wide. This space is anciently converted into small sanctuaries lined with votive tablets, many one of which—the famous stela of Thothmes IV—yet remains in situ. This stela records how the king, when upon one of his hunting expeditions, lay down to rest in the shadow of the Sphinx. He there fell asleep, and dreamed a dream in which the venerable image conjured him to reveal to him the name of a man who was nearly buried. Then the prince awoke and "made silence in his heart," and resolved to do that which the god had commanded.

The paws of the Sphinx, as they now appear, are a restoration of Roman date, being cases in comparatively small slabs, and to some extent hollow underneath. The breast of the Sphinx has likewise been covered with slabs, apparently in Roman times; and these slabs have again been repaired by cutting away the weathered surface and inserting a fresh facing. Like the legs of the Colossi of the Plain and those of the great statues at Aboo Simbel, the paws of the Sphinx are covered with the Greek scraps of early travelers; but these graffiti are mostly of a late period, and so slightly scratched that few are legible throughout. Such as they are, however, Professor Maspero has, it is understood, devoted himself to the ungrateful and difficult task of translating them.

Discouraging.

P. H. Snook, the furniture man on Marietta street, has discovered a remarkable family, the head of the family is W. H. Burroughs, whose home is in Henry county. Mr. Burroughs is just 30 years of age, while his wife is 26. They have been married a little over eight years and are the parents of eleven children. A peculiar feature of the case is that twins and triplets only are among the births. The first birth was twins, the second triplets and the other three twins. At no time have less than two children been added to the family. The youngest are just 3 months old, and with the other were in town yesterday with Mr. and Mrs. Burroughs. Burroughs called at Snook's to purchase a baby carriage.

A correspondent at Fox Valley writes that the mail at that place is badly managed for some reason. The paper that reaches the other office on Saturday does not reach that office until three or four days later.

AT CHICAGO

Another Day's Proceedings Without Nominations.

THE PLATFORM IS ADOPTED.

It Speaks With No Uncertain Sound for Protection—Several Candidates Named.

—Graham Aiken

The Herald's Special Dispatches.

CHICAGO, June 21.—The convention re-convened this morning, at 10 o'clock. At 10:14 the roll was called for naming of members of the national committee.

10:31—Warner, of Missouri, announced that the committee on platform would be ready to report in ten minutes, and at 10:41 McKinley, of Ohio, took the platform and read the report, which was frequently greeted with cheers.

THE PLATFORM.

The platform sends greeting to Brazil on the emancipation of her slaves, and to the home rule party in Ireland, each sentiment being applauded enthusiastically.

The words: "We are uncompromising in favor of the American system of protection," were received with loud and prolonged cheering, all the delegates being on their feet.

The platform demands reduction of letter postage to one cent, condemns the democratic administration for its attempted demonization of silver, for the surrender of the fishing privileges, and its spirit of hostility to pension legislation.

The platform was adopted by a rising vote on motion of Marine, of Maryland.

ROLL CALL.

At 11:16 the roll call for nominations began.

Warner, of Connecticut, presented Hawley's name, without a speech.

Creed Haymond, of California, said: "California asks to be passed."

Le Nord-west, of Illinois, nominated Gresham.

Davis, of Minnesota, Lynch, of Mississippi, and McCull, of Massachusetts, seconded the nomination of Gresham.

Rector, of Texas, also seconded Gresham's nomination. After Gresham's second had concluded, Ex-Governor Porter, of Indiana, took the platform for Harrison.

The mention of Harrison's name was greeted with prolonged cheering, and the Indiana men got on their feet, waving fans. Porter was interrupted with cries of "Gresham!" mingled with hisses. At the conclusion of Porter's speech, the Indiana delegates rose and cheered, and the convention adjourned till 5 o'clock.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Chicago, June 21, 3 P. M.—Convention called to order again. Reall, of Texas, took the platform to second Harrison's nomination, and waving of banners from Indiana to Rector, who seconded Gresham's nomination, and applause by the remainder of the Texas delegates. Gallinger, of New Hampshire, also seconded Harrison, and the call of states proceeded.

Iowa coming next was greeted with cheering.

Hepburn, of Iowa, nominated Allison, whose name was greeted with cheers from the galleries and floor. In the course of his speech he said Allison would not be found returning rebel flags. The cheers continued amid cries for "Foraker."

Iowa, Missouri and Massachusetts cheered Allison at the conclusion of Hepburn's speech.

Bosworth, of Rhode Island, then took the platform and seconded Allison. [Prolonged cheering was led by Iowa and joined in by Maryland and the territories.]

Roll call proceeded, and at 4:22 Michigan was reached, and amid cheering Fraser, of Michigan, took the platform and nominated Algeo. Prolonged and renewed cheers followed the mention of Algeo, and cries of "He's all right." Fraser's speech was greeted with great enthusiasm on the floor and in the galleries.

Eagen, of Nebraska, seconded Algeo, and the crowd at intervals took up the cry of "He's all right." [Great laughter.]

