EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Husbandman says it is not just possible that our own markets are worth more to our people than all the markets of other countries, magnified as they are by false economists?

The news from Africa tells of the murder of Major Bartlett, by his native carriers through the instigation of Tippoo Tib, and it is now thought that perhaps Henry M. Stanley has met the same fate.

DR. TANNER, who made quite a sensation, several years ago, by going without food, claims to have discovered that human beings can hibernate like animals that lay dormant all winter. He says the animals do not use their lungs. If he can establish his theory he will start a very economical way of living for half of the year.

SHOOTING the girl for not accepting the proffered offer of marriage continues to be the fashion, the latest case being in Indiana where Sargeant Gruff shot Miss Gertrude Downey, and made feeble attempts to shoot himself. His failure to shoot himself should have been made sure by some other man of nerve.

GOLDENSON'S schemes to procure the burial of his body by the side of his victim seems to have miscarried. It is evident that his conversion to Catholicism was premeditated towards that end. But it failed. His baptism into the Catholic church procured the denial of burial in Jewish cemeteries, and the refusal of his parents to allow the Catholic funeral service led to the exclusion of the remains from Catholic cemeteries; so the body was finally deposited on a purchased lot in an Odd Fellows cemetery. It is hopeful that the final exit has been reached.

The editorial writer for the Evening Telegram pugnently touches off the recent case in this city of fine paying for shooting Mongolian pheasants thusly: "A Linn county man shot a bird a few days ago, which being found in his possession, cost him $50. The fowl was one of those pesky Chinese pheasants, noted for their capacity to eat wheat and flaunt their feathers in the eyes of the owners of the harvest with impunity. Of course the gunner paid his fine cheerfully. A man always feels particularly happy under such circumstances, and can, with difficulty, refrain from presenting the officious informer with a leather medal, in the form of a whiplash, for his disinterested services to the state." Somebody has said that the way to repeal obnoxious laws is to enforce them. Perhaps the incident referred to will lend aid in that direction.

WHATEVER may be the belief in regard to the infliction of the death penalty, the opinion seems to be unanimous among the editorial commentators upon the hanging of Goldenson, the San Francisco murderer, that a just expiation of his crime was accorded him. The Alta of San Francisco and the Telegram of Portland each express the abhorrence of the public for the heinous crime he committed and disapproval of the leniency that allowed him to so fulsomely display the murdered girl's portrait upon the gallows. The Alta said: "Alexander Goldenson, who was hanged yesterday, was a young ruffian who riddled the punishment of the gallows on him. His conduct since the day of his crime, when he wanted to take to life of a child whose youth and sex alike appealed to all men for protection, has been brutal in the extreme. His every action showed impetuosity, and an inordinate desire to play a mingled part of maudlin sentiment and mock heroics. It is to be regretted that he was allowed to make his final taking off the medium for a display in keeping with his whole line of action since his arrest. The idea of this cold-blooded murderer standing on the gallows, carrying in one hand a picture of the innocent young girl whom he first slew and afterwards traduced, and in the other a miniature American flag, is revolting. This gratification of the indecent whims of a common murderer transformed into a farce what ought to have been regarded as the most solemn vindication of the law. It ought not to have been permitted." The Telegram's words were equally strong and pointed. We quote: "The deed itself was sufficiently execrable to close the door of intelligent sympathy forever against the monster who perpetrated it, but not content with this he, in the vain hope of securing his release from prison, concocted a most slanderous story about his victim, the dead child whom he had shot down like a dog in the street, which he afterward acknowledged to be false. His show of affection for the girl, as displayed by his dying with her photograph in his hand, and with great ostentation kissing it upon the scaffold, adds to the contempt and disgust that decent and humane people everywhere must feel for such a human cur. That the mother or other relatives of the murdered girl should have permitted her slayer to have and keep her picture with him in prison is inexplicable."
