THE RIVER AND HARBOR BILL.

Since the passage of the river and harbor bill, the principal anxiety through the country has been whether Cleveland will sign it or not.

The bill appropriates $22,750,000, which is about three weeks' income of the United States Government. It distributes the money with a fair degree of impartiality, and will, if it becomes a law, prove of great benefit to many portions of the United States.

Mr. Cleveland will not, we think, risk his chances of election, such as they are, by vetoing this bill. He must know that the demand for the passage of such a bill is very general, and that the people of the United States, in case of his disapproving the bill, will recognize in his action only an obstinacy and self-will which ill-befits the President of the United States.

But if he signs this bill now will he and his friends explain the veto or, rather, the failure to approve, the former bill? The law stood then as it stands now, in giving the President, through the heads of departments, the entire control of the expenditure of the money so appropriated, and if he consents to assume the responsibility now, why should he have shrunk from it a year ago? If he decides now that it is right and proper to expend $22,000,000 on rivers and harbors, why was it wrong and improper to expend a much less sum for similar purposes a year ago?

The true answer to these interrogations probably is that Mr. Cleveland made a mistake, and has found that instead of making political capital for himself by his former course, his action in vetoing the former bill, worked injury to his prospects of re-election.

A PECULIAR kind of corporation is reported to have been organized in New York. It is called the Depositors' Guarantee Company of America. Its object is to guarantee and indemnify depositors in national and state banks against loss. It is organized with a capital of $7,000,000. The company will have branch offices in various cities of the union. Its directors include President Norwin Green, of the Western Union telegraph company, President I. L. James, of the Lincoln National bank, President E. L. Rayson, of the National Bank of Deposit of New York, and others. One thousand prominent banks have signified their intention to become stockholders and having their depositors guaranteed by this company. These banks have agreed to pay the company one-fifth of 1 per cent., making a yearly income of $500,000 over the estimated expenses. No bank will be guaranteed that is not a stockholder. If the object which is avowed can be accomplished without too much expense, the organization will be of great practical benefit; but if it eventually proves, as it is very liable to prove, that the real motive is only to get another bite at the tempting apple—the almighty money king—then it were better that it never were formed.

The pros and cons of the smoking habit have been and will continue to be the subject of discussion and no matter how much testimony as to the deleteriousness of the habit may be piled up, the habit will continue, and probably increase. The Pall Mall Gazette has been investigating and concludes that it is very unusual to find in a great smoker a healthy appetite for plain food, and any opinions may be had in any number as to dyspepsia caused by smoking. To whatever degree the habit affects the nervous organization, it appears to be certain that the process which is regarded as soothing is really destructive. Sir Benjamin Brodie must have known what he was writing about when he declared that "the poison of tobacco acts by destroying the function of the brain." In a Russian hospital in 1866 a Dr. Chodnowski took the liberty of examining by means of a pump the digestive powers of six smoking and as many non-smoking soldiers, and he recorded that "in the former the time required for digestion averaged seven hours, while in the case of the non-smokers the mean period of digestion was only six hours." With the present enormous consumption of tobacco the social consequences, apart from those concerning the bodily and mental powers of the consumers are important.

To any one who has been obliged to pass through the Chinese quarters in Portland the significance of the Telegram's growl will be apparent when it says: "It is said that the odor of the skunk is a powerful disinfectant and preserver. If this is the case the importation of a few skunks for the noisome Chinese quarters in this city might be beneficial. It would also improve the odors thereabout."

Two Ways. Choose Which!

There are two ways of doing what Nature sometimes does incompletely, namely, to relieve the bowels. One is to swallow a drastic purgative which evacuates profusely, abruptly and with pain, the other is to take Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the effect of which is not violent, but sufficiently thorough, and which does not grip the intestines. If the first is selected, the person employing it need not expect permanent benefit, and he cannot hope to escape the debilitating reaction which leaves the organ as bad or worse off than before. If, on the other hand, he resorts to the Bitters, he can rely upon the restoration of a regular habit of body, consequent upon a renewal of a healthful tone in the intestinal canal. Besides healthfully relaxing the bowels, the Bitters arouses a dormant liver, imparts a beneficial stimulus to the function of the kidneys, and restores the early twinges of rheumatism, a tendency to gout, and mania in all its forms.