Eggers, of Arizona, also seconded Algeo.

5:17—Roll call proceeded and New York reached, and Hisecock took the platform to nominate Depeew.

Sherman was nominated by the Pennsylvania delegation amid applause. Mention of Blaine's name elicited applause. Sherman's nomination was warmly seconded, and the band struck up "Marching Through Georgia," amid a burst of applause.

Roll call proceeded, and at 7 o'clock Wisconsin was reached amid applause, when Senator Spooner rose and nominated Blaine, which was a signal for great and continued cheering.

At 7:25 Miller, of New York, moved to adjourn to 11 A. M. tomorrow, when the convention adjourned.

BAHAMA SPONGES.

How They Are Gathered—Extent of the Trade.

New York Sun.

Off the Neapolitan coast and in other parts of the Mediterranean where these elastic articles are found, diving in the approved method of getting sponges. In the clear white water of the Bahamas, however, cranes are used. Cranes are long poles, varying in length from twenty to thirty-eight feet, with curved prongs at one end, and are employed to detach the sponge from the rock to which it clings and to convey it to the boat in which are the fishermen. So clear is the water that with the aid of a water glass, a pair or box with a glass bottom, fishermen can distinguish sponges from other forms of marine plant life at the depth of fifty or sixty or more feet. When first taken from their fastnesses sponges appear and feel like pieces of raw soft liver, being slippery, elastic, ugly and dirty purple. In color they range from repulsive to dull chocolate.

Having been brought to the deck of the fishermen's schooner the sponges are washed, rubbed and dried. They are then strung on strands, and are washed down three times a day, until the schooner reaches one of its cravls.

Cravls are half-submerged stockades of apings, generally spheroidal and unfamiliar sub-tropical growths, bound together by manila and palm-leaf fiber. The catch is deposited in these and kept under the water until the vessel makes its final round and draws its deposits, preparatory to taking them to Nassau.

Sponges are extraordinary plentiful in this part of the globe. It may surprise anybody who has just paid a dollar or so for a bath or sponge at a Broadway drug store to learn that he could duplicate it in Nassau for 7 cents, or buy a strand of similar sponges, fresh from a sand reef, for 60 cents. That is one reason why so many are taken home by sagacious tourists as "trifles I picked up in Nassau."

A sponge famine would be more disastrous in the Bahamas than the August hurricane. The trade amounts to more than $250,000 annually, and is more important than the fruit-growing industry. Over 5,000,000 sponges are annually dragged from the sea. The dusky anties who preside over Bahama kitchens use the articles as dish rags and towels.

Sponges are used impartially for household articles in ways sometimes startling. It is a novel sensation when sitting down in a chair to descend luxuriously, to be sure, but unexpectedly and precipitately, and "Key West." The climax is capped when one of the dainty fingers of a cup sponge is offered as a cigar-holder.

The prominence of the sponge industry is shown by the cargo list of a steamer which left Nassau for New York. The vessel is the Clenches, and the purser's entries were 1334 boxes sponge 39 bales sponge clips, 42 barrels of oranges, 1089 crates tomatoes, 19 crates cassava, 24 crates peas, 2 crates egg plants, 2 barrels yams, 2 boxes preserves, 4 barrels sea shells, 48 head green turtle, $354 in specie and six packages.

As long cranes are unwieldy, sponges just below the surface are generally safe from the efforts of the fishermen. The water from the Hole in the Wall passage, a channel dividing the high ocean plate of the Bahamas deep. In many places 600 fathoms of line have been run out without reaching bottom. Sponging vessels en route to Nassau are occasionally wrecked, and old Abaco salts are fond of saying that there are 100,000 strands of sponges "off soundings" in the passage.

LOVE AND VAGRANCY.

Strange Honeymoon of a North Carolina Couple.

A couple from Davie county, N. C., Mr. and Mrs. Coon, who were married a few weeks ago, are roaming through that State begging bread. Coon at the time was a pauper in the Davie county poorhouse and his wife was the cook. He said he paid a Baptist preacher $2, all the money he had, to marry them. Their first bridal tour was to Morganton to visit a cousin of Mrs. Coon, who was there in the asylum, and thence they tramped to Hickory, where they applied to the authorities to let them rest awhile in the poorhouse of that county.

Coon seems matter-of-fact in his views of the holy passion. Being asked if it was a case of love at first sight, he said: "No, I allers did like Sally; she made sich powerful good fritters."

"And I liked him becase he loved 'em," smiled Mrs. Coon.

They can live on love and a cracker a day.—Chicago Times.

Repatriate of a Rothschild.

The following story of the late Baron James de Rothschild, has recently found its way into print, for the first time, I believe, and as it shows his bonhomie and ready wit, I give it. A well-known French traveler, on his return from Fiji, happened to call on the baron, and the latter, always on the lookout for information, pressed him for matters of interest concerning that country. After much hesitation, the visitor at length remarked that there were no Jews and no pigs absolutely whatever in the island. "Let us go there together, dear boy," quickly answered Sir James. "We shall make a fortune."
