OREGONIAN RAILWAY LEASE.

The Case to be Decided on the 23d Instant

The News says: The celebrated suit of the Oregonian Railway Co. (limited) vs. the O. R. & N. Co. will come up in the United States supreme court on the 23d instant. If the plaintiff wins the suit, the O. R. & N. Co. will be compelled to take charge of the lease and carry out its provisions for the ninety-nine years, as provided for by the lease. If the defendants win, the road will be sold to the Southern Pacific. It is thought that the O. R. & N. Co. will win on this point. It is necessary that a lease of this kind have the sanction of the state legislature. This was not done, and it is claimed that in this point alone a decision will be given in favor of the O. R. N. & Co.

In this case it will be remembered that the O. R. & N. Co. leased the Oregonian Railway lines for ninety-nine years, and after a short time ceased to operate the road. Since then the Oregonian Railway Co. has periodically sued the O. R. & N. Co. in the United States court, and as regularly secured a verdict for rent.

Killed in a Saloon Row.

The Burns, Grant county, Herald, contains the following account of the murder of W. H. Brown, a former resident of this city, and a brother of Gen. Mart V. Brown, deceased, former editor of the Democrat: "About 6 o'clock, Saturday evening, Sept. 8th, in the course of an altercation between two residents of Harney Valley, Wm. Page and Wm. H. Brown, in C. M. Caldwell's saloon in Burns, the latter was shot dead in the presence of witnesses. Page was arrested on a charge of murder by W. W. Johnson, deputy sheriff, though he had acknowledged himself the doer of the deed a few minutes before by giving himself into custody of a bystander, Joe Wooley. J. C. Wooley, a witness to the crime, testified as follows, which shows how the murder happened: I was present at Mr. Caldwell's saloon when the shooting commenced. Heard there was a fuss between Brown and Page. Brown came to me by Byrd's stable and said that Bill Page was going to lick him. I told him I guess not, that he (Brown), was too old a man to fight. I asked him what the trouble was. He said, 'nothing much, but Bill Page thinks he can run a bluff on me.' He (Brown) pulled out a knife and said, 'I'll stick that into Page before sun-up in the morning.' I went into Caldwell's saloon to play billiards with Mr. Armor. Page says to Brown, 'come and take a drink.' Clark says to Page, 'I'm waiting for you to go home.' Brown says to Page, 'I can lick you from Dan to Beersheba.' Page says there is no use for us to fuss, for there is nothing between us, or something to that effect. Brown says 'by G— I will lick you,' and struck Page. Page fell, and while on his back, with his left hand under him, he shot. Brown was going toward him and in about five feet of him, and I ran across to the southeast part of the building and didn't see any more. Went out the first time I had a chance."

Walked Out.

A couple of hilarious individuals, who were calabossed on Sunday for having too much tangle foot, relieved themselves from durance vile by prying open the calaboose door and struck out for the Oregon Pacific railroad at a two-forty gait. They had passes to the front, but did not stop to use them until they were clear of the city limits. Two-and-a-half for repairs to the cooler was all the damages.

Explanation.

What is this "nervous trouble" with which so many are now afflicted? If you will remember a few years ago the word Malaria was comparatively unknown—to-day it is as common as any word in the English language, yet this word covers only the meaning of another word used by our forefathers in times past. So it is with nervous diseases, as they and Malaria are intended to cover what our grandfathers called Biliousness, and all are caused by troubles that arise from a diseased condition of the Liver which in performing its functions finding it can not dispose of the bile through the ordinary channels is compelled to pass it off through the system, causing nervous troubles, Malaria, Bilious Fever, etc. You who are suffering can well appreciate a cure. We recommend Green's August Flower. Its cures are marvelous.
