LOOK AFTER HEALTH.

One of the most important duties of residents of cities and towns is to intelligently look after the sanitary conditions, and guard the general health of the community. Expense and labor should not be spared to make these necessary adjuncts of civilization as perfect as possible. Yet how often do we see them neglected, or criminally disregarded. Popular Science Monthly says that in his census reports Dr. Billings estimates that in the United States 100,000 deaths occur every year from strictly preventable diseases alone. This is unquestionably a very moderate estimate, and, if there are reckoned also twelve cases of serious illness for every death, we see what a great amount of suffering results from ignorance of sanitary principles. But how is this ignorance manifested? Are not our architects competent to deal with the problem of household sanitation? It will be said, perhaps, that it is the province of the architect to direct the entire work of house building and to arrange every detail of the fittings. But it should be considered that the science of sanitation is broad and comprehensive. Years of study and of experience in sanitary work are necessary for a proper understanding of the subject. It is perhaps, unfortunate that there is so little in the severe and unpleasant details of this work to commend it to those whose tastes have led them to the study of the more attractive principles of artistic construction and the science of esthetics. An architect should have the soul of an artist, but there are few men whose nature is so broad as to combine truly artistic tastes with a love for the details of difficult mechanical work, involving the necessity for undertaking comprehensive and scientific research. It is the province of the engineer to engage in an occupation of this kind. His natural inclinations and his rigid training in scientific pursuits fit him especially for the directions of matters relating to drainage and sewage disposal. Every city requires work and thought in that direction and especially is that the case with our growing and at present prosperous city. There are many points that come under the head of health that should be carefully considered, and promptly acted upon.

But the senate and house have pretty well made up their minds that there will be no adjournment of the present session of congress but merely a recess from October 25 to November 12. The present session has already been prolonged to be the longest in American history. The longest preceding session was that of 1859, the year of the Missouri compromise, which was adjourned at noon September 30. Constructively the session of 1868, following the impeachment proceedings against President Johnson, was longer, the adjournment having taken place November 10, but as matter of fact congress took a six weeks' rest from July 27, and never afterwards had a quorum or attempted to transact business.

The cable tells the story of the robbery, in Paris, of Mrs. Stevens, an American lady, of $100,000 worth of jewelry. Seized her right if she was foolish enough to carry about with her that amount of the show article, she deserved to lose it.

The present congress is making a record without a precedent, at least for length. It has already exceeded the limits and seems likely to continue on an indefinite

BLAINE has been interviewed concerning the campaign outlook. "New York," he says, "is a large manufacturing state and will assuredly vote for protection. The same case is found in Connecticut and New Jersey. The closest state of the North will be Indiana, but I think Harrison's popularity and interests of the working people will give a good majority there. My opinion is that Harrison and Morton will carry every Northern State so will be California, Oregon and Nevada."

The fanciful story of a Kansas judge discharging a woman from custody, who was brought before him for being clothed in man's attire contrary to law, illustrates one fact at least. That is the principle is sound, if not legal, as enunciated by the judge, that well intentioned, honest people should not be annoyed by legal prosecution on account of the apparel they may choose to wear.

A novel electric railway is undergoing construction in a suburb of St. Paul, Minn. The railroad is an elevated structure and the cars are hung below it close to the street level. They hang from sets of wheels, taking their power from the tracks, which are charged with electricity. A speed of from eight to ten miles an hour is claimed for the cars.

MRS. CLARA S. FOLTZ, the lady lawyer of California, and eloquent lecturer, is stamping that state for the Democratic candidates. The force of her arguments will be somewhat obstructed by the knowledge that she is ardently republican in belief and is talking against her convictions for play.

Three inches of snow on the level was the record in different sections of the New England states on Sunday. Oregon was very comfortable on that day, thank you.
