PURE FOOD SUPPLIES.

In every department of husbandry it is wise economy to procure the best and the purest that can be had, when raising or preparing articles for the market.

He who invariably places upon the market the best and purest of the products of the farm, whether of fruits, grains, meats or vegetables, is planting for himself a future reputation that will bring good returns.

There is no branch of the government service closer to the people than the postoffice department.

bill before the pending treaty had been either signed or rejected by China, leaving it to the republicans of the senate to correct by voting the bill down.

ABOUT WOOLEN MILLS.

The following significant language used by Robert Middleton, president of the Union, N. Y., woolen mills, brings out an important fact generally overlooked in connection with free wool.

"I would be pleased if some of our Southern statesmen, politicians or newspaper writers would tell us how the woolen mill can be run so as not to lose money with one-fourth of its plant standing idle.
