It is clear and very cool, the mercury dropping 24 degrees in a few hours. Last night was the hardest of all on one hundred and fifty families in Pittsburg who had to move out of their shanty boats. Their floating homes were in a lull shep when the river fell yesterday, and not fit for occupancy.

A NAMELESS SHIP IN CHINA SEA.
Every Man on Board Dead, Yet a Voice Hails the Rescuer.
Boston Commercial Bulletin.
"You see, messmates," says the old quartermaster, as he seats himself comfortable again, "the sea-faring life we meet with many rough cuts that are out of all ordinary calculation, and what them as haven't been to sea wouldn't hardly believe. There was that ship we fell in with in the China Sea—that was an odd thing, that was."
It was only just after daylight in the morning watch as some one sung out "Sail ahead." But it wasn't much of a sail, for there was only one mast—the foremast—standing, but a big ship going steady afore the wind, with her foretopsail set, but not hauled taut, but all flapping like. Well, we see as there was no one aboard, or it so be there was, they didn't know how to manage her. So when we'd run down a little ahead of her we lowered a boat, and I was one of the boat's crew went aboard; and as we pulled up to her we could see nobody on deck, but only heered a dog barking; and when we went up the side, sure enough there was a half-starved dog a sitting upon the body of a man; and when he sees us he sets up a dreadful howling, but still he didn't seem displeased to see us, but threw back his ears, though he looked dreadful melancholy and down in the mouth. But the curious thing was to see the number of rats that was running about the decks, for the ship was water-logged, and the rats was driven up from below and obliged to shift for themselves.
"Well, there were three more dead bodies lying about; and when we come to look at them the rats had eat most of their faces and necks, and ripped open their jackets to get at their flesh elsewhere, but the corpse as the dog was sitting on they hadn't been able to touch; for, you see, the rats, they lived on the dead bodies, and the dog he lived upon the rats—so we supposed by the carcasses of one on 'em as lying near him. And such rats as they were I never see—a most as big as half-grown rabbits, and so tame that they didn't make no account of us. You see, they'd been so familiar with the bodies aboard that they looked upon us as so many sheep or cattle, or what not, as was come aboard for their live stock."
"Well, we tried to get into the cabin, but that was full of water, and so was everything below decks; and there was no name upon the stera, or we couldn't make it out where the ship was from, or where bound; and we searched the Captain's pockets, but couldn't find no memorandum nor name, only a love-letter sewed up in a piece of oil-shin inside his jacket, and signed "Sarah." And when we was thinking what was best to be done, whether to throw the bodies overboard or what, a voice, as seemed close to us, sing out in a curious low tone, more like a female's than a male's, "snip-anooy, there! what ship is that?"
"Well, that started us 'most out of our senses; for we couldn't see nothing, and the bodies on deck was dead we knew by reason their faces was eat; and says one of the men, "It must be the dog," says he; "he've been a thinking over to his self, all he've heered, and he've been and taught his self to speak, and says like, 'The dog, answering the hail like, 'Zenobia, 600 tons, John Sham master, of and from London, bound for Singapore, with a general cargo,' but the dog made no answer to that; and while we was a wondering what it could be, the same kind of a voice sung out again, 'Steward, glass of grog!' Well, now, we knew as this couldn't be the dog, because they don't take no grog. Then says another man, 'I'm much deceived if that're voice don't come out of the mainmast;' so we goes to the mainmast—that is, the stump of it—and out of the middle of the ropes and halyards that was hanging about the pins the voice comes out again and says: 'O, sweet Polly! No higher, keep her rap full!'"
"Well, we soon cast off the ropes, and what should we see but a five gray-haired setting in a kind of a nest she'd made, and looking as if there wasn't nothing the matter with her!"
"Well, we have over the dead bodies and left the rats to feed upon themselves, but we brought off the parrot and the dog, though he wouldn't leave the body till we'd taken the jacket off and laid it down in the boat for him, and then he came willin' enough; and Captain Sham took the dog and bird and brought them home to his old woman, and perhaps they're both alive now."

That Highway of Nations.
The broad Atlantic, is ever a stormy thorough fare. Yet blow the winds ever so fiercely, and ride the waves ever so loftily, seamen must man the good ships, tourists will brave the passage, and commercial travelers and buyers must visit this centres of foreign trade and manufacture. That atrocious malady, seasickness, together with colicky pains and much inward uneasiness is often endured when Hostetter's Stomach Bitters would have fortified the voyagers against them. Sea captains, and in fact all old salts and veteran travelers are acquainted with the protective value of this estimable preventive and remedy, and are rarely unprovided with it. Emigrants to the far West should use it as a safeguard against malaria. Seek the aid of the Bitters for dyspepsia, constipation, liver complaint, kidney troubles, and all ailments that impair the vital powers and vigorous action of the human power.

NEW YORK, July 11.—A remarkable story, involving the marriage of a father to his own daughter, was made public yesterday. The parties are Polish Hebrews and the man's name is said to be Isaac Waldorff. He is a merchant on the east side. He was married in Germany about twenty years ago, but after two months he left his wife and came to this country. He prospered in business, married a new wife and was left a widower a few years ago with three children. Last year he met a Hebrew girl in distress on Broadway, who had just landed and had wandered away from Castle Garden. She said her name was Mina Sterling, and Waldorff took her to his home and gave her a night's lodging. As she showed a fondness for his children he dismissed his house-keeper and engaged her.
A few months later he married her. She kept in communication with her mother and recently wrote for the latter to come and visit her. When the mother arrived she recognized her daughter's husband as the man who had married her in his youth and was the father of her child, now his wife.
Waldorff was in utter ignorance of the fact that he had a child in Germany and of the identity of his wife. He sought counsel of the rabbi of his congregation and the matter was referred to Grand Rabbi Joseph, who arrived in this country a few days ago.
