WHY ENGLAND WANTS FREE TRADE.

The police statistics for Scotland just published show that the number of homeless wanderers in that country known to the police as vagrants has doubled in the last ten years.

As there is no disposition on the part of European government to remove these barriers England finds herself face to face with a problem that she must solve if she would avert social and political dangers that threaten her very existence.

To-day the struggle for existence among English workingmen is fiercer than it has ever been before and there is no prospect of its growing less fierce unless the United States comes to the assistance of John Bull by throwing open to him the best market in the world.

All this, however, would be at the cost of the United States. The sacrifice of American industries would be the price paid for rescuing England from the imminent danger that threatens her from the loss of trade she has suffered through the adoption of the protective system by the civilized nations of the world.
