QUESTION OF LONGEVITY.

Writers and investigators are beginning to consider the matter of length of years, which in past ages has apparently been the greatest desideratum of human endeavor, in its true light. They are now discussing whether or not the added years that may be gained by special endeavor are really worth the cost, or are in fact desirable. As a means of longevity, Dr. Oswald says: "Physical exercise, out-door sports, abstinence from toxic stimulants and premature incontinence, frugality, in the original sense that implied a predilection for a mainly vegetable diet, and the love of mirth and harmless recreations, generally suffice to keep disease at bay, though there is also a deep significance in Goethe's remark that perfect health of mind and body depends upon the regular, though not necessarily exclusive, pursuit of some practical occupation. Brain workers, he thought, should follow some mechanical by-trade, and counteract the one-sided tendencies of their study by mechanical labor, say, in an amateur carpenter shop, or a private smithy, a la E. J. Burritt; or, better yet, on a little farm, with a bit of live stock and a thriving orchard. Disappointment, oft repeated, undermines health as effectually as protracted physical pain, and for the worry of the vexations incident to the complex and precarious pursuits of modern civilization, there is, indeed, no better specific than the peace of a rustic garden home. Xenophon's hunting-lodge, Felix Sylla's cabbage garden, Erasmus' greenhouse, the patriarch of Ferney's home-made eden, with its pear-tree nurseries and refuge settlement, and even the woodlands and wood-piles of Hawarden may have enabled their proprietors to outlive the rancor of their enemies, and in all secular pursuits the art of survival is a chief secret of success. Other-worldliness may renounce those pursuits, and in a narrower sphere of physical enjoyment the vital organism may fulfill its functions in a day as completely as in any multiple of days, but in the world of progress and social ideals only the hope of long life, or its equivalent in fame, gives existence the value of its highest purpose."

In addition to learning in the Northwest first term begins September 1, 1888. Address: THOS. VAN COVY, President, Willamette University, Salem, Oregon.

Possessing the fishing excursion which Mr. Cleveland recently took upon a friend's yacht was undertaken for the purpose of consuming time enough to let the river and harbor bill become a law without the responsibility of signing it. If such proves to be the case we are still in favor of giving the president credit for its becoming a law even in that manner. Small favors thankfully received, large ones in proportion.

The Pacific Express, the alleged organ of the prohibition party of Oregon, has raised his piping voice against Harrison and Morton and against protection to American industries. That paper cheerfully announces that, "We are doing our best to defeat Harrison and elect Fisk," and the republican-prohibitionists of the state are beginning to ponder on the question as to who that journal is trying to elect. Fisk being out of the race.

ALBANY should be made a terminal shipping point. When goods can be shipped to this city by the car load direct without being reshipped at Portland, the jobbing trade of local dealers will be increased. A movement is on foot among business men to enlist the influence of the Board of Trade to secure this.

CHICAGO hoodlums have recently engaged in the pastime of horse stealing, disposing of their booty right under the noses of the police. Their very audacity shielded them for a time, but the usual result finally followed.

It is officially announced that work will be resumed at once on the Oregon Pacific railroad. This will assist in making lively times in Albany this fall.

Make no Mistake.

By dispelling the symptoms so often mistaken for consumption, Santa Abie has brought gladness to many a household. By its prompt use for breaking up the cold that too often develops into that fatal disease, thousands can be saved from an untimely grave. You make no mistake by keeping a bottle of this pleasant remedy in your house. California Catarrh Cure is equally effective in eradicating all traces of the Nasal Catarrh. Both of these wonderful California remedies are sold and warranted by Foschay & Mason.
