EDITORIAL NOTES.

LABOR employed for the purpose of manufacturing Belgian brick is authentically stated to be paid only twenty cents per day. Those brick can very easily be substituted for the rock and gravel that are annually brought to this coast as ballast in ships under charter to carry wheat to Liverpool or other European markets. How would our brick makers like the competition with 20 cent per day labor, which free trade would bring about.

To those who are not inside of the organizations, the methods pursued by some of the trades unions will appear peculiar to say the least. The supposition of course is that it is all right, but certainly it is rather difficult to understand the whyfore and wherefore. Take, for instance, the action of the carpenters union in Portland, in the matter of the new exposition building in process of erection. The contractors are bound to complete the building by the 1st of October, or suffer a forfeit of $200 per day for every day thereafter that is occupied in its completion. The Union established nine hours as a days work and $3.00 as regular wages. The contractors acceded to those regulations, but desired to put in extra labor in order to get through in time so as not to suffer any forfeit, and paid $3.50 for ten hours work. The Union held a meeting and decided that extra work cannot be allowed now while the days are long and the weather fine, but that after while when days are shorter and the rains comes on, extra work may be put in to complete the building. It certainly looks as if such action is not only arbitrary but totally uncalled for.

The bringing of a big log raft from Nova Scotia to New York, on the second attempt has proven successful, and is likely to revolutionize the lumber transportation business on the sea and lake coasts. The raft referred to was 592 feet long, fifty-four feet beam, thirty-eight feet deep, and drew twenty-three feet of water. It comprises 214,000 spruce logs, valued at about $50,000. To transport such a mass of timber by ordinary methods would require over forty lumber schooners, and would cost $30,000. The successful passage of this log ship from Nova Scotia is regarded by lumbermen as a great innovation.

It will be good news to all who are interested in the welfare of this coast to learn that the river and harbor bill, with its liberal appropriations, has become a law. No thanks, however, are due to President Cleveland, as he refused to approve it, allowing it to become a law without his signature. The same mistaken party policy that induced him to veto the bill of last year by refusing to sign it, causes him to allow the present bill—with its appropriation just twice as large as the former—to become a law by similar action.

The irrepressible showman P. T. Barnum, bobs up with some new advertising scheme every other day. The latest is shadowed in the statement that he has decided to convert his elegant residence, "Waldemere" into a seminary for young ladies. The plan will be to remove, and remodel the mansion and place it on the edge of Sea-Side Park.

From complaints this year, of its being the coldest on record. Northern Italy is reported to be so short in crops that destitution will result, and snow storms have occurred in England.

In speaking of the difference between the action of members of trades and professions, as compared to the treatment that some of the editorial fraternity mete out to their fellow editors, President Jones, of the National Editorial Association says: "How different with the journalist? No need of the beleaguering hosts of outside enemies to drag him down and cover him with want and defamation and piercing ridicule. Members of his own profession will address themselves with 'ghastly glee' to that shameful task, while the world of outsiders look upon a spectacle of bull-baiting and points the finger of scorn at a profession whose members betray their opportunity of high leadership for the miserable satisfaction of downing a fancied rival in the struggle for existence."

The difference in conception of values is illustrated by two items brought before a St. Paul court. One was the suing of a railroad company, by an administrator, for the death of a citizen, supposed to have been brought about by the negligence of the company. The other was the suing of the same company by an engineer, for loss of a foot while acting as temporary brakeman. For the loss of life the amount sued for was five thousand while for the foot it was twenty thousand.

Paris and the French people are exercised over the report that Germany and Italy had worked up a conspiracy to take from France part of its Egyptian possessions and some of the islands of the sea that now belongs to France. Probably they are scared more than there is any prospect of being hurt.

A BASE ball player at Little Rock, Ark., was killed recently by being hit upon the head with the ball. The American game is a great institution, and the killed, maimed and wounded attest as to its merits.

The project of building a railroad to Mount Hood, with the future intent of a cable line up the mountain, has been promulgated, and is likely to take permanent shape.

It is said that more than five hundred lives were lost, and entire villages destroyed during the recent earthquakes in Japan.
