NATIONAL REPUBLICAN TICKET. FOR PRESIDENT, BENJAMIN HARRISON, OF INDIANA.

THE STORY BRIEFLY TOLD. At the next National Anniversary of our independence it will be just a century since Washington signed the first federal tariff act.

This tariff, modified but slightly (excepting a temporary increase during the war of 1812), was continued until 1816. Important industries were slowly vitalized.

In 1816, through the ascendancy of the democratic party, this tariff was repealed, and one with the lowest possible duties replaced it.

The tariff of 1824 restored national prosperity. Free trade in 1832 cancelled again values by its tariff "for revenue only," strangling both industry and commerce.

In 1842, exhausted by experiment, misrule and free trade, the country restored the Whig party, with a dominant policy of protection, to power.

The South, seeing its "peculiar institution" threatened by the wonderful prosperity of the North, and the probability of its loss of political supremacy, tyrannized the democratic party into practical serfdom.

In 1857 the free trade South again demanded through the democratic party a lowering of the already low rate of duties. Cotton and tobacco, of which the South held a monopoly in the world's market, placed it beyond competition and it remained uninjured.

The dispatches tell us that Otto Osten, a naturalized American, has been made the victim of gross mistreatment by Russia. He has forwarded a petition to Secretary of State Bayard at Washington, asking damages from the Russian government for false imprisonment and other injuries.

The schooner Pet was dashed to pieces on the rocks outside of the Golden Gate Sunday. The captain, his wife, and three seamen were lost.

The yellow fever scourge continues in the south. In Tennessee the state militia has been called out for quarantine duty.
